The Fading Year
Atheism Dies Out
What Is a Blessing
Talkies Will Spread English

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

THE old year creeping to its end, the days, like an old man's breathing, getting shorter.

Yesterday was the year's shortest day, the Sun visible only nine hours.

SEVERE earthquake in Bulgaria. More than nine-tenths of the people on earth do not know where Bulgaria is or that it is a country.

In Portugal, where the world's worst earthquake happened, there is a better feeling between church and state.

The young Portuguese republic came in on a wave of atheism, as did the French revolution

But atheism ebbs, as men grapple with difficulties and Portugal now permits the reopening of many churches, closed in anger. Religion may be taught in Portugal schools.

WHAT are the great events of the dying year, 1929?

The worst, for many, was Wall Street's upheaval. But, if it cures them of gambling, turns them toward productive work, it will have been a blessing.

THE real worst event, barring intervention by Providence, will be America's entry into the world court.

No individual in the administration would submit his own affairs to a court, foreign and hostile.

However, 1931 may see us out of the court; 1932 will surely find us back on an American basis.

AS TO the greatest blessing of 1929, all depends on what a genuine blessing is. Carlyle put to his countrymen this question: "Would you sooner, of your possessions, part with Shakespeare or with India?"

Thirty million Hindus, boiled down, would not be worth Shakespeare's little finger. And all the gold that Britain will ever get from Asia could not equal Shakespeare in value.

IT TAKES 100 years and more to decide on values.

But the practical development of talking, moving pictures is surely an event of this year that will stand out in history.

That invention will make it possible to establish one language throughout the world.

AND as America controls in moving pictures, possessing almost a world monopoly, the English language will spread more rapidly than it has ever done.

When Germany seized a big slice, in the partion of Poland and wished to Germanize the new territory, Goethe advised sending in actors speaking German, in popular plays.

MEANWHILE, picture makers are puzzled. They must have sound, to please England and America. Other nations cannot understand it.

They will have to guess the meaning, and learn English gradually, as our aristocrat wearers of diamond necklaces have learned Italian and French at the opera.

APPLETON & CO., print The Earth Tub, story of Mongolians invading America by a short cut, through the earth.

Rumblings under Manhattan Island, mistaken for earthquake disturbance, are found to be the work of Asiatics, tunnelling to New York.

NO DANGER in that suggestion. Our sun's interior, due to pressure, is fixed by scientists at 50,000,000 degrees centigrade.

Heat at the earth's center would melt marble, and be thousands of degrees too hot even for Asiatics.

Some power company should tap that central earth heat. It would supply power for millions of years. British engineers say the necessary well, down to intense inner heat, could be dug, lined, and power started for about $35,000,000.

The young Rockefellers might try the experiment, making old-fashioned oil well diggings seem trivial.

IF ASIA ever comes to teach us a lesson in preparedness and racial equality, it will be with 10,000 flying machines making tunnels through the air.

Such a man as Genghis Khan, Tamerlane, or Atilla, taking us by surprise, in the midst of our peace twaddle, might easily educate us as thoroughly as Alexander educated the Persians, swollen, like ourselves, with wealth and conceit.

PROF. ALBERT A. MICHELSON, at 77 years of age, drops his work as head of the Physics Department in Chicago University. More than half a century ago, graduating from Annapolis, Michelson decided to study and teach science.

EXPLAINING to a class of young men how the speed of light is measured, he gave them a practical demonstration. Then he notified scientific bodies that their accepted measurement was erroneous by many miles per second.

That is only one of his many magnificent achievements

Michelson plans not to stop work, but to work harder than ever.

That tireless brain, inheriting mental activity that dates back thousands of years, will cease work only when Michelson stops living.

May that happen not sooner than 30 years hence.

RECORD JAM FOUGHT HERE BY TRAINMEN

Restoration of Disarranged Schedules Expected Soon Despite Weather Handicap.

Unprecedented Holiday Rush Of Mail and Passengers With Frigid Wave Blamed.

Relief from the record railroad tieup here, which, coupled with the bitter cold, caused discomfort and inconvenience to thousands, was believed in sight late yesterday by railroad officials.

Railroad officials said it was the heaviest traffic in local history.

Despite prospect of continued cold weather, spokesmen of the different railroad indicated trains would be running on nearly normal schedules for the Christmas rush tomorrow and Tuesday

TRAINS TO MOVE ON TIME

"Barring fresh storms and fog, we think we will be able to move every train into and out of the Pittsburgh terminal practically on time, Monday and Tuesday," said E. W. Smith, vice president of the Pennsylvania railroad.

The Pittsburgh and Lake Erie and the Baltimore and Ohio railroads will be running on schedule, unless snowstorms occur, representatives said.

Until late last night the Pennsylvania Railroad had not been able to extricate itself from the maze of traffic congestion. Through trains were arriving anywhere from 35 minutes to four hours late and through trains leaving the station were likewise delayed.

SHUTTLE SERVICE

The greatest delay was on the western roads. Trains from Chicago and St. Louis were four hours late. On the Allegheny Valley Division, the Buffalo train was 1 hour and 55 minutes late. New York trains were reported 35 minutes late and from Philadelphia 1 hour and 35 minutes.

Shuttle service for nearby towns operated last night between East Liberty and points east; on the Panhandle and Monongahela Divisions to and from Fourth avenue and on the Fort Wayne Division to and from Federal street.

The station was crowded during the evening with passengers awaiting trains to take them to their destination.

The cold weather, the heaviest Christmas parcel post business in the railroad's history and the increased demand for passenger

Doll Lady Near End of Gifts to Children Here

THE Doll Lady distribution is nearing the end. It was originally started as a pre-Christmas affair and it was not intended to extend beyond the holiday. The Sun-Telegraph has been swamped with orders and its forces are working day and night to verify subscriptions so that every little girl who turned in her 12 orders before Saturday night will be assured of getting her doll before Christmas.

The Sun-Telegraph, notwithstanding the inability of the makers to supply the dolls as fast as they were wanted, believes that it has enough on hand to take care of every little girl who has a doll coming to her.

Bandits Drop Tacks, Caught In Own Trap

Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 21. TWO men entered a bank at Rivera, a suburb, today, levelling pistols at two girl clerks and the cashier.

"We'll shoot the girls if you don't hand over the cash."

"Sorry, boys," said T. H. Tieskoetter, the cashier, "but the money all is locked in the vault and I can't get it."

The men fled. Tieskoetter rushed to the directors' meeting. The board adjourned and commandeered automobiles.

The robbers' car swerved into an alley and the fleeing men spread carpet tacks to halt pursuit.

But the alley was blind. The pair surrendered, giving their names as E. S. Cowen, 37, Highland Park, and Raphael N. Palacio, 30, Belvidere Gardens.

"Just like a movie," Helen Russell and Imogene Elliott, the clerks, said.

TUNNEY SUITS ABOUT TO END

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Dec. 21.—(AP.)—Conferences between counsel now in progress have given rise to reports that the $500,000 alienation of affections suit of John J. Fogarty, of Fort Worth, Tex., against James J. (Gene) Tunney, retired heavyweight boxer, might be taken from the trial list of the Fairfield County Civil Superior Court within the next two weeks. This seemed today as likely action also in the suit of Katherine King Fogarty for alleged damages for breach of promise which she brought against Tunney.

Charles J. Martin, counsel for Fogarty, who recently went to the Southwest and Middle West to secure depositions in his case, has had conferences with counsel for Tunney as to the future of the case. He said today that he deemed it imprudent in face of "negotiations" to make any statement.

Homer S. Cummings, counsel for Tunney, in court yesterday, after Mrs. Fogarty's counsel had been overruled on a motion to expunge certain portions of Tunney's cross complaint, moved for judgment on the cross complaint.

Today the indications were that next Friday when Mr. Cummings presses his motion before Judge Carl Foster there might be a statement, or a motion, from Martin in the separate action of Fogarty against Tunney, which might mean that both the Fogarty suits against the retired champion would go off the trial docket.

Frick Estate Given $87,000 Tax Refund

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—The Internal Revenue Bureau today announced a tax refund to the estate of Henry C. Frick of $86,907.25. This was made as the result of an over-assessment caused by the exclusion of certain dividends erroneously included in the return filed for the period from the date of death to the end of the taxable year of 1919, since such dividends had been declared previous to the death.

PITT ACCUSED OF STRANGLING FACULTY RIGHTS

Freedom of Speech Repressed By Ambitious Expansion, Educators' Group Charges.

Freedom of speech by University of Pittsburgh instructors is precarious and is held not by right but by the grace of the administration, according to a report on academic freedom at Pitt made by the American Association of University Professors.

The report is contained in the December bulletin of the Association of University Professors. It is based on an investigation made at Pitt last spring by George H. Sabine and Carl Wittke, of Ohio State University following the dissolution of the Pitt Liberal Club by university authorities after it staged the banned Mooney-Billings meeting on the Pitt Campus.

REPRESSION CHARGED

High lights of the report include the following charges:

"The policy practiced at the University of Pittsburgh amounts in effect to a form of repression in which the show of friendliness is made to do the work of force.

"We cannot avoid the conclusion that academic freedom at the University of Pittsburgh, particularly the fredom of utterance which teacher should share with all citizens, is precarious and is held not by right but by the grace of the administration.

"There is no disposition on the part of the faculty at Pitt to deny that the situation of the administration really is difficult. It has adopted a highly ambitious project of expansion, calling for greatly increased endowment; it is dependent for funds part on a state government, in both of which influence and peculiar point of view of certain big business and industrial interests seem to be paramount."

"It is generally agreed by all members of the Pittsburgh faculty with whom we have conversed that there exists in that institution a widespread feeling of insecurity and timidity.

"There are allegations that the trouble this year has been accompanied by discriminations in the granting of salary increases to members of the faculty who were prominently concerned.

DISMISSALS THREATENED

"If a member of the faculty showed himself unamenable to friendly remonstrance, the chancellor admitted he would be finally dismissed. He asserted, moreover, that at the present time there were four or five members to whom this was likely to happen.

"Both in its dealings with individuals and with the faculty as a whole, the administration prefers that relations should be

$50,000,000 DEAL HINTED BY THOMPSON

Princess Takes Spotlight From Him in Court Room; He Returns to New York.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Dec. 21.—Looking forward to the celebration of the merriest Christmas since his boyhood, J. V. Thompson, former coal baron, granted an extension of his parole until March 3, 1930, returned today to New York. Judge J. W. Dawson, acting in the Thompson contempt case in Orphans Court, accepted the word of the defendant's attorneys for security, notwithstanding the fact that vigorous objections had been made by opposing counsel.

Gathering his numerous retinue of lawyers, secretaries and publicity representatives around him, Thompson announced after the hearing that he would return at once to his apartments in the Martinique in New York, and "all would have a Merry Christmas."

HINTS AT BIG DEAL

At the same time, according to the statements of his representatives, Thompson expects to complete negotiations for two giant coal deals, one for $15,000,000 and another for $35,000,000, and that his "comeback" will furnish the greatest thrill of his life.

The hearing staged today attracted an immense crowd to the Fayette County courthouse. On Thompson were centered the eyes of hundreds of spectators, until the Princess of Thurn and Taxis, plaintiff in one of the suits against the bankrupt coal man, came into the courtroom. All eyes then instinctively turned upon the Uniontown girl who had married into European nobility.

SPOTLIGHT ON PRINCESS

What Christmas Means to Me

By MRS. CALVIN COOLIDGE

The Christmas season has come again to hallow the earth with a Spirit of Peace and Good Will. Throngs of busy people are making preparations to celebrate the birthday of the Christ Child. Voices of eager children at play take on a gayer tone, and we older ones are thrilled with the remembrance of the days of our own expectant childhood.

Mrs. Coolidge

Memories of Christmas seasons past separate into three groups for me: Those of my childhood in my father's home, those of my early married life in my own home, and those of later years in the Nation's home.

Visions of stockings hung by the sitting room stove come with the earlier memories. Some may think an only child is lonely on Festal Days when others have the companionship of other children in the household. But I think there was no happier child than I anywhere and I look back upon the Christmas holidays of my childhood with satisfying pleasure.

The gifts which I received were a wise mixture of the useful, the mildly ornamental, and such toys as quicken the heart of a little girl. I remember a bonnet, a delightful affair of fuzzy tan material faced in blue, with two humming birds perched gaily on top amid ribbon bowers, a doll dressed by the clever fingers of my mother, and a wooden cradle—the product of my father's ruder art. I have the doll and the cradle now.

Watched for Santa Claus

The pages of the years turn, and I come to the memories of Christmas observances which centered in my own small boys. Then, stockings were hung from the parlor mantel.

I remember especially the Christmas when my younger boy, two and a half years old, was watching the fireplace daily for early glimpses of Santa Claus. On Christmas Eve his father bade him look up the chimney and see if he could see anything of him. The little chap got down on his knees and gazed intently up the flue.

With an expression of complete satisfaction and utter conviction he turned to his father and said:

"Yep, I can see his foots."

Our Christmas trees were the usual spruces gay with colored balls and tinsel and lighted with candles. Gifts ranged all the way from overcoats to shoes, with a few toys, a pair of skates or a building set of steel plates, bars and screws for making toy bridges, steam shovels, derricks and all sorts of interesting things.

Christmas in White House

There comes to mind one Christmas when the boys were in the first and third grades. Each of them received a pair of handmade leather boots which their grandfather had succeeded in finding after diligent search in some of the country stores of Vermont. One pair was re-enforced with copper toes.

Grandfather had many a quiet chuckle to himself coming down on the train to spend Christmas with us, at the thought of two city boys wearing leather boots when country boys considered them old fashioned. But wear them they did, even to the second and third taps, and in spite of the fact that they made so much noise on the school room floor that they were requested sometimes to remain in their seats while the other children played a game.

Again I turn the leaves of my book of memory and come

GIRL BLAMED FOR SLAYING OF DIRECTOR

Ex-Governor of California Declares Motion Picture Actress Killed Movie Man.

Former District Attorney, Now in Jail, Accused as 'Fixer,' Denies Charges.

International News Service.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 21.—The District Attorney's office has solved the mystery surrounding the murder of William Desmond Taylor, film director, in 1922, District Attorney Buron Fitts announced today.

The District Attorney said he planned last July to ask the county grand jury for an indictment charging "a person" with the murder, but that this person escaped before he could do so and fled from the country.

Search is now under way for the suspect, Fitts said. He declined to say whether it was a man or woman.

Fitts declared the name of the slayer had been known to his office since last July, and that a blanket indictment, charging murder, was already on file, awaiting only the capture of the suspected slayer.

Former Gov. Friend W. Richardson, in Berkeley today, declared that he knew the killer of Taylor to be a motion picture actress and that Asa Keyes, while district attorney of Los Angeles County, had blocked prosecution of the case.

It was this statement, when called to Fitts' attention, which caused the present district attorney to reveal that his investigators have been working secretly on the Taylor case for more than 10 months. He said:

ONE LINK NOT FORGED

"I am just informed of former Gov. Richardson's statement. I have never discussed the subject with him.

"Since last February this office has been working on the Taylor murder case. We have had to devote a great deal of effort during the night time to it.

"We have reconstructed the scene of that killing, and have built a perfect case, with only one possible connecting link to be filled. Detectives in this office have searched the United States to supply that missing point. We would welcome any help or information that could be supplied. The story behind that murder is interesting, and I sincerely trust that it ultimately will be brought to conclusion."

When the former governor's accusations were called to Keyes' attention in the county jail, the

Comrades in Life, Man, Pet Canary Killed by Fumes

Peter Ruda, 73, a widower, liked to be alone in his last year. He lived with his sister, Mrs. Lindquist, and her family at 1828 Willow street, McKeesport.

His only pet was a canary, whose twitterings were pleasant music for Peter in the solitude of his bedroom.

Yesterday the Lindquist's called to Peter to come down to breakfast. There was no answer. The bedroom door was locked.

Patrolman Tom McDonald came and pushed open the door.

In a rocking chair sat Peter, dead, on the floor of the cage lay the canary, dead. They had died together, asphyxiated by the fumes from the gas stove.

Christmas Shoppers See Falling Worker Grab Beam, Save Self

Harry Miller, crack structural steel worker, was working on the fire escape outside the seventh floor of the Woolworth Building, Sixth street and Liberty avenue. Christmas shoppers watched his maneuvers as they passed by.

Then a bracket holding the steel skeleton on which Miller was standing began to give. The throngs below gasped. It pulled loose and with Miller began its dizzy flight to the street.

Miller's arm shot out. A beam protruded from the wall. He grabbed—and held. Miller and other steel workers of the Reiling Manufacturing Company were dismantling the fire escape when the accidnet occurred. Miller was uninjured.

French Disposal of London Parley Disappoints U. S.

LEAGUE'S PLANS ACCORDED FIRST CONSIDERATION

Hostile Attitude Believed Due To Paris Resentment of Conference at Washington.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—A note sent by France to the other four powers are to take part in the London naval arms conference, giving them notice that she would consider whatever decisions reached at London as subsidiary to the League of Nations' disarmament projects, caused considerable disappointment here today.

The French position is interpreted as a serious blow at the London conference's chances for success.

It came as no surprise to officials of this government, for ever since the Washington conference, where she considers that she was unfairly treated, France has adopted a somewhat hostile attitude toward similar conferences.

"It is a problem that looms before us," said Secretary of State Stimson, referring to France's announced position. "I cannot discuss it at this time."

STIMSON HOPEFUL

Secretary Stimson made it clear that this government considered the question of naval reduction by treaty among the interested powers a question "wholly separate and distinct" from the the State of Georgia under which activities in general, and that position will be vigorously put forward at London to combat the French thesis.

"Of course," said Stimson, "we do not want to interfere in any way with any attempt of any nation or group of nations to disarm in any way they choose.

"The prime purpose of the London conference is to improve international good will among the various nations by removal of suspicion and distrust that goes with competitive armament.

"I am still hopeful of real reduction at London."

Stimson expressed the belief that the battleship continued to be the core of the American naval fleet, but that reductions should be made in the capital ship category.

While the Secretary did not go into details it was understood that he referred to the possible reductions in capital ships through an extension of the life of the battleship beyond the present 20 years limit, a reduction in the size of such ships or a postponement of replacements.

"DECISIONS UNACCEPTABLE"

The French note, which has not been received here, declares, according to Paris dispatches, that the London parley can be nothing more than a preliminary parley, with its findings subject to further consideration by the League of Nations.

Any decisions reached by the five powers attending the London parley will be unacceptable to France as the basis for actual disarmament, the note declared. This attitude is taken due to the fact that France holds that sea, land and air disarmament are absolutely interdependent upon one another, and that a conference constituted to study the aspects of naval disarmament solely cannot be considered as a satisfactory treaty-making body.

The note underlines France's necessity for "inclusive tonnage" which may be applied to any category of armed vessels. This angle of the communication indicates that France will not consent to be bound down to any definite number of cruisers and warships in each category, but will demand a certain definite tonnage allowance, with the right to build whatever type of ships are suited to her needs.

FIGHT FOR SUBMARINES

While the note makes no specific mention of submarines, it has long been known that this country will strongly oppose abolition of undersea craft, holding that submarines constitute the only effective and economical means of defense for France.

With a comparatively small sum of money that can be spent for naval armaments, France contends that submarines are a cheap and effective means of defense, and her demands for an "inclusive tonnage" is simply another way of saying she will construct undersea craft if they are found to be needed.

JAPANESE APPRECIATIVE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—(INS.)—Former Premier Reijiro Wakatsuki, head of the Japanese delegation to the London Naval Conference now on the high seas, sent a message of greeting and appreciation to Secretary of State Stimson today from the steamship Olympic.

"I wish to tender our most sincere thanks for the courtesy and hospitality you have accorded us in Washington," said the message. "We appreciate especially having the opportunity to exchange views with your excellency and your colleagues with open mind and we feel that our visit to Washington was the most profitable.

"We are keenly sensitive of the friendly greeting, special attention and facilities extended to us by officials and private citizens of the United States through our journey across the continent. Please convey to the President on behalf of my party and myself expressions of our gratitude and high regard. Admiral and Madam Takarabe join me in greeting and thanking you personally and most cordially."

PUTTING INTO AMBULANCE WOMEN AMONG DOZENS INJURED WHEN IN STAMPEDE IN NEW YORK SUBWAY TRAINS

NIGERIAN HELD IN AUTO THEFT

George Pereira, 22, Negro, of Lagos, Nigeria, British West Africa, is a Federal prisoner in the county jail, where he is awaiting possible criminal prosecution and deportation.

The immigration authorities claim he unlawfully entered the United States at New York September 15, 1927, by deserting the steamship Bompata, on which he came from Africa as a sailor. Special agents of the Department of Justice charged him with transporting a stolen automobile from New York to Pittsburgh.

After a preliminary hearing Saturday before the United States Commissioner he was re-committed to jail to await further testimony. In the meantime William Marshall, immigration inspector in charge of the Pittsburgh district, has lodged a detainer against him, pending a hearing on his alleged unlawful entry into this country. Pereira denied the motor theft allegation. He said he purchased the automobile from a man in New York for $100.

He had been arrested by the police and turned over to special agents of the Department of Justice.

Clemenceau's Valet, Chauffeur Refuse To Work for Others

PARIS, Dec. 21.—(AP.)—When France's great war premier, Georges Clemenceau, died recently, his two faithful servants changed their way of life and refused any longer to be servants.

"When one has served a man like that," said Albert Poulain, his valet and his friend, "he can never serve others."

Brabant, the chauffeur, took the same view. Both men felt that they had been more than servants in the privilege of attending their master. Clemenceau has kept their dignity alive in them.

When the death of "The Tiger" ended their long years of service with him, they immediately received offers to become valet and chauffeur to several rich people.

Poulain refused without knowing what he might do.

Brabant, much older, went down to Vendee, to be the custodian and guide of the Clemenceau museum in the old home by the sea at Saint-Vincent-Sur-Jard.

THREE ESCAPE INGRAM BLAZE

Fire swept through a three-story frame dwelling at 52 East Prospect avenue, Ingram, last night, driving two members of one family and one of another to the street. Assistant Chief F. A. Aiken, of the Ingram fire department, said the damage neared $8,000.

Firemen from Crafton answered a call for assistance.

Mrs. Florence Ford and her son, Robert, Jr., fled from their first floor apartment. Miss Loretta Layden, who with her mother, Mrs. M. E. Layden, occupies the second floor, also escaped to the street. Mrs. Layden, returning from shopping to see her home afire, collapsed and was attended by Dr. H. S. Wallace, of Danver street.

Work of the firemen was hampered by ice.

Robert Ford and his daughters, Dorothy, Marie and Virginia, were away at the time.

Sailor, Thought Dead In Storm, Back Home

SPRINGHILL, N. S., Dec. 21.—(AP.)—Ernest Austin, mourned as having drowned during a storm near Detroit, returned here today to surprise his friends and relatives.

Austin said he was on the steamship Selkert during the storm and when the deck load shifted he was thrown overboard. After being in the water for more than an hour he was picked up by a tugboat which took him to Windsor, Ont.

The captain of the Selkert had wired his parents here that he had drowned.

trappers who had never before seen such a collection of priceless pelts. Diamonds glittered about her throat and from her fingers.

Congressman Stephen G. Porter, counsel for the estate of John Niccolls, father of the Princess, objected to extending Thompson's parole without heavy security. The Princess applauded the speech with jeweled hands. Again she applauded when Attorney H. S. Dumbauld, counsel for the estate of Emma Messmore, joined in Porter's plea for sufficient security to prevent the possibility of Thompson's disappearing.

REED TO APPEAR

Thompson's appearance here was in accordance with an agreement made November 30, when the court granted a parole of three weeks in a case in which the defendant is held in contempt for failing to meet the obligations of more than $200,000 to the estate of the sons of the Princess of Thurn and Taxis and the estate of Emma Messmore. The princess, a niece of Thompson, brought charges of embezzlement against him. He was arrested on a Pennsylvania Railroad train at Altoona and brought to Uniontown, where he gave bail for a court hearing in March.

Christmas Greetings Broadcast to Byrd

Christmas greetings were broadcast last night to Com. Richard Byrd and his party of explorers at the South Pole area by Station KDKA from both the William Penn Hotel studio and the Shadyside Presbyterian Church. Dr. Hugh Thompson Kerr, pastor of Shadyside, conducted the special Yuletide service. Individual greetings were radioed to many members of the expedition.

SENATOR GOULD NOT CANDIDATE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—(AP.)—Senator Gould (Rep.), of Maine, announced today he would not be a candidate for re-election next year, and that he would support Representative White, of Lewiston, for the nomination.

In a formal statement Senator Gould, whose home is at Presque Isle, said for "domestic and business reasons, I find it expedient to bring my political career to a close."

Last summer Gould created a furore by defending the right of a person to "have, make and drink" light wines and beer. At that time he declared the licensing of such beverages "would be great improvement over the present prohibition which seems impossible to enforce."

Prior to that time a letter written by Gould was made public in St. Louis in which he told of getting "some very good results" with a grape juice firm's unfermented products.

Philippine Senate Head Has Relapse

MANILA, Dec. 21.—(AP.)—Manuel Quezon, president of the Philippine Senate, long ill with tuberculosis, suffered a relapse today at Baguio, the summer capital. Members of his family have expressed the belief that he was in grave danger. The attending physician refused to discuss the case, pending consultation with two Manila doctors who are rushing to Baguio by automobile.

Coliseum Damaged In Washington Fire

WASHINGTON, Pa., Dec. 21.—Fire today caused damage of several thousand dollars in West Beau street, including the Washington Coliseum, operated by the Duvall Brothers. An overheated stove caused the fire. Automobiles in the Marzolf painting shop were damaged.

MORGAN-BACKED BERLIN BANKER UPSETS CABINET

Minister of Economics Quits; Schacht Virtually Ruling Germany's Government.

By WILLIAM HILLMAN.
(Universal Service Special Cable.)

BERLIN, Dec. 21.—Dr. Paul Moldenhauer, Reich minister of economics, tonight was appointed temporarily to take over the duties of the ministry of finance, from which post Dr. Rudolph Hilferding today resigned.

Dr. Moldenhauer only recently became a member of the cabinet of Chancellor Mueller. He was appointed to take the economics portfolio left vacant when Dr. Julius Curtius became foreign minister after the death of Dr. Gustav Stresemann.

RESIGNATION SURPRISE

The resignation of Hilferding as finance minister, which was accompanied by the resignation of Dr. Johannes Popitz, permanent state secretary for finance, came unexpectedly, although efforts have been made within the last week to oust the Socialist government from the control of German finances.

Potent in removing Hilferding from office was Dr. Hjalmer Schacht, president of the Reichsbank, whose heated campaign against the government's financial policy culminated in his refusal to permit the government to borrow 400,000,000 marks ($100,000,000) from Dillon, Read & Co., of New York to meet December obligations. Schacht, however, later guaranteed a domestic loan from a German bankers' consortium for the amount.

REICHSBANK AIDS

Almost immediately after Hilferding resigned came the official announcement that the Reichsbank, with other German banks, had lent the government 350,000,000 marks ($87,500,000) to tide the government over its approaching deficit.

It is believed that the resignation of Dr. Hilferding, combined with the placing of the cities of Berlin and Cassel under state financial control, marks the first victory for "big business" and industrial circles, led by Schacht, in a sensational battle against socialistic government. Another business victory was in the financial blockade against the government in the anti-Young plan referendum, which takes place tomorrow.

SCHACT IN CONTROL

It is pointed out here that Hilferding's resignation is the direct result of this serious financial muddle in which the government finds itself, and that now Schacht, backed by German bankers, S. Parker Gilbert, reparations agent general under the Dawes plan, and J. P. Morgan is in virtual control of the government.

A further development in the financial situation is that the big banks of Germany are already advancing large credits to the principal cities of Germany in order to transfer municipal and public utilities to private ownership.

The finance minister's resignation is expected to boost the vote in the anti-Young plan plebiscite, but despite this, leaders believe a victory for the referendum possible.

The present cabinet of Chancellor Mueller is expected to continue in power until after The Hague conference on reparations next month.

Engaged

ESTHER STOCKTON ELY

JILTED BROKER TO MARRY HERE

CHICAGO, Dec. 21.—(INS.)—Clymer Sprague Bowen, young broker, who went into seclusion some time ago when his fiancee, Katherine Thorne, society girl, eloped with George Gillespie, movie cowboy, is to marry Esther Stockton Ely, of Pittsburgh, it was announced here today.

The engagement of Bowen to Miss Thorne, daughter of the former president of Montgomery Ward & Co., was announced last January. Shortly afterward she eloped.

FIANCE IN PITTSBURG

Clymer Sprague Bowen, Chicago broker, spent the week-end in Pittsburgh visiting his fiancee, Esther Stockton Ely, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sumner Boyer Ely, of 5122 Pembroke place.

They made a Christmas shopping tour yesterday afternoon, returning to the Ely home later in the day. Bowen was expected to remain here until after Christmas.

ACTIVE IN THEATRICALS

Miss Ely, who graduated from Wellsley College in 1925, has been prominent in amateur theatrical circles here for several years, having taken an active part in Stage and Play Society affairs. She is a member of the board of directors of the Stage and Play Society and a member of the Junior League. Her father is a member of the faculty at the Carnegie Institute of Technology. He was secretary of the world-wide coal conference here.

Miss Ely's fiance since his graduation from Yale in 1922 has been associated with a stock and bond brokerage house in Chicago. During his preparatory school days at Hotchkiss, Conn., he excelled in athletics and was awarded a trophy as an all-around student during his last year. At Yale, he played hockey. The wedding will take place early in March, it was announced by Miss Ely's parents.

Flames Sweep Over Philadelphia Park

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 21.—(INS.)—Fanned by the gale-like wind that swept another cold wave into the city, fire last night caused upwards of a half million dollars damage to Willow Grove Park and left in its wake today a mass of blackened ruins sheathed with ice. A score of fire companies from city line to Doylestown, 20 miles away, were called to the scene before the blaze could be brought under control.

Thousands of spectators braved the chill wind and intense cold to view the spectacle of the flimsy wooden structures going up in flames.

For the past three years the park has been operated by Meyer Davis, famous orchestra leader. He revealed that most of the loss was covered by insurance.

NINE CONVICTED MEN SEEK NEW RUM RING TRIAL

U. S. Attorneys Undecided on Further Action Against 8 Jury Failed to Agree On.

Motions will be made tomorrow or Tuesday before Federal Judge R. M. Gibson for new trials for the nine men convicted Friday in the McKeesport rum conspiracy case, according to an announcement yesterday by members of the defense counsel.

Among those convicted were former Chief of Police John F. Brennan, of McKeesport; former Chief of Police Charles L. Bergstedt, of Versailles, and Justice of the Peace Charles E. Reinhard, of Versailles Township.

JURY FAILURE UNUSUAL

Neither United States Attorney Louis E. Graham, nor his first assistant, Attorney James I. Marsh, who represented the government in the prosecution of the case, have yet announced any plans for further prosecution of Police Lieut. James H. Gray and the seven defendants upon whom the jury failed to reach an agreement.

The failure of a jury to reach an agreement as to some defendants is unprecedented in the Federal District Court, so far as can be recalled by attaches of the court.

32 NAMED ORIGINALLY

With nine convictions and five pleas of guilty or no defense, the government made a score of 14 out of 32 men named in the indictment. Two of the defendants, Walter Rosier and Jack Tucker, were never apprehended. The government dropped from the indictment Charles Friedman and Harry Markoss, confessed bootleggers and ex-convicts; David Klein and Louis Klein, all of whom were convicted in the former McKeesport liquor conspiracy case in 1927. The star witnesses for the government were Friedman and Markoss.

The four acquitted were Robert Prosser, former county detective; Robert Hurley, police patrol driver; Sam Crown and Louis Davidson. The others convicted were Albert Rasp and Leo P. Vennebush, motorcycle policemen; Harry Uskovitz, Ben Frank, Nathan Friedman and Martin Firestone.

Spain has good roads, comfortable hotels and unbounded hospitality and welcome, especially for Americans. He and the Prince of Wales could be elected to any American "boosters" club.

A FEW items of good news:

France reports her industrial output at its highest peak.

Chicago, like New York, and other American cities, finds Christmas buying ahead of last year.

In Detroit, automobile manufacturers are calling in workers at the rate of 700 a day.

LONDON reports that the whole outside world is counting on loans from America. Uncle Sam, sometimes called Uncle Shylock, presumably in jest, will say "Glad to oblige, but America first."

Dividend of Defunct Bank Yuletide 'Gift'

BELLEFONTE, Pa., Dec. 21.—The sum of $65,000 was virtually poured into the lap of Christmas shoppers here today when Ivan Walker, trustee, distributed another 15 per cent dividend of the assets of the defunct Centre County Banking Company.

The dividend makes a total of 40 per cent paid since the bank closed its doors on May 23, 1922, or approximately $175,000.

Man, Woman, Child Killed At Crossing

CLEVELAND, O., Dec. 21.—(AP.)—A man, woman and small child, identity unknown, were killed here tonight when an eastbound Big Four express train, west of the city, struck their automobile and scattered the wreckage 1,000 feet.

The bodies were picked up by the train crew and brought into the station here. The license plate of the automobile was issued to W. G. Schmunck, Brook Park Village, west of here.

Educator Appeals Ruling Barring Him as Citizen

An appeal to the State Supreme Court was taken Saturday by Prof. Robert Clark, vice president of Geneva College, Beaver Falls, Pa., denied citizenship on the ground that he refused to take the prescribed oath to support the Constitution of the United States.

Clark filed notice of an appeal in the office of the Supreme Court prothonotary here. The appeal was listed for argument when the court sits in Pittsburgh next March.

Born in Ireland, Clark, a Covenanter, has lived in this country for many years, according to evidence at the naturalization hearing last August before Judge William A. McConnell, of the Beaver County courts.

Clark passed the customary naturalization examinations, but a hitch came when he was asked to take an oath of allegiance.

The educator refused to take the oath unless permitted to add this modification: "So long as adherence to the Constitution does not interfere with my devotion to Jesus Christ."

Judge McConnell ruled that he was without authority to grant citizenship on any other than the prescribed oath and refused to issue the final papers.

In his appeal, Clark sets forth that he has been done an injustice by the ruling of the Beaver County Court.

Fireman Jolted Off Truck, Takes Up Chase in Taxi

A fire engine was speeding down Bigelow boulevard, bent for a downtown fire.

At Sixth avenue a trolley car blocked its path and Driver Bill Simmen swerved the big truck into Sixth, over the pavement and safely into Grant street.

IS LEFT BEHIND

Pedestrians ran to safety and the firemen held on to the speeding truck. That is all except Bob Capes didn't hold on. The sudden turn dropped Bob off the rear step onto the cold paving blocks of Grant street.

"Hey," he yelled, as he pursued the fire truck on foot. The driver didn't hear. After all, it was no time for roll-call.

Bob hailed a passing cab.

"Get that fire truck!" Bob commanded, and the chase was begun.

A red light stopped the cab; the fire truck sped ahead.

DISREGARDS RED LIGHT

Eventually Bob caught the traffic cop's eye and the cab moved against the red light, down Diamond street, and to the scene of the fire, where there was a happy reunion.

The fire, which was in the Palace Theater projection room, caused little damage and no excitement.

Performances in the theater were interrupted only a short time.

Armstrong Ill, Tax Protest Meeting Postponed

CITIZENS READY TO FIGHT RAISE IN COUNTY LEVY

Figures to Show 'Outrageous Condition' Here, Speaker For Building Group Says.

As an army of aroused citizens prepared to march upon the County Commissioners to protest against the proposed mill increase in the county tax rate, the commissioners' meeting scheduled for tomorrow was canceled due to the illness of Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong.

Coming on top of the mill increase on land and half-mill increase on buildings by the city, a determined stand was to be made against a further boost by the County Commissioners.

It was decided to postpone the meeting until the whole board of commissioners could assemble because of the importance of the question.

ORGANIZATIONS LISTED

The following organizations had arranged to send delegations:

Building Owners' and Managers' Association.
Pittsburgh Real Estate Board.
Chamber of Commerce.
Allegheny County League of Building and Loan Associations.
League of Women Voters.
North Boroughs Real Estate Board.
Braddock Real Estate Board.
McKeesport Real Estate Board.
McKees Rocks Real Estate Board.

TAX EXPERT HIRED

The Pittsburgh Real Estate Board's delegation will consist of its taxation, executive and advisory committees, reinforced by officers of many of the trust companies of Pittsburgh. The board has employed J. C. Sleppy, accountant and tax expert, to analyze the county's financial affairs over a period of years, and his findings will be submitted to the Commissioners as an argument against raising the tax.

"We will show the commissioners," said E. F. Daume, chairman of the Pittsburgh Real Estate Board's committee, "that real estate has been sorely afflicted by burdensome taxation, that the recent increases in the school and city levies have made the affliction acute, and that for them to raise the county tax will bring the situation to a dangerous stage. We shall ask them to make a careful, intelligent estimate of the county's necessary expenses, and arrange to confine them to an amount that can be provided by present millage."

One suggestion is that the commissioners buy voting machines, not out of current funds, as proposed, but through a bond issue, thus postponing payment until the real estate situation is less acute.

GROUP "FIGHTING MAD"

The Building Owners' and Managers' Association will be represented by its board of directors.

"We are going to insist," said J. W. Bamford, chairman of the association's taxation committee, "that there be no increase in the millage. We do not want to disclose our hand in advance, but I will tell you that we have figures showing an outrageous condition. We are fighting mad about it, and will demand we be given relief.

"We have adopted a program which calls for serving notice both on the county commissioners and the city council that hereafter we shall carefully scrutinize the expenditure of every dollar of the taxpayers' money, every ordinance that is passed, and the manner in which every dollar of revenue is collected. We are going to keep right after them, regardless of their present action."

Two Mothers Appeal For Son's Return

Two mothers today made appeals to the Missing Persons Bureau that their sons be returned to them for Christmas. Mrs. William Smith, Sixth street, Steubenville, O., asks that her son, Ralph, 16, who disappeared from home July 29, communicate with her if he can be reached. The other, Mrs. Irene Beck, Chestnut Ridge, Westmoreland County, appeals to her son, Carl, 17, to communicate with her.

Six Liquor Raids Made in Homestead

Six alleged "wet" spots in Homestead and a drug store in East Liberty were raided yesterday by government prohibition agents. In some of the places large stocks of liquor were reported seized. Nine arrests were made.

In a drug store at 901 North St. Clair street, the agents reported confiscating 10 bottles of gin and 10 pints of whisky.

The largest seizure in Homestead was at a saloon at 505 Amity street, where the raiders said they seized 70 quart bottles and two five-gallon bottles of wihsky.

Proposes Workhouse Terms for Thieves

Frank R. Boyd, inspector of city detectives, has announced that he will recommend that professional thieves captured by his men be sent to the County Workhouse for 90 days. He will ask that no fines be given.

The inspector of detectives, in making his announcement, declared that he would make information against such thieves himself.

Costumes Stolen At Elmore Theater

Police were seeking a suspect last night in the theft of $500 worth of costumes from the Elmore Theater, 2312 Center avenue. The robbery occurred early yesterday morning when a glass was broken in the front door and dressing rooms ransacked. The management reported the identity of a suspect who was said to have been seen loitering around the theater.

Many Ex-Prisoners Retain Employment

According to an announcement yesterday by the Parting of the Ways Home, 216 East Stockton avenue, 80 per cent of the 13,289 men who were given aid by the home, after they were released from penal institutions, are now steadily employed. The figures are for a period of 16 years.

9 Flee for Lives In $30,000 Blaze

SCRANTON, Pa., Dec. 21.—(AP.)—Damage estimated at $30,000 resulted today and nine persons had to flee for their lives, when fire swept through a two-story structure at Halstead, Pa.

The building was occupied by stores and a restaurant on the first floor and used as living apartments by several families on the second floor. It was owned by Brown Brothers, proprietors of a general store.

The fire started when a gas stove exploded in the restaurant. An adjoining building was damaged.

GULF REFINING ADOPTS DESIGN FOR BUILDING

Oil Company Finally Accepts Plans for 37-Story Structure on Grant Street

After six months of study, the building committee of the Gulf Refining Company has adopted a design for its proposed office building, to be erected at the northwest corner of Seventh avenue and Grant street.

The ground area to be occupied will be covered by only the first four stories. The fifth and sixth stories will run up straight on the Seventh avenue and north sides, but will be stepped back from Grant street and William Penn place.

The six stories form the base of the building, out of which will rise a tower, approximately 108 feet square, running up straight for a distance of 304 feet to the thirty-first story. At this point the tower will be stepped back slightly for architectural effect and continued up for an additional distance of 83 feet to the top of the parapet wall at the thirty-seventh story.

PYRAMID TOP

It will then be capped by a stepped pyramid top ending in a cupola or lantern. The total height of the tip of the cupola will be approximately 575 feet above the average curb grade. On all four sides the base course will be of granite and the remaining part of the exterior Indiana limestone.

Between the outside face of the first step of the pyramid top and the parapet wall above the thirty-seventh story, there will be a promenade. The main entrance to the structure will be from Seventh avenue with an additional entrance from Grant street. The freight receiving room will be located on the William Penn place side of the building.

The lobby and corridors on the first floor will be finished entirely with marble. All stories above will have marble floors and marble wainscoting. The doors and trim will be of metal.

OIL COMPANY'S HOME

The building will be served by 14 elevators divided into three banks. Present plans contemplate the local bank of three elevators serving from the first to the seventh floors. The intermediate bank of six elevators serving from the seventh to the twenty-fifth floors; and the express bank of five lifts serving from the twenty-fifth to the thirty-seventh floors.

The architects for the proposed building are Trowbridge & Livingston, of New York, with E. P. Mellon, of Pittsburgh and New York, associated.

When the building is complete, the Gulf Oil Corporation will be able to house the general offices of its subsidiary companies under one roof.

$2,500,000 Prize Lottery Shared By Thousands

International News Service.

ZARAGOZA, Spain, Dec. 21.

THE first prize-winning number in the annual Spanish lottery, worth $2,500,000 to its holder, will be distributed among thousands of workers and soldiers here, it was learned today.

All the employes of a large furniture factory, as well as the soldiers of the Intendencia Regiment, held shares in the winning ticket, so instead of one lucky holder walking away with a king's ransom, the prize money will be divided piecemeal among thousands.

The largest share in the prize, it is reported, will be only 2,500 pesetas, a little over $400.

TONS OF MAIL THROWN AWAY

Tons of second-class mail matter unclaimed or not delivered in Pittsburgh are destroyed annually on orders of Postmaster George W. Gosser, that official said yesterday.

Hundreds of concerns fail to check their mailing lists resulting in circulars, papers and other mail matter becoming an absolute loss to the senders.

For illustration, Mr. Gosser said that many concerns show little judgment in mailing advertising matter. For 20 years he has been receiving a circular from a certain Atlantic City hotel.

Howard Heinz has been receiving mail sent to a residence in Pittsburgh in which he has not lived for 10 years. The postal employes have to readdress this mail matter and the same in hundreds and thousands of other cases.

TOWN HALL SITE SELECTION NEAR

Allegheny County may have a site for the Town Hall in its Christmas stocking.

The County Planning Commission will go into executive session tomorrow afternoon at 1 o'clock and there is a possibility that before the day's session ends it will have picked a site.

Acting Chairman S. J. Topley explained that the commission is meeting in executive session because the members feel that every logical sit for the Town Hall in the county has been presented and studied by them. "Advocates of each site have been given every opportunity to present their cases before us publicly," Topley said, "and we now feel that we must make a selection impartially and without further argument from interested parties."

"Like judges at a beauty contest or baby show, no matter what site we select we will be criticized," one member of the commission said.

"Nevertheless, we have arrived at the point where we believe that we have all the available data before us and I am going to suggest immediate and definite action at Monday's meeting."

Otis to Lecture On Rationalism

"Rationalism: Its Effect Upon the Working Class," will be discussed tonight by John Otis at the Workers' Open Forum in Walton Hall, 220 Stanwix street. The speaker was formerly a member of the Central Trades and Labor Council. The talk is on the regular weekly program of discussions on social, political and economic problems.

Blue Moonshine Seizure to Bring Blue Christmas

WHEN county detectives confiscate blue moonshine, a blue Christmas may be in the offing for somebody.

The blue "mooney" was found Saturday when county detectives raided a confectionery store operated, they say, by Paul Berman, at 1415 Clark street. It was a bright shade of blue, done up in fancy half-pint bottles—32 of them. This is thought to be the first time that liquor of that particular hue was introduced in Pittsburgh.

The detectives also confiscated six five-gallon cans, three one-gallon glass jugs and 20 pints of the ordinary brand of moonshine.

RACE ON ROAD BASIS OF SUIT

Two automobiles racing along the highway resulted in a collision with their car, parked to avoid danger, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Devan, of Hopwood, alleged in a suit against John Annibale, of Monessen, filed in Common Pleas Court, seeking to recover $15,900 damages. The Devans were riding along the Library road near Castle Shannon July 4 last when they saw two cars racing abreast towards them, they alleged. They averred that they stopped their car at the side of the road as a precaution, and that Annibale, driving towards the middle of the roadway, forced the other car against the Devan car, wrecking it and causing serious injury to Mrs. Devan.

DENTIST'S WIFE GIVEN DIVORCE

Dr. Orville George Crawshaw, 51, dentist, now of Ambridge and formerly of Dormont, deserted his wife, Mrs. Mary Juanita Crawshaw, 55, of 3022 West Liberty avenue, after 27 years of married life, telling her he was tired living with her, according to her testimony before Judge James B. Drew in Common Pleas Court. She was granted a divorce Saturday on the grounds of desertion and cruelty.

They were married October 30, 1902, at Cabot, Butler County, and have two sons, one a student at Ohio State University. Dr. Crawshaw told her many times he did not want to live with her any longer before he finally left February 19, Mrs. Crawshaw testified.

During their last year together, he threw her to the floor three times, she said, his outbursts being provoked by his temper and a nervous and erratic disposition.

"He never wanted me in the house and he said he could always do more business when I was not in the house," she testified.

Captain Cleared Of Blame in Wreck

SEATTLE, Dec. 21.—(AP.)—United States steamboat inspectors today exonerated Capt. Eric Strandquist, of the steamer Skagway, of all blame in connection with the beaching and burning of his vessel near Cape Flattery, Washington, last Monday.

Capt. Standquist ran his boat onto the rocky shore when a fire broke out in the Skagway's hold. His cargo included gasoline and alcohol.

Accusations by subordinate officers that the captain ignored counsel of his officers and crew and headed for the rocks after being told he could make Neas Bay, three miles away, were held groundless.

EARNED INCOME TAX CUT PLAN BEFORE HOUSE

Petitions Signed by Million Protesting Levy on Labor Introduced in Congress.

By ARTHUR HACHTEN
Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—Petitions signed by more than 1,000,000 citizens asking for a reduction of the federal tax on earned incomes were placed before the House today by Representative Sol Bloom of New York.

With this first official step, a nation-wide drive in Congress was begun to obtain a 50 per cent cut on taxes on earned incomes as distinguished from income on capital.

The movement, sponsored by the 28 Hearst newspapers, already has been universally indorsed by leaders of the Senate and House.

GOES TO COMMITTEE

Unanimous consent was given in the House for Representative Bloom to introduce the petitions and for publication in the Congressional Record of the resolution asking for the tax reduction. The matter will now go before the House Ways and Means Committee, where under the rules all tax legislation must originate.

Representative Bloom, in placing the monster petitions before the House, said:

"Today I presented, through the medium of the basket at the clerk's desk, provided for such purposes, a petition representative of a vast number of like petitions, signed by about 1,000,000 citizens of the United States, who filed them with the newspapers operated by Mr. William Randolph Hearst.

INTEREST NATION-WIDE

"His newspapers conducted a nation-wide campaign in support of this legislation, praying that Congress speedily enact legislation for revision downward of income taxes on all earned incomes such as salaries or fees, or commissions for personal service.

"I would like to state, Mr. Speaker, that these petitions, coming from all parts of the United States, are very voluminous and, therefore, instead of encumbering the clerk's desk with them, I have simply deposited one of them as representative of the entire lot.

"The physical petitions themselves are now in the rooms of the Committee on Ways and Means, to which committee I have asked that reference be made of them as a matter of public record."

UNRELATED TO RECENT CUT

The movement for a reduction in taxes on earned incomes is not related to the emergency tax cut recently passed by the Congress and signed by President Hoover.

That measure is effective next year and for next year only.

The movement sponsored by the Hearst newspapers began last spring. Tax relief for those whose incomes are derived by their brains and brawn is sought. The toilers, the clerks, the artisans, those in the professions and in business and industry whose incomes are in salaries or commissions are the signers of the petition.

"TAX ON LABOR"

They point out in the petitions that a tax on earned income should not be on the same basis as a tax on income from property and invested capital.

"To tax earned income heavily is to penalize thrift and industry and is a direct tax on labor and tends to retard enterprise and achievement," the petitions pointed out.

Furthermore the taxpayers whose income is "earned" suffers a loss of earning power as the passing years take their toll. In many instances this earning power endures but for a comparatively few years. To tax this earning power the same as taxes on income from property, and invested capital is unethical, the petitions set forth.

Recognizing this principle, the present tax law grants a 25 per cent reduction in taxes on earned income. The drive now fairly launched will increase this reduction to 50 per cent.

The petitions placed officially before the House today were delivered at the Capitol on December 7, by a representative delegation of taxpayers, in an impressive demonstration.

Text of Petition for Cut In Tax on Earnings

Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—The petition for a reduction of tax on earned incomes, as presented in the House of Representatives today with over 1,000,000 signers, follows:

"Whereas, the earned income of an individual is derived from his labor and creative faculties which are subject to rigid time limitations, marked fluctuations and serious depreciation, while the income from property is a permanent and stable income, it seems inequitable to tax earned incomes on the same basis as incomes from property and invested capital without taking depreciation into consideration; and

"Whereas, an earned income is the measure of value of service rendered by the worker to the community and an unearned income is the measure of value of the protection and other benefits received by an individual from the community; and

"Whereas, to tax earned income heavily is to penalize thrift and industry and is a direct tax on labor and tends to retard enterprise and achievement; therefore be it

"Resolved, that we, the undersigned, call these facts to the attention of the President, the Secretary of the Treasury and Congress in order to secure a reduction of 50 per cent in the tax rate on earned income below the tax rate on unearned income."

BUTLER CLEARS SELF IN MARINE VOTE TALK HERE

Secretary Adams, After Quiz Of General, Drops Inquiry For Remarks on Nicaragua

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—(AP.)—Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler has so explained his recent Pittsburgh speech concerning Marines on foreign soil during elections that Secretary Adams is convinced that accounts of the speech that brought criticism were misrepresentative.

Secretary Adams said last week he wanted a "first-hand account" of the speech, in which it was alleged Gen. Butler declared that Marines had manipulated elections to elect the candidates they favored. Gen. Butler came to Washington several days later and in conferences with the Secretary and with Maj. Gen. Wendell C. Neville, commandant of the Marine Corps, personally offered his explanation.

The General's report, it was said today was such that if the Secretary takes any further action in the matter it will be moderate. The Army and Navy Journal said today that Secretary Adams, after considering all aspects of the case, "has decided to do nothing further in the matter."

The investigation of Secretary Adams followed an address given here by Gen. Butler before the Builders' Exchange annual banquet. Sinclair Lewis, novelist, wired Senator Borah in Washington that Butler's remarks warranted an investigation.

Gen. Butler, among other things, said that he and the Marines overrode election laws in Nicaragua, and when their opponents became influential, they were declared bandits. Butler also told of breaking up a session of the Haitian Congress.

TRAINMEN FIGHT RECORD TIE UP

transportation incidental to the holiday season, were blamed by Pennsylvania system officials for the unprecedented jam in the local yards Saturday.

P. R. R. STATEMENT

Vice President Smith, of the Pennsylvania Railroad, issued this statement yesterday:

"We are rapidly getting back to normal, following the serious and regrettable dislocation in both local and through passenger service Saturday morning. Tonight the passenger trains originating in Pittsburgh and destined for eastern seaboard and western terminal are expected to depart on schedule time.

"Every hour we are moving mountains of mail and express matter and the worst of this crush will be cleared up tonight.

"By Monday morning it is our expectation to have all local trains moving into and out of the main terminal on schedule. Nothing but the weather will prevent this. We realize there are but two shopping days left before Christmas and it is our desire to make the movements of shoppers into and out of Pittsburgh as expeditious as possible Monday and Tuesday. There is no shortage of locomotives, coaches, crews or station help.

"Many members of the supervisory force have been on duty continuously since Friday afternoon and expect to carry on until we get clear tonight.

TERMINALS CHOKED

"Saturday morning we had an extraordinary situation. The fleets of heavy passenger, mail and express trains coming in from the east, some of them running as high as five extra sections, some of them delayed by dense fog on the New York division, came into Pittsburgh at the same time that two score storm-delayed trains from the west reached here.

"The terminal facilities became choked to the point that there was not room left for local passenger trains. We have to discharge passengers at East Liberty, Federal street and Panhandle stations. The order to carry out this emergency program was given reluctantly, but it was the only solution. Had we tried to bring local trains into the main terminal this morning there is no telling how long local passengers might have been held up in the yards. The congestion might have become complete. As it was, the worst was over by noon. We are now clearing up the last traces of the unavoidable delays and at the same time arranging, so far as is humanly possible, for 100 per cent local passenger movement into and out of the main terminal Moday and Tuesday."

FARE REFUND REFUSED

Many of the passengers forced to alight at East Liberty demanded money back. Their request was not granted, they said.

Winter made its advent officially at 2:53 a. m. today, according to Forecaster W. S. Brotzman.

The weather will continue clear and cold, he predicted, with a minimum temperature early today of about 10 degrees.

The cold wave is expected to hold sway for several days, as frigid weather prevailed throughout the Northwest.

Army Flier Killed In Parachute Leap

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—(INS.)—Lieut. Elmer R. Miller, of Stratford, Cal., was killed at Ft. Sam Houston, Tex., while making a parachute leap from a plane, according to a message to the War Department today.

POLES, TREES AND WIRES DOWN OVER SNOW-BLOCKED ROADWAY AT GLENS FALLS, N. Y., IN STORM-PARALYZED SECTION

COLD GRIPS U. S. GALES ON WANE

Associated Press.

Cold continues to reign supreme over most of the United States today, but the blizzard which sent the icy blasts as far south as the Gulf of Mexico had spent its fury.

The Middle West and Great Lakes regions were digging themselves out of one of the worst storms in a decade. Zero temperatures hampered the snow removing process, but most transportation facilities, except on Michigan highways, were back on normal schedules.

Several southland states still reported freezing weather. The cold wave was felt over the entire south with the exception of Southern Florida and the Atlantic coastal states.

New England started repairing the damage from several days of sleet and ice, which broke down trees and wires and crippled both tarnsportation and communicating systems.

The Middle Atlantic section welcomed the chilly winds which dispersed the fog and rain that had hung over the region for days.

MICHIGAN STORMBOUND

DETROIT, Dec. 21.—(AP.)—Suffering and privation reared its head in Central and Western Michigan today in the wake of the blizzard which struck the state Wednesday.

Lansing, Battle Creek and Kalamazoo in the central portion of the state today faced a serious shortage of milk, with their distributors unable to negotiate the snow-choked highways leading to their sources of supply. Distributors said the supply on hand would not last the day out. Considerable suffering was brought to many families in these regions by the inability of coal companies to make fuel deliveries.

All the guests and employes who were at the Battle Creek Country Club Tuesday night were still marooned at the clubhouse a short distance out of that city today. Five miles east of Flint on the Genesee-Shiwassee County line, 30 passengers of an interurban bus were reported snowbound today. The bus became stalled in the drifts last night.

Two dozen families living near Monroe at the point where the river Raisin empties into Lake Erie were homeless today, the river having overflowed into their homes. Snow and ice raised the river six feet above its normal level and the rise is continuing.

In at least three counties all the snow removal equipment was reported hopelessly stalled along the highways road crews have been seeking to clear since Thursday morning.

SNOW IN TEXAS

DALLAS, Tex., Dec. 21.—(AP.)—Santa Claus, for the first time in many years, may be able to drive his sleigh and reindeer into southern sections of Texas, which awoke this morning to find a white coverlet on the ground.

Snowfall at El Paso was more than five inches, the heaviest in 23 years. San Antonio received the first snow of consequence in two years. At Lockhart, where the younger children had never seen snow covering the ground before, the flakes descended for 14 hours.

Weather Outlook For This Week

WEATHER outlook for the week beginning Monday:

Ohio Valley and Tennessee: A period of rain in the middle of the week; cold at the beginning of week, moderating by the middle of the week, followed by colder Thursday or Friday.

Region of the Great Lakes: Cold beginning of week, followed by rising temperature; considerable cloudiness, probably with frequent precipitation, mostly snow.

Man and Wife Ask $31,500 in Wreck

J. W. Ferguson and Sarah Ferguson, his wife, of Pittsburgh, filed suit against M. J. Melia, of Crafton, in Common Pleas Court, asking $31,500 damages for injuries to Mrs. Ferguson in an automobile collision.

While the Fergusons and their two children were ridging in their automobile along Ardmore boulevard, Wilkinsburg, April 2, it was in a collision with a car owned by Melia and driven by an employe.

Mrs. Ferguson suffered a broken nose and several fractured ribs, the suit alleged.

Bloodhounds Lose Jail Breaker's Trail

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Dec. 21.—(INS.)—Wide search was under way today for three long-term convicts who made a quiet escape from Kilby prison late yesterday. The prisoners—George Angelo, Fred Corbin and Cecil Miracle—apparently escaped about 6 o'clock in the afternoon, but their absence was not discovered until the final night checkup was made. Bloodhounds lost their trail.

STEEL FIRM IN RECEIVERSHIP

The Elliott-Blair Steel Company of New Castle, engaged in cold-rolled steel business, with plants at New Castle and Mercer, Pa., has been placed under a receivership. C. H. Forster and Noah W. Elliott, Sr., were named the receivers by Federal Judge R. M. Gibson in an equity suit brought by Sidney Norwood, of Detroit, Mich. Reuben J. Elliott, president of the concern, filed an answer to the suit in which he consented to the receivership.

The assets of the company are greatly in excess of its liabilities, according to the bill of complaint, which describes the company as having been successful and prosperous until 1923, when current assets of the concern were depleted in order to buy out a large stockholders' interest, after which it encountered financial difficulties due to lack of working capital.

The bill avers that the company owns real estate, plants and equipment valued at $400,000. The liabilities were placed at $160,000.

Pritts Named Chief At West Brownsville

BROWNSVILLE, Pa., Dec. 21.—William Pritts, West Brownsville, has been named new chief of police of that borough by Burgess George W. Stephenson to succeed John Balensky, who was dismissed because of alleged inefficiency in the line of duty. Pritts will assume his new capacity Monday.

Color Maze to Mark Pittsburgh District For Holiday Season

Pittsburgh and several communities in the greater metropolitan districts will burst forth into a maze of color with Yuletide decorations and Christmas trees during the holiday period.

The Civic Club of Allegheny County, in conjunction with public-spirited citizens and business houses, is sponsoring the movement.

The various county bridges have been dressed in festive lights, and decorations on office buildings downtown are assuming gay appearance. The boroughs of Ben Avon, Etna, Emsworth, West Elizabeth, Brentwood, Bellevue and Verona will co-operate.

A number of churches will have effective displays. These include Shadyside Presbyterian, Calvary Episcopal, East Liberty Presbyterian, First United Presbyterian, Sixth United Presbyterian, St. Andrew's Evangelical Lutheran, Lutheran Church of the Redeemer, Bellevue Presbyterian and Christ Methodist Episcopal.

Henry W. Muller heads the committee in charge of the outdoor lighting campaign.

Advertising Manager Undergoes Operation

Roberts & Son Company and treasurer of the Retail Credit Men's Association, yesterday underwent an abdominal operation at the Mercy Hospital. It was stated at the hospital that Mr. Jackson's condition is good. Mr. Jackson lives in Brunot avenue, Sheraden.

PITT ACCUSED OF STRANGLING FACULTY RIGHTS

Freedom of Speech Repressed By Ambitious Expansion, Educators' Group Charges.

personal rather than legal; it desires acquiescence rather than criticism; and it conceded favors rather than rights."

THREE RECOMMENDATIONS

The report makes the following recommendations in the administration of Pitt for the interests of academic freedom:

"First, the administration might be less panic-stricken about the university's name being implicated by the action of an individual or group.

"Second, in its dealings with individual members of the faculty, while continuing to aim at friendly co-operation as an end, the administration needs to abandon a policy which creates the impression that a teacher's public utterances are subject to surveillance and that a so-called friendly interview is in fact the reprimand of a superior officer.

Beyond doubt it would greatly aid in this change if the administration were to abandon the yearly contract and appoint its teachers of higher rank with permanent tenure, subject to removal only for cause shown.

Third, the administration urgently needs to legalize its relation with the faculty as a body. Questions of university policy ought to be subject to discussion and criticism by the faculty as a matter of right, and the faculty's support and approval of such policies should be sought.

BOWMAN ANSWERS

The Educators' Bulletin contains the following answer from Chancellor John G. Bowman of the university:

"I have your letter of October 23 and the proof of the report for the American Association of University Professors as submitted by Prof. George H. Sabine and Prof. Carl Wittke. You invite my reply, which is as follows:

"First, the prejudice of one member of the committee was evident on his arrival at the university. He seemed eager to express his own views on the issue rather than to find the facts.

"Second, I regret the tendency in the article to make insinuations rather than to state facts.

"Third, an investigation of a university by the American Association of University Professors places upon the association an obligation to have its work conducted in fairness and executed in a judicial manner.

Last night Chancellor Bowman said he had nothing to add to that formal statement.

One faculty member who had seen the report declined to express himself.

The bulletin tells of the sending of Professors Sabine and Wittke here in May to make the investigation contained in the report.

It summarizes its investigation of the Liberal Club controversy which was followed by the dismissal of F. E. Woltman, graduate assistant and William Albertson and Arthur McDowell, students.

While here the investigators interviewed Chancellor Bowman, Dean L. P. Sieg, of the College and Graduate School, and some 16 members of the faculty. The investigators term the result of their investigation the "impressions which two friendly observers obtained from a fair sample of faculty opinion." The investigation was made at the request of officers of the American Association of University Professors.

HOUSE TO FIGHT REED 'DEAD-END' CANAL PROJECT

Pennsylvania's 36 Members To Demand Ohio-to-Lakes Route, Campbell Declares.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—Pennsylvania's 36 members in the House will support no measure for the canalization of the Beaver, Shenango and Mahoning Rivers which will not provide at the same time for the completion of the projected canal between the Ohio River and the Great Lakes, Congressman Guy E. Campbell declared today.

He declared that the bill introduced in the Senate by Senator David A. Reed for the authorization of a preliminary survey between the Ohio River and Youngstown would assist the main canal plans if the results of the engineers' findings were incorporated with surveys already made.

IMPORTANT LINK

"The deep channel in the rivers between the Ohio and Youngstown will be one of the most important links in the canal to the lakes," said Representative Campbell.

"It will mean an immediate outlet for Pittsburgh coal and will assist in the development of the Beaver Valley.

"It will be of immeasurable benefit to Youngstown and I cannot think that any group or any community would seek to have a 'dead-end' canal built from the Ohio to Mahoning basin at Youngstown and then oppose the completion of the canal from Youngstown to the lakes.

AMPLE WARNING ASSURED

"The federal government logically can work only for the national project, and this ties in the proposed waterway from the Ohio to the lakes with the St. Lawrence River and New York barge canal to the Atlantic seaboard. This is part of President Hoover's mammoth scheme and has the support of navigation experts, important business interests, students of economics and all who are interested in internal waterway improvements.

"The pending legislation provides for a preliminary survey and if anything develops which would be ulterior to the Pittsburgh district, the people there will have ample time to protect their interests. The Pennsylvania delegation in the House is pledged to a canal all the way from the Ohio to the lakes."

Three Tons of Candy For Mill Children

Carrying out a policy he established in 1920 when he went to the Edgar Thomson Steel Works, O. J. H. Hartsuff will next Tuesday give away three tons of candy to 5,500 children of the employes.

The hours of distribution will be from 2 to 4 p. m., the general superintendent taking charge in person, assisted by the office staff. Each child will receive one box of fine candy and another of plain sweet stuffs.

European Friendship Object of Catholics

BERLIN, Dec. 21.—(INS.)—A conference between leading Catholics of France and Germany began here today with the betterment of relations between the nations of Europe as its aim. Immediately after its convocation the conference wired a message of greeting to Pope Pius in Rome.

Although a number of prominent French and German industrialists are participating in the conference, it is purely a secular meeting, with no economic significance.

TAYLOR KILLING LAID TO 'DOPE'

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 21.—(INS.)—William Desmond Taylor, noted Hollywood film director, whose murder has been a seven-year mystery, was the victim of a dope plot.

He was slain because he "knew too much."

These statements tonight were attributed to an unnamed Folsom prison convict by Thomas Gannon, former prison director, commenting on the declaration of former Gov. Friend W. Richardson that Asa Keyes, former Los Angeles district attorney, had blocked the prosecution of the slayer of Taylor.

Richardson indicated information which he said he attempted to lay before the Los Angeles County grand jury solving the Taylor murder mystery came from a Folsom convict.

Gannon said he had gone to Folsom to hear the convict's story but had not been greatly impressed, feeling that the man was seeking a way out of prison. Gannon said the convict would not name the slayer but said the murder had been planned at a "dope party at the home of an actress."

The convict was later paroled, Gannon said.

"I had positive proof that a motion picture actress murdered Taylor," Richardson had declared.

It was after he had entered into a controversy with Keyes over alleged "framing" innocent men that Richardson said he was informed that the Folsom convict knew a great deal about the mysterious slaying of Taylor.

TAYLOR MURDER CASE BELIEVED FINALLY SOLVED

Ex-Governor of California Charges Motion Picture Actress Killed Movie Man.

former prosecutor denied the charges and added:

"Richardson is shaking the dead bones of William Desmond Taylor for political purposes."

KEYES NOW IN JAIL

Keyes is in jail pending appeal following his conviction several months ago for bribery while in office.

Captain of Detectives Ray Cato, of the Los Angeles Police Department, recalled, when shown the Richardson statement that a Folsom convict, whose name was Clayton Dorchester, had come to Los Angeles as a witness before the county grand jury, but that his evidence was not sufficient to bring about the arrest of any person he named.

This convict, as stated by Richardson, later was paroled from Folsom.

There is another convict, still in Folsom, who twice in the last two years has been instrumental in having the Taylor mystery reopened. In both instances a careful checking of his story has convinced police officers that his information was of a hearsay character.

ACTRESSSES QUESTIONED

The slaying of Taylor, who was about 40 years old, occurred in his lavishly furnished Hollywood court bungalow.

In the roundup of suspects three stood out. They were Mabel Normand, then in the heyday of her screen career; Edward Sands, an ex-convict and at one time valet-secretary of Taylor, and Mary Miles Minter, a star of the stage and screen at that time.

Miss Normand, police said, was in the bungalow 10 minutes before Taylor was shot, while letters and personal effects of Miss Minter were found there.

Both Miss Normand and Miss Minter were questioned extensively at the time, but police investigation absolved them of complicity.

Sands disappeared following the murder. Los Angeles detectives have traveled as far as Morocco on clews indicating his whereabouts.

No indictment ever was returned against Sands, but it was said at the district attorney's office that a blanket indictment charging the crime against him was on file there.

Richardson Charges Plot To Murder Taylor Witnesses

BERKELEY, Cal., Dec. 21.—(INS.)—Former Gov. Friend W. Richardson declared here today that Asa Keyes, while district attorney of Los Angeles, had blocked the prosecution of the murderer of William Desmond Taylor, film director, mysteriously shot to death in Los Angeles in February, 1922. Keyes is now under prison sentence for alleged acceptance of bribes while in office.

"I had positive proof that a motion picture actress murdered Taylor," said Richardson.

"The information came to me while I was governor and I went to Los Angeles and consulted the grand jury there.

"They told me there was no use in presenting the facts of the case and returning an indictment, because Keyes, then district attorney, would not prosecute the case."

"They explained," he continued, "that either Keyes or one of his deputies would be in the grand jury room and that before any person could be brought to trial for the murder, the important witnesses would be spirited away, bribed or murdered."

KEYES NOW IN PRISON

After going into the history of his differences and sharp exchanges, as Governor, with Keyes, Richardson said he heard a prisoner in Folsom Prison knew much about the murder of Taylor and that he explained the situation to the prison board.

"I told them," the former governor said, "that already the word was around that I had the solution of the murder and that unless we took quick action the convict in Folsom Prison would be murdered."

The convict was paroled and Richardson said the last he heard of him he was in Vera Cruz, Mexico.

RECORDS MAY BE LOST

In answer to the question as to why he had not presented the facts to Burton Fitts, present district attorney at Los Angeles, Richardson was quoted as saying he "left the Governor's office before Fitts became district attorney. The witnesses we had then probably we could not get together again. I don't even know where my records of the case are now."

Mt. Pleasant Robber Suspects Arrested

GREENSBURG, Pa., Dec. 21.—Capture in Buffalo, N. Y., of Walter Rollins and Peter Kubiak, of Mt. Pleasant, is believed by police to be the solution to eight robberies which occurred in the Mt. Pleasant district last winter. The youths are also alleged to have confessed to robbing the United Brethren parsonage in Scottdale in May, 1928.

Lengthy Skirts, Girls' Diets Hit By Health Chief

Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 21.

SHORT skirts for health was advocated by no less authority than Dr. Hugh S. Cumming, head of the United States public health service, speaking here. And girls shouldn't diet, he declared.

The mortality rate among young girls has increased sharply in recent years, Dr. Cummings said, and he attributed it to "the diet craze" which he called "both silly and dangerous."

As for skirts, they should not be worn lower than the knees, the surgeon general said.

Volunteer Firemen To Give Turkey Bazar

Members of the Lincoln Park Volunteer Fire Department will hold a turkey bazar tomorrow night in the firemen's hall, 7308 Verona boulevard. There will be games of euchre and 500. The hall is located near the end of the Lincoln avenue car line.

NOYES PRAISES NEW TEACHERS

Ten years ago only 30 per cent of the county school teachers had training two years beyond a high school education, while today approximately 100 per cent are so equipped.

E. C. Noyes, assistant superintendent of county schools so stated yesterday, in explaining that the coming generations, not only as they pertain to the county, but to the state will reap the benefit.

He says that a higher type of citizenship is sure to be the result, as well as an enlightened citizenship. Raising the qualifications for teachers in this state, in his judgment, was one of the finest thing that has been done for education in years. Mr. Noyes said that many of the elementary teachers are college graduates and that the qualifications of teachers are constantly being raised. Prospective teachers without them are having a hard time to obtain positions. The waiting list of eligibles was reported as decidedly large.

FISHER TO OPEN POLICE CIRCUIT

The telegraph-typewriter system with which sleuths hope to track down criminals more readily will be officially opened in 104 police headquarters in Pittsburgh and the rest of Pennsylvania tomorrow. At noon, in the county detective bureau, the first message will come over the wire from Gov. Fisher in Harrisburg—and then the printer machines will settle down to the business of broadcasting descriptions of criminals and the likely routes they are using to escape.

District Attorney Samuel H. Gardner has invited an audience of police authorities, state legislators and others to attend the opening.

Road Magnet Picks Up Manhole Covers

ABC Spinner

The PORCELAIN Washer

Years ahead in design, yet its price is lower than you think. It needs no wringer, as suds, rinse or blue water are extracted by centrifugal (spinning) force. When a tubful is washed, put them in the spinner to spin the suds back into the tub. Load the tub again and set it washing. Then rinse the washed clothes in the spinner chamber. Spin out the rinse water and they're ready for the line—spotlessly clean, damp-dry, fluffy, with no deep wringer creases so hard to iron out. Starch in the Spinner, too, if you starch. No extra tubs, starch pan, etc., needed with the ABC Spinner—just faster, better, nearly effortless washing. Modern washing by the most modern washer for modern busy women! That's the Spinner.

WHITE PLAGUE WAR HERE LED BY LONE WOMAN

Success of Tuberculosis League Due Largely to Alice Stewart's Courage.

By PENELOPE REDD.

This is a story written without the knowledge of its heroine. Consequently, without an accompanying photograph, to render graphic the personality of the staunch little person, who dwells in a penthouse above the city as once did St. Genevive, of Paris, in her tower.

This is the story of Alice Stewart, who is to Pittsburgh what Lillian Wald is to New York or Jane Addams to Chicago. But, because she deals primarily with physical woes instead of social ones, few know her name. When the ranking nurses of the United States desired someone to prepare the government nurses newly-burdened with a tremendous tuberculosis problem, they sent for Alice Stewart to train all superintendents of government hospitals. She formulated the methods of hospital procedure adopted nationally.

To Pittsburgh, however, this is not as important as the local work for which she alone is truly responsible.

OPENS SANATORIUM

Shortly, after the Tuberculosis League was founded in 1907 by a Pittsburgh citizen, who had experienced the desolation of the disease within his own family, Alice Stewart arrived with Miss Elsie Lawler to help organize the sanatorium on Bedford avenue.

At that time, beyond its active board of directors, the league had nothing more than a large, wooden mansion-house on Bedford avenue. The current group of debutantes organized themselves into the Dispensary Aid Society and the league began its work of attempting to educate, to prevent, and to cure tuberculosis in Allegheny County.

When Miss Elsie Lawler returned to Johns Hopkins in Baltimore to assume charge of that hospital, it largely became Alice Stewart's burden to struggle with the seemingly hopeless task of caring for the many helplessly stricken and to attempt the beginning of a building program.

CRIPPLED BY WAR

The building program, including laboratories, women's pavilion and fresh air school, was just inaugurated when the war deprived the league of many of its staff. Alice Stewart saw her nursing comrades go off on the most romantic adventure since Florence Nightingale. She stayed to do the humdrum work at home. At times, she even did the laundry, with the aid of one faithful helper. During the influenza epidemic, with an almost non-existent staff, some way or other Alice Stewart struggled through and on.

War days over, the original rambling wooden structure, ill-suited to sanatorium needs, remained the "main building." One remembers going up to the top of the old house to Alice Stewart's austere, cell-like room, where of an autumn evening preceding the Christmas Seal sale, she infected doubting spirits with her vision of a spacious building perfectly equipped for the league's needs.

BUILDINGS WON

With a sympathetic board of directors, aware of the integrity with which the Tuberculosis League was conducted, a building program was planned and consummated.

Today the splendid building, housing the Tuberculosis League's sanatorium, invites the layman to enter. Here is no sterile institution. Everywhere one turns, in the doctors' calm offices rich in color, in the comfortable library, in the happy lounging room for patients, one experiences the urgent concern for humanity which Alice Stewart's professional manner arbitrarily conceals.

High in her penthouse when the long day is done, Alice Stewart indulges in no reflection upon her personal sacrifice which her life devoted to the Tuberculosis League entails. It is a life of almost voluntary cloister, where physical energy and practical intelligence are directed upon administering the hospital and teaching prevention of tuberculosis.

Every single penny Christmas Seal that is purchased in Allegheny County furthers the work of the Tuberculosis League whose efficacy is unchallenged in the health work of the entire United States.

New Record for Sea Radio Talk Is Set

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 31.—(AP.)—A new long-distance record for a telephone conversation with a ship at sea was believed established when Isadore Rosenberg, New York importer stopping here, talked with his mother and brother on board the liner Leviathan, in mid-Atlantic. Rosenberg said the three-minute conversation was as distinct as a local call. Pacific Telephone and Telegraph officials said the call was the longest since the commercial service between ship and shore was inaugurated two weeks ago.

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., Dec. 21.—(AP.)—Abie Fleming, 18, of Fostoria, O., was held by police today for Ohio authorities in connection with a holdup of a bank at Vanlue, O., December 17, when two young men escaped with about $600.

CHICAGO Dec. 21.

THE son and daughter of Mrs. Bridget Cronin, 87, went to law over their mother's property, and death won.

The son, Harry J. Cronin, wanted a conservator appointed. The daughter, Mrs Agnes Mulvihill, opposed it. She denied she had "chained her mother to a wheel chair," as Cronin charged, and she denied she had used undue influence to obtain a deed to property from her mother.

The court decided in favor of the daughter. When she broke the news, her mother collapsed, and died yesterday.

Woman Pays Board Each Week to Keep Man Locked in Jail

CHICAGO, Dec. 21.—(AP.)—Miss Fannie Kaplan is determined to keep Anthony E. Heidererich, a butcher, in jail, and Circuit Judge Klarkowski believes her within her rights.

Miss Kaplan won a $2,500 judgment against Heidererich in 1925 for injuries suffered in an automobile accident. Heidererich disappeared and it was not until November 30 of this year that Miss Kaplan found him. She had him arrested, and he has been kept in jail since, Miss Kaplan paying $3.50 weekly for his jail board.

Heidererich's friends sought to obtain his release yesterday, but Judge Klarkowski held that Miss Kaplan was within her legal rights in keeping him locked up until he pays up.

The incarceration was made possible, her attorney explained, because Miss Kaplan's suit for damages contained a malice count permitting her to have him locked up if he failed to pay the judgment.

LINDSEY FACING CALIFORNIA BAN

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 21.—(AP.)—The board of governors of the California state bar has referred the question of the status in this state of Ben B. Lindsey, recently disbarred in Colorado, to the disciplinary committee for report in San Francisco at the next monthly meeting.

Lindsey, former Juvenile Court judge, was disbarred in Colorado for accepting $35,000 in an estate settlement case.

The board of governors discussed the case at great length yesterday and then referred it to committee. The delay in consideration of the matter, it was stated by members of the board, was occasioned by the possibility of Lindsey filing an appeal with the Colorado Supreme Court before the time alloted for such an appeal expires on December 24.

His trip to the automobile centers was to look over the credit bureaus there with reference to giving special service to the automobile group in Pittsburgh.

Members of the Pittsburgh Automobile Dealers' Association heard Mr. Truesdale speak Friday night in the Pittsburgh Athletic Club. He explained how the credit bureau here is equipped to grant the automobile group special service. The weekly radio program of the Retail Credit Men's Association, which usually are given Saturday nights, will be changed to Tuesday evenings next week.

Congress Acts to Put Railroad Mergers Into Effect

CONSOLIDATION PLAN PROVIDES 19 BIG SYSTEMS

I. C. C. Removes Barriers And Pushes Completion of Huge Rail Realignment.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—(AP.)—Legislation is necessary to put into effect the national railroad consolidation program proposed today by the Interstate Commerce Commission, in the opinion of congressional leaders, and a drive to that end was advocated by Senator Watson, of Indiana, the Republican leader.

Senator Fess (Rep.), of Ohio, the author of a consolidation bill before the Interstate Commerce Committee, arranged for an early conference with members of the commission.

Senator Watson, a former chairman of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, said he would favor congressional action as soon as the pending tariff bill is disposed of.

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

A plan for the consolidation of all the railroads in the United States into 19 systems was announced by the Interstate Commerce Commission today. The formal proposal of the commission coincided exactly with the groupings of railroads predicted in the Sun-Telegraph on Friday.

The commission's action represents the first official attempt to clarify the muddled railroad merger situation. The announcement of the plan carries out the provisions of the transportation act requiring the commission to formulate a plan. For years the commission has insisted that it was unable to follow the mandate of the law.

Barriers Removed

While leading railroads have been working behind the scenes to buy interests in strategic lines, the commission up to the present has refused to approve any important mergers before the completion of a nation-wide program. The plan announced yesterday definitely removes the barriers against railroad consolidations.

While all of the leading railroads' factions will bitterly oppose certain parts of the plan which do not coincide with their own schemes, the commission's program follows the desires of the Pennsylvania Railroad more closely than those of its chief opponents, the Van Sweringen brothers of Cleveland.

The commission has recommended the formation of five Eastern trunk line systems. These would be the Pennsylvania, the Wabash, the New York Central, the Chesapeake and Ohio and the Baltimore and Ohio.

Van Sweringens' Aims

The Van Sweringers wanted four systems. Instead of building a new giant railway around the Wabash, that line would become a part of the Baltimore and Ohio, which is working with them. Other dispositions would be made of the remaining lines now scheduled to join the Wabash.

The Van Swearingens wanted the most important of these lines to become parts of either their own Chesapeake and Ohio system or of the Baltimore and Ohio.

The Wabash, now controlled by the Pennsylvania, under the commission's plan will obtain lines to the eastern seaboard by the acquisition of the proposed Taplin trunk line to be built around the Pittsburgh and West Virginia. It will also get the Norfolk and Western from the Pennsylvania and the Seaboard Air Line. The formation of the Taplin line will mean the taking away of the Western Maryland from the Baltimore and Ohio and the Wheeling and Lake Erie from the Chesapeake and Ohio. This will be a severe blow to the Van Swearingens.

The plan also comes as a complete defeat of L. F. Loree's southwestern merger scheme, since the Kansas City Southern will go to the Union Pacific, the "Katy" to the Burlington and the Cotton Belt to the Illinois Central.

The consummation of the commission's proposals will be a matter of years and it is altogether possible that changes will be made in the future, owing to opposition on the part of various carriers. The commission's hands will be tied in many cases unless Congress takes action putting the supervision of railroad holding companies in its hands.

The outstanding consolidations recommended by the commission are as follows:

The Wabash system will include the Lehigh Valley, Wheeling and Lake Erie, Pittsburgh and West Virginia, Western Maryland, Chesapeake and Ohio of Indiana and Seaboard Air Line.

Nickel Plate System

The Chesapeake and Ohio-Nickel Plate system will include the Hocking Valley, Pere Marquette, Erie, Delaware, Lackawanna and Western, Bessemer and Lake Erie, Pittsburgh and Shawmut and Chicago and Illinois Midland.

The New York Central would acquire the Virginian, Ulster and Delaware, the Rutland, except the division to be allotted to the Boston and Maine, and various short lines.

The Pennsylvania system will include the Long Island Railroad, West Jersey and Seashore, Baltimore, Chesapeake and Atlantic, one-half interest in the Wilkes-Barre Connecting Railroad; New York Connecting Railroad, and the New York and Long Branch Railroad.

The Baltimore and Ohio will acquire the Reading, the Central of New Jersey, the Buffalo, Susquehanna, Chicago and Alton and the Buffalo, Rochester and Pittsburgh.

The Baltimore and Ohio will have one-half interest in the Detroit, Toledo and Ironton, the Detroit and Toledo Short Line and the Monon.

Atlantic Coast Line

In the South, the Atlantic Coast Line system will include the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad, the Louisville and Nashville, the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis, the Clinchfield, Atlanta, Birmingham and Coast, Gulf, Mobile and Northern, New Orleans Great Northern and one-quarter interest in the Chicago, Indianapolis and Louisville.

The Southern will be exclusive of the Mobile and Ohio, which goes to the Chicago Northwestern. The system will include Norfolk Southern, Tennessee Central, Florida East Coast and one-quarter interest in the Monon.

The Illinois Central system will include Norfolk Southern, the St. Louis Southwestern, Tennessee Central, built around the present set-up, with the inclusion of a number of short lines, including the Gulf and Ship Island, Yazoo and Mississippi and Central of Georgia.

The Chicago Northwestern system will include the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Omaha, Chicago and Eastern Illinois, Mobile and Ohio, Columbus and Greenville.

The Great Northern-Northern Pacific allocation provides for merger of these systems with the Burlington excluded.

The Milwaukee system will acquire the two United States steel lines, the Duluth Missabe and Northern, the Duluth and Iron Range and the Chicago, Milwaukee and Gary and various short lines.

The new Burlington system will include the Colorado and Southern, the Missouri, Kansas and Texas; Fort Worth and Denver City; the Quincy, Omaha and Kansas, and the Trinity and Brazos, in which the system will have one-half interest, and will also have a one-half interest in the Great Western Railway.

Union Pacific

The Union Pacific will include the Kansas City Southern and Oregon Short Line, Los Angeles and Salt Lake, the Oregon Washington Railroad, and the one-half interest with the Burlington in the Great Western.

Other systems in the Southwest will be built along the Santa Fe, the Missouri Pacific and a Rock Island-Frisco system. This latter system will include the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific, its subsidiary, the Rock Island and Gulf, the St. Louis-San Francisco and its subsidiary, the St. Louis, San Francisco and Texas. The system will also include the Louisiana and Arkansas Railway, the Alabama Central and the Mississippi Railway.

The Southern Pacific system proposed by the commission would include the Texas and New Orleans, Northwestern Pacific, San Diego and Arizona, Nevada Oregon, and approximately 60 short lines.

The plan proposes that the Boston and Maine system shall include the Delaware and Hudson, Bangor and Aroostook, Maine Central and the Rutland.

The other New England system would include the New Haven, New York, Ontario and Western, the Lehigh and Hudson and the Lehigh and New England.

The Delaware and Hudson consolidation proposal was given no place in the plan outlined by the commission. The road had asked for the Buffalo, Rochester and Pittsburgh, and the Jersey Central, which will go to the Baltimore and Ohio under the commission's plan and the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western, which goes to the Nickel Plate system.

Two Western Senators Rap Rail Consolidation Plan

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—(AP.)—Plans of the Interstate Commerce Commission on railroad consolidation today brought declarations of opposition from two senators from the West.

Consolidation of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific railroads as proposed in the plan would be a "great clamity" for the Northwest, Senator Wheeler, (Dem.), of Montana, asserted.

Presenting the commission's report for incorporation in the congressional record, Wheeler said that two Northwestern lines were competing roads and added he would vigorously oppose any attempt to link them into a single system.

Senator Pittman, (Dem.), of Nevada, also opposed the unification of the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern, saying it would afford no reduction in freight rates on farm products, minerals and logs which he said make up the chief freight of the Northwest.

Consolidation of the Northern Pacific and Great Northern, Wheeler said, would be carrying out "practically what the Supreme Court said Jim Hill couldn't do because it would be a violation of the anti-trust law."

The Montanan said he was "perfectly amazed" at the commission's proposal.

Senator Howell, of Nebraska, a Republican of the Interstate Commerce Committee and an opponent of consolidation, expressed pleasure that the plan contemplated as many key systems as it did, but questioned the advantages to be gained even under the proposed plan.

MONROE WARING KILLED BY TRAIN

HARRISBURG, Dec. 21.—(INS)—The shadow of death fell athwart the home of Frank M. Waring, of this city, twice within a few hours.

William Shutter, Jr., of Rexmont, Lebanon County, was shot and killed by a state trooper while attempting to rob the Waring home here yesterday.

A short time later word was received that Waring's son, Monroe C. Waring, brother of Fred Waring and member of the "Waring's Pennsylvanians" Orchestra, had been killed in a train-automobile grade crossing accident at Tyrone.

County officials are investigating the crossing accident in which Mrs. Edith Lamborn, woman crossing watcher, and Mrs. Lois Waring, who was riding with her husband, were injured.

Mrs. Lamborn was struck by flying fragments and glass of the Waring automobile, which was struck by a passenger train on the Pennsylvania railroad in spite of the watchwoman's efforts to flag the train.

Waring, who was 34, died in a hospital here a few hours after the accident. Mrs. Waring is still unconscious, suffering a fractured skull.

KIDNAPER GIVEN 30-YEAR TERM

DETROIT, Dec. 21.—(AP.)—Joseph (Legs) Laman was sentenced to from 30 to 40 years in the Michigan state prison at Jackson today for his part in the kidnaping last April of Fred Begeman, retired Wyandotte bootlegger. Laman was convicted by a Circuit Court jury a week ago.

The sentence caused Laman to lose momentarily the composure he has maintained since he first became involved in kidnaping ventures last summer when detectives shot him as he was collecting $4,000 ransom for the release of David Cass, 23, who was later found slain near Flint, Mich.

"I am innocent of this," Laman told Judge Murphy. "Public sentiment has convicted me."

Laman grinned and winked at the deputies, however, as they led him from court after his sentencing.

U. S. BROADENS OCEAN LIQUOR DISPUTE POLICY

Plan Empowers Summoning Of Witnesses; Goes Into Effect in I'm Alone Case.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—(AP.)—A broader American policy toward international arbitration has been decided upon by Secretary Stimson.

The new plan has been put into effect in connection with the arbitration of the sinking of the Canadian rum runner, I'm Alone, last spring.

A bill was introduced in the Senate today by Chairman Norris, of the Judiciary Committee, to allow the arbiters in the I'm Alone case to call witnesses and take testimony, test the credulity of witnesses, and hold in contempt those who opposed its rulings. The I'm Alone case was referred to arbitration after the American and Canadian governments in an exchange of notes had been unable to agree on several points including the position of the vessel when the Coast Guard patrol boat began pursuit onto the high seas. The I'm Alone was sunk by another Coast Guard vessel with a loss of life.

Previously international arbitration has in general been confined to the consideration of briefs submitted by the two sides. State Department officials explained tonight, however, that the new policy will permit the taking of further testimony and the conducting of hearings to secure all possible facts. In addition, commissions of perjury would be dealt with, if the Norris bill is enacted.

Congress will reconvene on Monday, January 6, in the new year.

This morning he was taken back to his cell still ill.

Jailer Clement Peoples said Pantages has been taken to the hospital from time to time.

Moody, of San Francisco, and the bridegroom's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Corbitt Moody, of Burlingame, Cal.

A wedding breakfast will be served at the Wills home after the ceremony. After a wedding tour of two or three weeks the young couple will be at home in San Francisco.

WIDOW REFUSED COMPENSATION OVER TROOPER

Board Holds Constable Killed on Social Call Was Not on State Duty.

HARRISBURG, Dec. 21.—(INS.)—A member of the state police while making a "social call" on a woman friend is not furthering his employer's business and his widow cannot collect compensation insurance, the Compensation Board held in a formal opinion made public today.

The opinion was given in the case of Mrs. Sophia Busch, of Cambridge Springs, who had appealed from the disallowance of the district referee.

The board's opinion did not attempt to fix responsibility for the death of Victor Busch, the policeman, or to decide whether he had been murdered or committed suicide. His body was found outside an apartment occupied by Blanche M. Haffner, of Punsutawney. His service revolver and cap were found on a bed in the apartment.

Counsel for Mrs. Busch had advanced the argument that state policemen are liable to call even when making visits on friends, whether it is day or night, and that the entire commonwealth should be considered as the employer's premises. The board disagreed.

Mrs. Busch has filed objection to the board's opinion in the Dauphin County Court and asked for a court trial.

SOVIET GREETS BRITISH ENVOY

MOSCOW, Dec. 21.—(AP.)—Sir Esmond Ovey, new British ambassador to Soviet Russia, today presented his credentials to the Soviet government. K. Sokolnokov, Russian ambassador to Great Britain, presented his credentials in London yesterday.

LONDON, Dec. 21.—(AP.)—Reports that King George's failure to receive the Soviet ambassador yesterday was due to his aversion to shaking hands with the representative of the regime which executed the Czar, his cousin, were denied unofficially in authoritative quarters today.

"This ludicrous report was based purely on the will to speculation," it was said. "We have simply ignored it. The King is not undertaking any duties of state at the present time. The Soviet ambassador was received by the Prince of Wales and that was the end of it."

MIDNIGHT MASS TO BE REVIVED ON CHRISTMAS

Abandoned Score of Years in Pittsburgh, Custom Will Be Renewed This Year.

Thousands of child voices mingling with the deeper ones in their paean of praise; swinging censors and singed perfumes mingling with burning wax; pealing organs, hundreds of priests in vestments gay with color; churches alight with flaming torches and faltering candle tongues. Then tens of thousands of the faithful marching, perhaps through snow, through midnight darkness.

Thus will the Christ-Child be honored in Pittsburgh and surrounding counties Christmas morning, when the Catholic churches again renew the age-old custom of midnight Christmas mass.

REVIVAL

For nearly a score of years the midnight mass was abandoned here. Then last week at a synod attended by the priests of the 10 counties of Western Pennsylvania it was ruled permissable at pastors' pleasure.

Accordingly, in nearly every church of the Pittsburgh diocese solemn high mass will be sung at midnight. In St. Paul's Cathedral, Fifth avenue and Craig street, Bishop Hugh C. Boyle will pontificate at a pontifical mass, assisted by the Rev. Dr. W. J. McMullen, vicar general, two deacons of honor, a deacon and a sub-deacon of the mass and a master of ceremonies.

In the sanctuary will be the surpliced choir; in the loft the mixed choir of men and boys.

Excepting Epiphany Church, Washington street, where the newspapermen's mass at 2:30 o'clock will be observed as usual, masses in the majority of churches will begin a few minutes after 12 Christmas morning.

CAROL SINGING

At all the masses in Epiphany Church a special musical program will be given. At the 2:30 o'clock and 5 o'clock masses, solemn high, the augmented boys' choir will sing carols, as well as A. Botazzo's Missa Festiva. At 11 o'clock, the Coronation Mass, by L. Cherubini, will be sung, with a full orchestra accompaniment.

St. Peter's, North Side, will have its first Christmas mass at midnight; in St. Agnes', Fifth avenue, the Rev. D. H. Hegarty will be celebrant; the Rev. James M. Delaney, deacon; the Rev. B. J. McBride, sub-deacon, and the Rev. Paul Coyle, master of ceremonies.

In St. Stephen's, Hazelwood, the Rev. D. J. Devlin, pastor, will be celebrant; the Rev. Philip A. Dugan, deacon, and the Rev. James J. O'Connell, sub-deacon.

The senior and junior choirs of 50 boys and 20 men under the direction of the Rev. James Hanlon, will sing at the midnight mass in St. Catherine's Church, Beechview.

Mozart's Twelfth Mass will be sung at midnight in the Help of Christian's Church, Meadow street. In the Sacred Heart Church, Walnut street and Shady avenue, as well as many other churches in and out of the city, the service will be held.

Two masses will be held in Holy Rosary Church, both beginning a few minutes after midnight. One, a solemn high, will be sung in the church, with the Rev. D. J. Malade, pastor, as celebrant. A low mass will be said in the chapel.

At St. Mary's of the Point, Ferry street, the Rev. D. A. Lawless, pastor, will be celebrant at the midnight mass.

'Dead' Baby Revived By Electric Device

SYDNEY, N. S. W., Dec. 21.—An electric device to stimulate the action of the heart after a person has been "dead" for several minutes has been perfected by Dr. M. C. Lidwell, Sydney heart specialist.

By its aid a supposedly stillborn child was brought to life at a Sydney maternity hospital after stimulation by the machine for about 15 minutes. The child is still alive and is 18 months old.

What Christmas Means to Me

By MRS. CALVIN COOLIDGE

to the later chapters in which I find myself making preparations for the observance of Christmas in the White House, with a fireplace in every room making convenient entrances for Santa Claus, and I do believe he took advantage of every one of them, so many were the lovely gifts he left behind.

Several days before Christmas, laurel wreaths tied with bright red bows were hung at the windows and a huge one, trimmed with red berries and pine cones and lighted at night with tiny colored electric lights, was placed over the front doorway.

The first year there were two Christmas trees, a large one in the blue room on the first floor and a smaller one in the boy's room upstairs.

Deeper Meaning of Day

Somehow we did not seem to have the enthusiasm for our tree that we had always felt in our own little home, and I charged myself with thinking of some way of giving a deeper meaning to our observance of the Birthday of the Christ Child, with the result that on following years we set aside the south end of the East Room for a miniature scene of Nativity.

This was arranged on a slightly raised dais, covered with green carpeting and surrounded by potted ferns. At the back were placed evergreen trees, the tallest in the center, the shortest ones at the ends.

At the topmost peak of the middle tree gleamed a silvery star with a tiny electric light in the center. Beneath the projecting branches stood a little thatched, covered stable. The rays from the small light fell upon the manger where lay the Figure of the Christ Child. His mother, Mary, knelt at one side, with Joseph standing by her.

In the shadows at the back could be seen a cow, an ass and some sheep. Just outside were the Wise Men coming to worship, leading their camels and bearing in their hands gifts of "gold, frankincense and myrrh." Little wax angels, "The Havenly Host," hovered overhead among the trees, and finally there were the Shepherd Boys tending their flocks of sheep.

At one side a mirror simulated a pool of water, reflecting the overhanging branches of the trees in its surface. From this quiet corner, the real Spirit of Christmas seemed to radiate to every recess of that beautiful old mansion and beyond.

On Christmas Eve, carols were sung on the north portico—led by a chorus of mixed voices numbering about 60, from the church which we attended. They were accompanied by a piano and three trumpeters from the Marine Band. A large company of people gathered around and joined in the singing of the more familiar songs.

Other Happy Memories

Other happy memories of White House Christmas Seasons are connected with the day before Christmas, when I was asked to attend a children's party at one of the large theaters. The children were entertained for an hour with moving pictures and vaudeville, at the close of which a back curtain was raised and a huge Christmas tree disclosed, while the ringing of sleigh bells announced the approach of Santa Claus as he came hurrying on the stage with his twinkling eyes, his rosy cheeks, his merry dimples and—yes—his nose like a cherry, just as our story books describe him. I was allowed to go up on the stage and assist him in handing out the bags of gifts to the children.

And sometimes I went to visit the sick children in the hospital. There, too, all was bright and cheery in expectation of the arrival of the merry old gentleman. Once some of the children and I had our pictures taken together and a little boy saw one of them in a newspaper. In it I was seated in front of a Christmas tree with a little boy on my lap. A little girl lay in bed beside us and other children were gathered around. I was reading a Christmas story to them.

One day the grandmother of the little boy who saw the picture told him that she was going to Washington and she thought perhaps she would see Mrs. Coolidge. Looking up at her he said: "Grandmother, I wish you would take me to Washington so Mrs. Coolidge could hug me."

I consider that one of the finest compliments ever paid me, and if on this Christmas I could gather around me all the little boys and girls to read them a story and give them a hug, I am sure it would be one of the very nicest Christmas times I ever had!

WEDDING SAVES GIRL JAIL TERM

BALTIMORE, Dec. 21.—Why spoil the happiness of a bride?

Why, indeed, thought Mrs. Margaret Upton, especially when the bride happens to be your 16-year-old sister?

And so it came about that little Mary Sullivan, who was married and booked as an incorrigible minor all within 15 minutes, walked out of Southwestern Police Court radiantly happy and leaning on the arm of her bridegroom, Joseph Stencil, 21.

Mrs. Upton, who had had a warrant sworn out for Mary's appearance in court today told Magistrate Pohlhaus:

"As long as Mary's married I think the best thing to do is kiss her and forget about this incorrigibility business."

Magistrate Pohlhaus thought the same and dismissed the case.

Mary and Joseph had been neighborhood sweethearts. Both live in the 1,000 block, Hollins street. They were married by the Rev. R. H. Stone, pastor of Union Methodist Episcopal Church.

2 COMMUNISTS TAKEN TO PEN

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 21.—(AP.)—Tom Johnson, of Cleveland, and Charles Guynn, of Lansing, O., two youthful Communists convicted of criminal syndicalism at St. Clairsville recently, began serving five-year terms in Ohio Penitentiary today.

Their attitude softened since their impassioned speeches to the court which sentenced them, Johnson and Guynn entered the penitentiary quietly and without protest.

Johnson said that the International Labor Defense of New York City was working to raise the bond of $5,000 each for him and Guynn pending hearing of their appeal and that they expect to be free on bond in 10 days. Johnson and Guynn were arrested at a Communist International "Red Day" demonstration in Martins Ferry last March 1. It was broken up by the American Legion and police. Lil Andrews, 19, Cleveland, convicted with them of distributing inflammatory literature, was taken today to Marysville Reformatory to serve an indeterminate term.

Roads to Cost Ohio County $341,000

MARION, O., Dec. 21.—(AP.)—Road, bridge and ditch work in prospect in Marion County during 1930 will require an expenditure of approximately $341,000, says Cecil R. Leavens, county surveyor, following a visit with county commissioners to Columbus, where they attended the Ohio meeting of county and city officials.

MAN CONFESSES CAVE ABDUCTION

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 21.—(AP.)—Confessing he had abducted a 14-year-old school girl and held her prison more than 24 hours in a cave under the garage at his home, Russell C. Arnold, 53, told police today he was ready to plead guilty and spend the rest of his life in prison.

The child, bruised and suffering from exposure, was rescued yesterday from Arnold's underground chamber, which he said he dug several years ago so he could have absolute quiet in his study of "personal magnetism."

Arnold enticed the girl to his home by promising her 75 cents with which to buy Christmas presents for her mother and younger brother. He placed her in a trunk, which he dragged to the cave. She was found chained to a bed.

Jerry Van Camp, father of the girl, said today he would ask the death penalty for Arnold.

Visiting the police station where Arnold is held, the father grasped a revolver from an officer and attempted to shoot the prisoner. Officers subdued him after a struggle.

Frank & Seder Take Over Grand Arcade

Frank & Seder's will extend their store facilities to the Grand Theater basement and arcade, J. H. Frank, president, announced yesterday.

The firm will open three shops in the arcade, to feature millinery, shoes and dresses. The theater basement will be used to extend the downstairs store of the firm, this being made possible by an agreement between the owners of the theater building and McCrory's store. The arrangement provides for an archway through the McCrory basement to the theater basement from the Frank & Seder store. The opening date will be around February 1.

"VERY THANKFUL FOR RESULTS FROM KONJOLA"

"Gained 20 Pounds Within Short Time After I Began With This New Medicine," Says Pittsburgh Man.

Konjola is a different medicine in many ways. It is chiefly different in that it seems at the very peak of its powers when pitted against those obstinate cases of stomach, kidney, liver and bowel ailments, which have resisted every other medicine tried.

MR. OLLIE E. SMITH

It differs, too, in that it is a medicine of 32 ingredients, 22 of them the juices of roots and herbs—work together with the sufferer's food. The organs of digestion and elimination are cleansed and stimulated, and the system is purified by the release of poisons and fermentations. Konjola is not a "cure-all," there is no such medicine, but Konjola does work along with nature in the building up and stimulation of the ailing organs. Read the experience of Mr. Ollie E. Smith, 1615 Brighton Road, Pittsburgh, it is but one of hundreds which come to the attention of the Konjola Man in your city, at the Dow Drug Store (formerly McCulloch's), Penn Avenue and Sixth Street, Pittsburgh. He is there to explain the merits of this new and different medicine, and to show you the records of hundreds of other sufferers who have found new health through Konjola. Here is Mr. Smith's tribute to Konjola:

"For more than three years I had suffered from severe pains in the back. Nothing I could do would relieve me of the most stubborn case of catarrh, and I had come to the point where I had no appetite at all. The slightest cold would hang on for months at a time. I would become feverish and my muscles would ache and become stiff. I often found it impossible to report for my duties as a taxi driver, and I finally gave up in despair.

"Three months ago I began taking Konjola and felt a change for the better after taking three bottles. I continued with this medicine and have now taken ten bottles in all. I gradually improved with each day until now I feel better than I have felt in years. I have gained twenty pounds during this time, eat what I want, sleep soundly every night and have not missed a day at my work in weeks. My long hours are no longer something to look forward to with dread. I am indeed thankful for the relief this wonderful medicine brought me, and urge any one suffering as I did, to use Konjola."

Konjola contains no alcohol, no nerve-deadening drugs, no heart-depressing chemicals. It needs no such dangerous ingredients. It is every drop pure, and every drop works.

There is a Konjola Man in Pittsburgh at the Dow Drug Store (formerly McCulloch's), Penn Avenue and Sixth Street, where he is meeting the public and explaining the merits of this new and different medicine. Konjola is also sold at all Dow Drug Stores in Pittsburgh and vicinity.

'GOLDEN MASS' SAID BY POPE BEFORE 70,000

Pontiff Cheered by Throngs In St. Peter's, Gets Many Gifts on 50th Anniversary.

VATICAN CITY, Dec. 21.—(AP.)—Pope Pius XI today celebrated his "golden mass," the fiftieth anniversary of his first mass to the day, before an immense congregation in St. Peter's. Nearly 70,000 persons were present, filling the cathedral.

The ceremony was much more elaborate and colorful than the mass the Pontiff said yesterday in the Cathedral of St. John Lateran in Rome, when he was attended in a simple setting by a small group of invited ecclesiastics. The Pope left Vatican state territory for the first time to go to St. John Lateran, thus ending the long period of self-imposed confinement of the popes.

GREETED BY CHEERS

The Pope was borne into St. Peter's on the "Sedia Gestatoria" to the strains of the silver trumpets of the Noble Guards. When he appeared the congregation broke into cheers of "evviva il Papa" (Long live the Pope). He attempted to still the handclapping and cheering as he was brought up the nave, but without avail. He had to content himself with making the sign of the cross in benediction to the throng.

The Sistine Choir sang the "Tuus Petrus" (Thou Art Peter), which always greets his holiness on a formal ritualistic occasion. After putting on the sacred vestments, the Pope knelt at the bottom of the altar steps and then began the mass, reciting the phrases in a clear, firm voice.

RECEIVES MANY GIFTS

The Pope returned to his apartments afterward to the applause and cheers of the congregation.

He was ordained a priest December 20, 1879, as Don Achille Ratti and said his first mass on December 21 at San Carlo Alcorso.

He received today many gifts from his admirers, Cardinal Merry Del Val, archpriest of St. Peter's, presented him a richly ornamented chalice studded with gems. Officials of the "Italian Catholic Action" Society gave him a large sum of money raised throughout Italy by popular subscription.

Rosenwald's Gift Aids Illiteracy Fund

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—(AP.)—The Julius Rosenwald Foundation of Chicago has given $15,000 for the use of the national advisory committee on illiteracy appointed several weeks ago by President Hoover.

The gift is the second made available by the foundation within the past month for the use of the government in making educational studies. The first was for $100,000 to be used in making a national survey which is expected to result in recommendations on what part the government should take in American educational development.

The pageant was fostered by the North Side Chamber of Commerce, the Business Men's Association of the East North Side and the North Side Market House Association.

Humbert Wedding Stamps Approved

ROME, Dec. 21.—(AP.)—The council of ministers, with Premier Mussolini presiding, today approved issuance of special postage stamps to commemorate the coming wedding of Crown Prince Humbert. 'ARMIES' TO AID NEEDY OF CITY

Hundreds of needy in Pittsburgh this week will receive Christmas baskets from the Salvation Army and Volunteers of America.

The Army will distribute more than 1,000 baskets. For six weeks Army workers, under the direction of Col. and Mrs. C. B. Campbell, have been making visits to homes to determine who shall be given the baskets.

The central distribution will be made at 10 a. m. Tuesday at 425 Second avenue. Baskets also will be given out in Carnegie, Tarentum, Homestead, Braddock and McKeesport.

Help offered by the Army will not be confined entirely to baskets. There will be free entertainments and gifts of fuel and other necessities, and in the organization's own institutions such as its workshops and hospitals, there will be free Christmas dinners for the homeless.

Six hundred baskets, each containing 15 articles, will be given at the same time by the Volunteers of America at their headquarters, 724 East Diamond street.

Edward Crump, Allegheny County commander of the American Legion, will give out the first basket. On Christmas Day 1,000 dinners will be served.

The usual New Year's eve party for children will be held December 31, when 700 children will be feted. Maj. R. H. Ives is general chairman of the holiday program, assisted by Capts. Sarah Dalbrow and W. E. Collins.

Language Test in Fiume Citizenship

ROME, Dec. 21.—(AP.)—Premier Mussolini, as minister of the interior, today obtained approval of a bill giving the prefect of Fiume the right to confer Italian nationality on foreigners of five years' residence in that city, who have adopted Italian as their language of daily use.

DEPUTIES FREED IN KILLING OF 6

BURNSVILLE, N. C., Dec. 21.—(AP.)—Eight McDowell County deputy sheriffs who fought a battle with a strike mob at the gates of a Marion cotton mill October 2, tonight stood free of all charges growing out of the death of six strikers.

The deputies—Webb Fender, Robert Ward, Charles Tate, Taylor Greene, William Twiggs, James Owens, Broadus Robbins and Dave Jarrett—were acquitted of a second degree murder charge by a Yancy County jury which deliberated over the case slightly more than 22 hours.

The trial was brought here from McDowell County on a change of venue asked by the state.

The men were accused of having deliberately fired into a milling mass of strikers and strike sympathizers who gathered at the gates of the Marion Manufacturing Company cotton mill the morning of October 2 in an effort to prevent employes from entering the mill. A strike had been called unexpectedly at 1 o'clock that morning.

Pipes Carry Liquor To Sharon Speakeasy

SHARON, Pa., Dec. 21.—Seventy gallons of liquor and 125 gallons of wine, which police say was to be used for Christmas trade, were confiscated today in raids in Shenango Valley.

In one of the raids, "Black Pete" Valdigo, who was questioned for two days following the bombing of the home of District Attorney Leo H. McKay last summer, was held as owner of one of the most modern speakeasies uncovered in the county. Officers were forced to tear down a brick wall to locate the source of liquor which was piped in the house and operated by automatic spighots.

THREE STATES TO HAVE PART IN CELEBRATION

Anniversary of Braddock's Defeat to Be Observed by Penna., Virginia, Maryland

Plans for the national observance of the one hundred seventy-fifth anniversary of Braddock's defeat, to be held July 9, 1930, on the site of that memorable battle of the French and Indian War, provide for a new slant on the historical significance of Braddock's expedition against Fort Duquesne.

Although the clash of arms on the banks of the Monongahela occurred in 1755—and was fought 20 years before Lexington, Concord and Bunker Hill—it is now regarded as a combat belonging to the American Revolution.

Representative Clyde Kelly, who introduced a bill last week for the appointment of a United States commission to co-operate with the Pennsylvania Historical Commission and other organizations in the celebration, makes the flat-footed declaration that the big fight in the woods at the mouth of Turtle Creek was a stroke for American independence.

"The result proved that the American colonists must depend upon themselves," says Congressman Kelly, "and that their Colonial soldiers could outfight the British."

GREAT PARADE PLANNED

Braddock's campaign proved a training school for George Washington, Dan Morgan and other distinguished officers who commanded the Continentals when the Americans decided in 1775 that they must take affairs into their own hands, defend their own frontiers and shake off the fetters of the British king.

Eminent historians and teachers during the last quarter of a century have shown an inclination to accept Congressman Kelly's viewpoint on the importance of Braddock's ill-starred affair as an incident forecasting those more conspicuous movements toward independence as manifested in the Mecklenburg resolutions, the Boston Massacre, Patrick Henry's demand "for liberty or death" and the call of the first Continental Congress. In the light of the "new history" extraordinary plans will be made to celebrate the anniversary of Braddock's Defeat.

Congressman Kelly will ask for the printing of a special postage stamp commemorating the event, the British ambassador will be invited, and there will be a great military parade. Several historical pageants will be given.

THREE STATES AID

Three states will have a part in the celebration. In Alexandria, Va., where Braddock's army landed the debutantes are looking forward to a ball in colonial costume, such as were held in the old town when young Col. Washington and the Cavalliers joined with the lowland beauties in dancing the stately minuet.

The belles of Frederick, Md., are anticipating a similar party to prove the oldtime social prominence of their ancient town.

Winchester, Va., will turn to the military aspect of the celebration and Cumberland, Md., will set up its proof as a frontier outpost. In Pennsylvania every landmark of Braddock's tedious march will be commemorated.

The federal commission in charge of the celebration will be composed of two representatives of the Senate, two from the House and one member to be appointed by President Hoover. In this state the Pennsylvania Historical Commission and the Historical Society of Western Pennsylvania, will cooperate in the arrangements.

Banquet Arranged By St. Mary's High

The Cardinal Room of the William Penn Hotel will be the scene of the fifth annual banquet and dance of the 1925 class of St. Mary's of the Mount High School, which will be held Thursday night. Several members of the class who are now students at the University of Detroit are expected to attend. John B. Sullivan is general chairman; Edward Dorgan, dance chairman, and Peg Ganter, banquet chairman.

PIANO SCHOOL ATTRACTS MANY NEW STUDENTS

Bellevue Woman Enrolls Her Son for Lessons After Investigation of Methods.

Among the many pupils of music at the Wurlitzer Music Foundation Piano School, which the Sun-Telegraph is sponsoring in Pittsburgh, is Edward Olheiser, 14, 410 Dawson avenue, Bellevue, whose mother brought him to the school after careful investigation of the method used.

Mrs. W. W. Olheiser wants Edward to play the piano. She feels, however, that he may grow to dislike music when he finds what a slow job it is to learn to play by the old methods.

It is for this reason, she says, that she is sending her son to the Wurlitzer Music Foundation Piano School. Teaching by the new methods, the school covers two years' of the old ground in three months. That is why Mrs. Olheiser feels Edward will enjoy taking lessons at this school.

GIRL, 9, IN CLASS

In the same class with Edward is little Miss Helen Quinn, 9, Ohio Valley Bank, Preble avenue, Woods Run. Helen is determined she will learn to play the piano. So she has enrolled in the Wurlitzer Foundation Piano School, where, teachers report, she is making fast progress.

Helen may change her mind, she says, and wish to play the violin, but she knows that the knowledge she will have at the end of three months is necessary before she can hope to have much success with the violin.

Music teachers acclaim that as one of the chief benefits of the new method. Beginners on any musical instrument are able to proceed much faster, they say, if they have a two-year training in piano. The two-year training is obtained in three months here, so that the new instrument is learned in a remarkable short period, they say.

EVERYONE ELIGIBLE

Anyone who wishes to take this course, where piano is learned by melody instead of by scales, is eligible as soon as they have obtained three 26-week orders for the Sun-Telegraph.

By a special arrangement with the school, students may enroll as soon as they have obtained one new subscription. They may then secure the remainder any time before their first class. This is done in order to help students to be assigned to classes meeting at a convenient hour.

Two Hurt as Trains Hit in Snowdrift

FORREST, Ill., Dec. 21.—(AP.)—Two trainmen were injured severely and 20 merchandise cars were overturned when a westbound Toledo, Peoria and Western freight train crashed head-on into an eastbound train near here today. Rescue crews hurried through snowdrifts to the scene and used acetylene torches to extricate the men from the wreckage.

The collision occurred when No. 42, bucking heavy drifts in a blinding snowstorm, rounded a curve and crashed head-on with the other freight which stood helpless in the drifts.

Bandits who entered the Gulf Refining service station, 640 Nobelstown road, and attempted to open a safe Friday night are being sought today by police and detectives. Attempts to open the office safe were unsuccessful. A key was used to gain entry to the station.

NANKING WINS GOVERNOR YEN

LONDON, Dec. 21.—(AP.)—A Reuter's dispatch from Shanghai says that Yen Hsi-Shan, governor of Shansi, whose political sympathies have been enveloped in a mystery, has issued a circular telegram declaring for the central gover.. ent at Nanking.

The dispatch said it was understood that the price of his support was to be control of all troops north of the Yangtse River.

(Yen Hsi-Shan, known as the model governor is one of the most powerful figures in China and controls one of the best organized of the provinces. During the recent rebellions he has been occupying a more or less neutral position, although it was believed for a time that he was leaning toward Feng Yu-Hsiang, leader of the Kuominchun, or Peoples' Army. The recent victories of the Nationalist government at Nanking presumably had a part in Yen's decisions.)

Await Tide to Float Grounded Steamer

PRINCE RUPERT, B. C., Dec. 21.—(AP.)—The coastwise steamship Cardena, which ran aground for the second time in recent weeks off the mouth of the Skeena River a short distance south of here, today was reported waiting for a high tide to facilitate refloating.

The ship ran around last night across the river from where she struck a few weeks ago. She apparently was in no danger. The Cardena operates along the British Columbia coast, carrying both freight and passengers.

DINNER HOLDUP CAUSES PROBE

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.—(INS.)—Complete plans for the investigation of the dinner given recently to Magistrate Albert H. Vitale, which developed into a "hold-up party," have been formulated by the Association of the Bar of the City of New York, and today a sweeping probe of all city magistrates looms.

The inquiry resulted from charges made against Magistrate Vitale by Police Commissioner Grover Whale. The bar association is working with the sanction of the Appellate Division.

Chairman Kenneth M. Spence, of the investigation committee, today appealed to the public to furnish any facts regarding Magistrate Vitale's conduct while on the bench. At the dinner for Magistrate Vitale seven men held up the guests and took $5,000 in cash and jewels, and relieved a city detective of his pistol.

The hearings of the investigating committee will begin shortly after the start of the new year, and, according to President C. C. Burlingham, of the bar association, the entire city bench will be up for scrutiny.

'Frisco Building Men Granted 5-Day Week

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 21.—(AP.)—Inauguration of a five-day week for San Francisco building trades workers, effective January 1, was announced today by W. H. George, president of the Builders' Exchange. The shorter week will apply only to "mechanics employed on buildings," eliminating members of the building trades working in factories and shops.

Pirate Icemen Lose, 2-1; Pitt Beats Grove City

DUNCAN'S GOAL GIVES TORONTO OVERTIME WIN

Bud Jarvis Matches Cotton's Tally to Earn Bucs Third-Period Deadlock.

Milks Repeatedly Breaks Through Leafs' Defense; Is Unable to Beat Chabot.

TORONTO, Dec. 21.—(AP.)—The crippled Pittsburgh Pirates gave a courageous display in their National Hockey League match with Toronto Maple Leafs here tonight. The Leafs won, 2 goals to 1, but not before they had been forced into overtime by the peppery Pirates.

The game was a fast skating affair, but close checking made it dull at times for the spectators.

All the scoring occured during the last 18 minutes of the match.

Harold Cotton, former Pirate player, put Toronto in front 12 minutes after the start of the third period. He took a pass from Horner to beat Joe Miller from a sharp angle.

Bud Jarvis evened the count for the visitors four minutes later by batting his own rebound past Lorne Chabot.

Art Duncan, sturdy Leaf defense player, scored the winning goal on a solo rush three minutes after the overtime had gotten under way.

Only seven minor penalties were handed out during the game.

PLAY FAST AT START

Fast play featured the opening minutes and both cages had narrow escapes. Cotton and Cox both broke through the Pirate guard, but could not beat Miller. At the other end Roger Smith gave Chabot a couple of hard shots to block.

White was penalized for tripping, but before the Leafs could do any damage Primeau was given a rest for hooking.

The last few minutes saw Toronto have a slight edge in center ice, but they could not solve the Pirate defense and Miller had few hard shots to handle.

Hib Milks engineered the feature play of the first few minutes of the second period by splitting the defense and sailing in on Chabot. He was knocked off stride in the last moment and his shot was wide.

Bailey and Blair pumped a few long shots at Miller and then the Pirates again broke through the Leafs' defense, but Lowrey's parting shot was wide. Day gave a great stick-handling display to get right in on Miller, who saved cleverly. White skated down the right boards and worked his way close in to Chabot, who was lucky to save.

Art Smith was penalized for tripping, and the Pirates opened up to pepper Chabot from all angles. Lowrey, Milks and Darragh played fine combination hockey to work their way past the Leafs' four-man defense, but they found Chabot unbeatable.

BUCS' DRIVE VAIN

A. Smith returned to the game and was immediately penalized for tripping, and again the Pirates attacked furiously in an effort to gain the lead.

McCaffrey gave Lowrey a perfect pass, but Jerry missed. Darragh then broke through, but overskated the puck when he had only Chabot to beat.

Day electrified the crowd with a great exhibition of stalling.

The period ended with the Leafs backed into their own corner and battling desperately to hold their opponents out.

Cotton, Bailey and Cox pumped successive shots at Miller to put some excitement into the opening moments of the third period.

Hib Milks split the Toronto defense, but Chabot made a sensational save of his hard, low shot. Lowrey duplicated his team-mates' performance a moment later and Chabot again saved. Day skated from end to end and with an open

PIRATES, CUBS TO BATTLE IN COAST SERIES

Bruins Slated to Engage Corsairs in Four Contests After Camp Departure

Two Games With Mobile Club of Southern League New Feature of Slate.

By CHARLES J. DOYLE.

ANOTHER fascinating schedule of spring training games for the Pirates was announced yesterday by the home office.

The 1930 team, under the direction of Manager Jewel Ens, will take part in 25 preparatory battles in eight cities after breaking camp at Paso Robles on St. Patrick's Day.

A feature of the big barnstorming tour is four contests with the Cubs to be played in Los Angeles near the close of March. Diamond clashes between the Pirates and Bruins excite Angelenos to a high pitch, but the big-leaguers did not get together last spring.

Although the exhibition tour takes the Buccos to various points of the Far West and Middle South, the card is compact and comfortable from the standpoint of travel. Long stays are provided in some of the cities with few sleeper jumps to mar the itinerary.

MOBILE NEW TO BUCS

A distinctive move was made by the Pittsburgh officials in arranging to play two games with the Mobile club of the Southern Association. In all the years of Pirate lore, the Bucs never have performed in this Alabama town on the Gulf of Mexico.

The unusual training card also discloses that the Freebooters will return to New Orleans for a series of three games. It has been many years since the Buccos performed in the cosmopolitan city of the South.

The three games with the New Orleans Pelicans, of the Southern Association, will wind up the exhibition jaunt. At the conclusion of the series, the Pirates will move northward to be ready for the opening game of the National League season on Tuesday, April 15.

The barnstorming end of the spring training work shows eight less games than last year. The two clubs of San Francisco, as usual, hold an important place on the card, but fewer battles will be staged with the Seals and Missions.

PLAY OAKLAND, TOO

Only six days will be spent in San Francisco, but the succeeding three will find the Pirates across the bay in Oakland, where they will take on the Oakland club. Three games with the Missions and four with the Seals are

Army Gridders Near End Of Journey; Trojans Drill

By JESS CARVER
Staff Correspondent.

EN ROUTE WITH ARMY FOOTBALL SQUAD, Dec. 21.—One more night of riding and the long, long cross-country roll of Biff Jones and his West Point footballers will be over, the Palo Alto destination reached and collective Army fingers snapped under the very nose of Pop Warner.

The Cadets are making this invasion of the west coast, the first ever to be made by either an Army or a Navy team, to battle Stanford next Saturday afternoon. The Cadets are returning the favor of the Cards of last year, when Pop took his team to New York for a game with Army.

Coach Biff Jones also would like to return the licking Pop handed him. The chances do not look so very good for that, however.

SOLDIERS NEED AIR

Cold weather en route has spoiled Capt. Jones' practice plans, and as a result, the Soldiers, who have been cooped up in their Pullmans for a solid week, are

SHARKEY BOUT IN SOUTH SET

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.—(AP.)—The second annual "battle of the palms," featuring Jack Sharkey, Boston heavyweight, against some contender not yet chosen, will be waged in Miami, Fla., February 27, 1930, Madison Square Garden announced today.

The same date has been chosen as last season when the Garden carried out the last plans of the late Tex Rickard and staged a bout in the winter rendezvous between Sharkey and Young Stribling, of Macon, Ga. Since that

Coach Sutherland to Cover Game for Sun-Telegraph

The biggest football scoop of the year here has just been achieved by the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph in signing Dr. John B. (Jock) Sutherland, Pitt coach, to cover the Tournament of Roses game between Pitt and Southern California at Pasadena, Cal., New Year's Day.

Jock will contribute three stories, one on December 30, another on December 31 and the final one on January 2, giving his impressions of the battle in which his Panthers will attempt to keep their record clean.

In addition to Dr. Sutherland's articles on the Tournament of Roses game, the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph will have Capt. Biff Jones, the Army coach, covering the Army's game next Saturday with Pop Warner's Stanford eleven at Palo Alto, Cal., and its own staff correspondent, Jess Carver, is in California to report both games, after having written the story of Carnegie Tech's defeat by Southern California a week ago.

GRIMES NOT SIGNED FOR '30

Burleigh Grimes, star pitcher of the Pirates, had a conference with Owner Barney Dreyfuss late yesterday afternoon, but he did not sign a contract for next season.

The conference between the pitcher and his employer was more on the order of a fanning bee, but the two are believed to have discussed salary matters.

Grimes will remain over through today, but expects to leave Pittsburgh in time to be at his Wisconsin home on Christmas Day.

Panthers Forced to Show Best Form to Win, 38-30

In a floor battle packed with thrills right down to the last whistle, the great Pitt team defeated Grove City's clever basketeers Saturday night at the Stadium Gym. The score was 38 to 30.

The Panthers started out in a manner indicating they might make a runaway of their clash with the Mercer County collegians, but a few minutes before the end of the first half, the Grovers came from behind with a furious rush, they all but tying the game at the close of this section.

And if the first half was good, the closing period brought out a remarkable display of the floor sport with honors being almost even through most of the half.

Shortly after the start of the last period Bob Thorn's hustlers rushed to the front but Capt. Hyatt and his pals soon reversed the condition. Up to the last five minutes it was anybody's game, the Panthers showing their stuff in the remaining moments of play.

Goldensons May Take County Loop Lead Tomorrow

SOUTH SIDERS NEED VICTORY OVER FINTEX

Wallace's Passers Rest While Leaders Make Tiresome Trip to Cumberland.

Commercial-Industrial Sponsors Call Special Meeting: Institution Circuit Set.

By JULIUS LEVIN.

MAKING a brilliant comeback after suffering an unexpected defeat at the hands of the Homestead Ackermans, the Goldensons of the South Side will have a golden opportunity to take first place in the Allegheny County League tomorrow night when they meet the league-leading Morry-Fintex quintet in a battle that should pack the spacious Duquesne University gymnasium to capacity. The Goldensons and Morry-Fintex aggregations have been basketball rivals for a number of years and they seldom fail to display their best form when pitted against each other. Tomorrow night's contest finds both clubs possessing the strongest lineups in their history and fans are anticipating a gruelling struggle from the start to finish.

Wy Paris.

FINTEX IN FRONT

The Morry-Fintex quintet at present is setting the pace in the County League race with a record of five victories and one defeat, while the Goldensons are right on their heels with four victories and one defeat. The Goldensons were successful in defeating the Duquesne Lafayettes by a one-point margin on the latter team's home floor, while the Fintex five was handed a drubbing by the same club, losing by a margin of 14 points.

While the Fintex quintet was scheduled to take the floor a big favorite over the Goldensons, the fact that the leaders are playing in Cumberland today while the South Siders are resting should have a tendency to switch the odds. The Fintex aggregation is scheduled to meet the Cumberland Kaceys this afternoon and is making the tedious jaunt by automobile. Many of its supporters believe the team making a bad error in taking a trip of this kind on the eve of the important battle tomorrow night.

BEST TEAMS IN LOOP

The contest brings together what local fans regard the cream of the Allegheny County League. The Goldensons include in their lineup Monk Ketchel, the outstanding center of the league, judging from his showing in recent games; Bobby Angelo, former Grove City College star; Moy Rubenstein, Geneva College grad and coach at Ambridge High School; Jock Rosenberg, former Duquesne University flash and coach at Rankin High School; Leisenring, former Lafayette College star; Eddie Seigle and several other prominent floor performers.

Against this sterling array of talent the Fintex team will have at its disposal Nate Lippe, Geneva grad and coach at Harding High School; Lou Reilly, Penn State; Sammy Klateman, Johnny Serbin, Bill Miller, Harvey White, Wy Paris and Ed Losman.

The contest has the basketball fans of the Hill district and the South Side agog and indications point to a record turnout of divided supporters tomorrow night.

GORDONS IN PRELIM

Dr. Lewis A. Singer will send his crack Lou Gordon Juniors against the Broadway Club, of Beechview, in the preliminary game, starting at 8 o'clock. The Lou Gordon Juniors, two years ago champions of the A. A. U., still are undefeated.

An important meeting of the Commercial-Industrial League will take place tomorrow night for the purpose of re-arranging the schedule and considering applications for berths in the loop. At present the league is operating on a six-club basis, but in event sufficient teams are available an eight-club circuit will be organized.

First-class industrial teams desiring to enter this circuit are asked to call Lafayette 4297 or Lafayette 6821. Herman Strahl's Pittsburgh and Lake Erie Railroad quintet at present is setting a fast pace in the league, having scored four straight victories without the loss of a decision.

Teams seeking a franchise will have to make arrangements for their own floors. All teams this year are playing at home and abroad once each week. In previous years the C. & I. League games were played at the South Side Market House and Columbus Temple.

TEAMS TO REST

Due to the holiday season only one game is scheduled in the C. & I. League tomorrow, Dravo meeting Pittsburgh and Lake Erie. Following this game the teams will rest until Thursday, January 2.

Two high-class attractions are offered the fans of the West Penn League tomorrow night, the Knickerbockers, under the guidance of Manager W. C. Kennedy, opposing the South Side Falcons in the Eighteenth street bandbox, while the Penn Five invades the North Side Moose for an engagement with the Ray Schneiders.

The members of the Greater Pittsburgh Institutional League, this year organized as an independent circuit, are eagerly awaiting the league openers on New Year's Day. This loop includes in its roster eight of the best community and settlement houses in the district and a keen fight for the championship is expected. The Young Men's Hebrew Association won the title last year in a race that was ruined by mismanagement by its sponsors.

The Central Pittsburgh League, with the Irene Kaufmann Settlement House setting the pace despite its first defeat at the hands of Manchester Community, opens another busy week tomorrow with Manchester Community at National Music and Falcons No. 8 at Trinity Church.

TRACY HAS BIG DAY

Giggler Tracy's great comeback in the battle with the Ackermans at Columbus Temple last week has the followers of the Franchinas excited. Tracy came through with 11 baskets against the Homesteaders.

Homer Rose, former Grove City College star, is the latest addition to the roster of the Charleroi Lions in the Allegheny County League.

Weakened by the absence of Tom Foley, the Franchinas have signed Stiche Monahan, former star center of the Duquesne Lafayettes and Duquesne University. He will be eligible to play this week.

The Charleroi Lions-Franchinas game, originally scheduled last Saturday, but which was postponed owing to the failure of the last-named club to appear in time for the game, will be played off Christmas afternoon at Charleroi. The Franchinas became lost in the fog and did not reach Charleroi until two hours after the game was slated to start.

The Buhl Club, of Sharon, as in past years, is lining up an attractive schedule of games for Mercer County basketball enthusiasts. Next Saturday the Buhlers meet Geneva College. Adrian appears in Sharon on January 4; the Cleveland Rosies on January 6; Toledo Redmen on January 13; Morry-Fintex on January 25; Beaver Falls on February 1; Cleveland Favorite Knits on February 5, and Olsen's Swedes on February 12.

The East Liberty Y. M. C. A. passers will enjoy a breathing spell this week, not being scheduled to play until next Saturday when they meet Kingsley House. Featuring the work of the East Liberty quintet is Swede Carlson, who has been playing the best game of his career.

The Pittsburgh Railways team of the Philadelphia Company League is open for games with first-class teams. Write L. (Bus) Cowan, 1314 Homewood avenue, or call Hiland 3815-J.

The L. H. Burkes, having won eight out of ten games, would like to hear from all light first-class teams. Call Lafayette 6227-W and ask for Louis.

Dukes Defeat Buhl Passers

SHARON, Pa., Dec. 21.—The Duquesne University basketball team defeated the Buhl Club here tonight in an interesting game by a score of 36 to 26. The appearance of the collegians here drew only a fair-sized crowd.

The game was a nip-and-tuck affair during the first half, the end of the second period finding the teams deadlocked at 12-all. The Dukes, however, struck their stride in the last half and led by Stephens pulled away from the locals, registering 24 points while Buhl garner only 14. Stephens and Parry starred for the winners and Lewis for the losers. The lineup:

Duquesne—36.		Buhl Club—26.
Lubic	F	H. Cox
Abele	F	Bebic
McGeever	C	Gamble
Stephens	G	Davis
Parry	G	Lewis

Duquesne ..... 12 24—36
Buhl Club ..... 12 14—26

Substitutions—Kopel for Davis, C. Cox for Bebic. Field goals—Abele 2, Stephens 5, Parry 2, H. Cox 2, Bebic, Davis, Lewis 3, Kopel, C. Cox. Foul goals—Duquesne, 14 out of 18; Buhl Club, 8 out of 16. Referee, Morgan.

ROSENBLUMS' NEXT FOES HERE

Sammy Smith — Ward Murphy — Nate Lippe

I. K. S. STARS—Three sterling performers on the Irene Kaufmann Settlement House basketball team which is setting a hot pace in the Pittsburgh Central League and will be the next opponent of the world champion Cleveland Rosenblum team here, in the Settlement gym, Monday night of next week. The game will feature an oldtimers' reunion. Smith plays forward, Murphy, center, and Lippe, a brother of the Morry-Fintex star of the same name, is a guard. The Irene Kaufmann Settlement team won six league games before suffering a defeat.

C. of C. to Honor Local Grid Champs

ON the evening of Thursday, January 16, a real football dinner in honor of the city college and scholastic champions is scheduled by the Chamber of Commerce and the City Council. The dinner will be a joint affair arranged by the City Council and the Chamber of Commerce.

The occasion will be the presentation to the University of Pittsburgh team the City of Pittsburgh trophy and the Chamber of Commerce trophy, both emblematic of the college championship of the city; to the Schenley High School team will be awarded the Chamber of Commerce trophy emblematic of the scholastic championship of the city.

This annual event is generally scheduled earlier, but on account of Pitt's Tournament of Roses' game in California it was agreed to have the presentation after the team's return from the coast.

The dinner will be open to the public and will start at 6:30 p. m. Reservations can be made at once at the Chamber of Commerce.

Tentative plans of the committee in charge call for showing sound movie pictures of the Pitt-Southern California game and high spots of other games played by Pitt during the season.

net before him hoisted the rubber high over the cage.

Bailey saved a certain goal by tripping Milks, who had broken through following a three-man attack.

As Bailey came back Roger Smith was penalized for checking Cotton into the boards. He had barely returned to the game when Toronto took the lead on Cotton's hard angle shot, which beat Miller cleanly.

Jarvis tripped Conacher and the visitors were again forced to play short-handed. He redeemed himself soon after returning by batting in his own rebound to tie the score.

Jarvis almost put his team in front when he took Manners' pass and struck the goal post, with Chabot beaten on the play, as the period ended.

DUNCAN PROVES HERO

Briden gave the fans a thrill early in the overtime period by bounding a hard shot off Chabot's pads from close range.

Art Duncan, war ace, put the Leafs in front in 3:04 when he dashed past the Pirates' defense to smack in his own rebound.

Both goal keepers experienced their busiest spell of the game at this stage. Milks and Darragh both had hard luck in not scoring, while at the other end Day rifled a hot shot off the goal post.

BRUINS BEAT HAWKS

BOSTON, Dec. 21.—(AP.)—The Boston Bruins squared their National Hockey League accounts here tonight by defeating the Chicago Black Hawks, 4 to 1, for the first time this season. The new forward passing rule was in effect and the Hawks' inability to cope with it counted heavily against them.

Chicago, despite the top-heavy score, was in the running almost every second of the game, which became so heated at one stage that Tom Shaughnessey, the Black Hawks' manager, was fined $50 at the end of an argument with Referee Bert Corbeau. The lineup:

Boston—4.		Chicago—1.
Thompson	G	Gardiner
Hitchman	L. D.	Taylor

Wagner Made Red Sox Pilot

BOSTON, Dec. 21.—(AP.)—Charles (Heine) Wagner today was appointed to manage the Boston Red Sox by President Bob Quinn, following a meeting of team and league officials in New York. Wagner succeeds Bill Carrigan, who announced his retirement yesterday, owing to pressure of private business.

Wagner, Carrigan's righthand man for three years, also attended the meeting and said he felt he could manage the team "all right." His name has been prominently mentioned for the berth since word first spread that Carrigan might retire.

Asked if he had someone in mind to assist him in his new position, Wagner said he thought Jack MacAllister would make a good aide. MacAllister was reached on the phone and said he would be glad to accept the offer. MacAllister managed the Cleveland team two years ago and last year was scout for the Red Sox. He has been associated with the American League for nearly 15 years.

Pittsburgh May Get Pro Loop Franchise

J. J. Freund, Jr., Asked to Handle Big-Time Basketball Here

PITTSBURGH is in line for a franchise in the American Professional League, the greatest basketball organization in the country, according to J. J. Freund, Jr., local promoter, who has been asked by J. J. O'Brien, president of the circuit, to make arrangements for the entrance of a local team in the circuit.

J. J. Freund, Jr.

Western Pennsylvania is regarded by promoters of big-time basketball as one of the finest centers in the country in the development of first-class floor machines and the American League is reported eager to have this city represented in the circuit.

Freund, who has the distinction of leading the greatest professional team Pittsburgh ever has known from 1906 to 1910, has been negotiating for the use of Motor Square Garden for American League basketball. Freund formerly managed the crack South Side quintet of 23 years ago, which included in its lineup such well-known professional stars as Hough, Kane, Muller, Mayham, Powell and Brady. He has been in close touch with the magnates in the American League, having handled the booking arrangements here for the majority of the clubs.

Freund is lining up a tentative squad of the best of local professional talent and will pit them against the American League clubs in exhibition games at Motor Square after the first of the year to get a line on his players. Among those who are expected to represent Pittsburgh in these games will be Nate Lippe and Bill Miller, Morry-Fintex stars; Moon Klinzing and Whitey Littell, former Morry players and now with the Ackermans; George Ramsey, former center of the Morrys; Peck Minnick, of the Duquesne Lafayettes, and Lou Alman.

STAR TO HANDLE TEAM

If Pittsburgh is successful in obtaining a franchise a prominent American League star will be signed to handle the local pros. Johnny Beckman, Pete Barry, Dave Kerr, Lou Sugarman and Nat Hickey are being considered as coach.

Freund has made arrangements with President O'Brien to bring the best clubs in the league here for exhibition games with the locals. The list of attractions includes the famous Renaissance Club, of Brooklyn, one of the greatest Negro attractions in the country. Motor Square Garden will be the scene of all home games until the Town Hall is completed.

Besides sponsoring his own club, Freund has arranged another attractive schedule of games for the Rosenblums, last year's champions, who will make their second visit of the season in the Pittsburgh district next week. A rearrangement of the American League schedule, caused by the withdrawal of the New York Celtics, gives the Rosies a few choice dates for independent and professional clubs desiring to book them.

ROSIES AT I. K. S.

A week from tomorrow the Rosies appear at the Irene Kaufmann Settlement House as the feature attraction of the old timers' reunion; Tuesday they play the Scottdale Buicks at Scottdale; Wednesday evening they meet the Monessen Knights of Pythias at Monessen; Monday, January 6, they play the Buhl Club in Sharon. New Year's afternoon, January 2, January 7 and January 8 are open for first-class teams. Teams interested write J. J. Freund, Jr., 225 Charles street, or call Lafayette 4297.

The Irene Kaufmann Settlement House is making arrangements to handle a capacity crowd at the Rosenblum game a week from tomorrow night. The sponsors of the contest have been in close touch with the old timers and several hundred of them are expected to attend the game.

Dribbles

George Wheeler, one of the original members of the old Enoch Rauh Club, is working out with the Young Men's Hebrew Association passers, and may attempt a comeback with the A. A. U. and Institutional League champions. Wheeler several years ago was regarded as one of the best forwards in local light first-class ranks.

The Penn Five-Y. M. H. A. game, originally scheduled next Tuesday on the Sharpsburg High School floor, has been postponed until the following Monday.

Dave Olbum, star center of the Y. M. H. A., has returned to the Oaklanders' lineup after a long absence. In the meantime, Greenburg has been holding down the important center position in an excellent manner.

The St. Joseph Lyceum Colts would like to book games at home and abroad with junior quintets. Call Lafayette 9656 after 7 o'clock and ask for Gerald.

The Mystery Five, of Star Junction, Pa., one of the leading light first-class teams of Fayette County, wants games at home and abroad. Write C. M. Shaw, Star Junction, Pa., or call Perryopolis 9084 between 6 and 7 o'clock.

The W. U. Hoyles are eager to arrange games abroad with first-class teams. Call Cedar 3549-J and ask for Ray, or write Ray Haggerty, 1908 East street.

LYCEUM WANTS GAMES

The S. C. & M. Lyceum, of Charleroi, would like to arrange games with light first-class teams in the Pittsburgh district. Write 1006 Fallowfield avenue, Charleroi, Pa.

The Goldenson Vanities have dates open on their schedule for games with first-class girls' teams at home and abroad. Wednesday nights are available for games at the South Side Market House. Call Helen Kasputis at Hemlock 4071-J during the day and Hemlock 2558 in the evening.

The Transformer Club of the North Side is available for games at home and abroad with junior and light first-class teams. Call Cedar 4828-J between 7 and 7:30 and ask for Nate, or write Nathan Siegman, 1911 Beaver avenue, North Side.

The Salina Athletic Association have a first-class basketball team on the floor and would like to arrange games at home and abroad. Write or call Milo Schwartz, Salina, Pa.

The freshmen of the day class of Pittsburgh School of Accountancy have organized a basketball team. The team is composed of students who have graduated from local high schools within the past year. High schools in Western Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Ohio are requested to write to George Duff, manager, care of Pittsburgh School of Accountancy, Law and Finance Building, Pittsburgh.

PLAY SOCCER TIE

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.—(AP.)—The New York Giants and Providence battled to a 2-2 deadlock in an Atlantic Coast League soccer game here today.

PANTHERS TOP GROVE CITY

Burke, made the Grovers a very dangerous factor all the way through to the last five minutes.

This clever forward threw six field goals through the net from all angles, his card showing half of the total points made by the Mercer Countians.

Among the celebrities at the exciting contest were Burleigh Grimes and Steve Swetonic of the Pirate pitching staff, Tommy Holleran, former Panther star and Dr. Jock Sutherland.

BOTH SHOW SPEED

The game started out with a rush with both sides showing plenty of speed, but the guarding was too clever and effective that several minutes elapsed before a ball went through the hoops. Willie Arture was the first basketeer to register, the little guard putting the Panthers in the lead with a field goal. Two minutes later he caged the ball again. Fegle made two points for Grove City on a double foul, but the Panthers piled up a bigger lead. It was Hildebrand's honor to cage the first field goal for th Grovers.

Capt. Hyatt entered the contest at the middle of the first half, his appearance having the effect of speeding up the contest in favor of the home team. The Pitt boys began to pull away from their hustling opponents, they showing a rare combination of scoring plays.

The last five minutes of the half saw the visitors in a fine spurt, but near the close the Panthers were showing their skill again. W. Kowallis let fly with a long shot that enhanced the lead of Carlson's players.

Just before the half ended the Grovers led by Burke, opened up a fine scoring drive. Burke shot a long one and then made a other point on a double foul charged against Pitt. A little before the gun, Burke threw another field goal from long formation and the Mercer Countians were within two points of the enemy. The score at half was 16 to 14, with Pitt on the long end.

HYATT SCORES TWICE

Red Ryan took advantage of a single foul for a point at the beginning of the second half, but this was discounted a moment later on Hyatt's field goal. Burke recorded a field goal for the Grovers, but Hyatt came back with one for the Panthers.

Hildebrand scored two points on a double foul as the brilliant battle continued. The Grovers had several shots for a basket that would have given them a one point lead, but they failed and Zehfuss netted the ball for Pitt.

Stavnitsky and Hildebrand put the Grovers out in front for the first time in the game, with two field goals. The teams were fighting a ferocious clip at this point of play.

Zehfuss put the Panthers in front a little later with a field goal and Cohen followed up with another. The Panthers added to their total on a clean shot by Cohen, but the Grovers came back with two more and reduced the lead to one point.

The Panthers pulled away from the foe at the last half of the second period, but Burke made the visitors dangerous again with a fine shot. Pitt, however, had a lead of eight points with three minutes to go. The lineup:

MID-ATLANTIC LOOP TO HOLD MEETING TODAY

Officers Will Be Elected, Schedule to Be Drafted At Annual Session Here.

Daily Likely to Be Retained As President; Later Opening, Closing Dates Favored.

REPRESENTATIVES of the eight clubs of the Middle Atlantic Baseball League will gather at the Hotel Henry this afternoon for the purpose of electing officers and formulating plans for the 1930 season. The meeting is called for 3 o'clock.

The general opinion is that Elmer W. Daily, of Ebensburg, Pa., will be re-elected president of the circuit. Daily was elected president of the Class "C" loop in 1927, succeeding Raymond Archibald, of Pittsburgh. His three-year term as chief executive expires on January 1, 1930.

Under Daily's leadership the Middle Atlantic League has prospered as well as could be expected. It is a known fact that Daily has contributed approximately $3,000 out of his own pocket in order to help the league out of a financial rut during his three-year reign as prexy.

FAVOR LATER START

Among other things to be discussed at the league session is the proposed later starting and closing dates of the 1930 schedule which is to be drafted at the session here. It has been suggested that the league season open one week later in May and close about September 17, instead of Labor Day, as heretofore. In past years the opening date has been about May 12.

The cities of the Middle Atlantic League are Charleroi, Scottdale, Jeannette and Johnstown in Pennsylvania; Clarksburg, Fairmont and Wheeling in West Virginia, and Cumberland, in Maryland. The St. Louis Cardinals operate Scottdale as a "farm," while Montreal has an interest in Jeannette. It is said that Cincinnati now is interested in taking over Johnstown as its "farm."

RUSSLER HEADS COLTS

CUMBERLAND, Md., Dec. 21.—The appointment of Col. Nelson W. Russler, veteran baseball leader, as president of Community Baseball, Inc., for the 1930 season, was received with glad tidings by local followers of the diamond sport. Russler, who is an Allegany County commissioner and chairman of the Republican state central committee of Maryland, was president and manager of league and independent teams here from 1911 to 1922 and is well known in nearby West Virginia and Pennsylvania towns.

The new leader of the Cumberland Colts, of the Middle Atlantic League, now is busily engaged in getting a line on a new manager for the Colts so that the new pilot will get the talent all lined up before spring training opens. He plans to rebuild the 1930 team around Dave Black, second sacker, of Pittsburgh, who has been an outstanding player on Cumberland teams for the past two years. Dave was offered the post of manager last year, but reclined with thanks, stating that he wished to be a player only.

Other officers elected for the Cumberland Club were: Herbert Lee Blye, city councilman, vice president; M. F. Prendergast, secretary, and Jacob Gottlieb, treasurer.

WHEELING MAY QUIT

WHEELING, W. Va., Dec. 21.—When the Middle Atlantic League holds its annual meeting at the Henry Hotel, Pittsburgh, tomorrow, the Wheeling Baseball Club owners are going to demand a show-down. Charging that the Middle Atlantic League has been run in a too haphazard manner in the past, Wheeling officials are going to demand, among other things, that the budget plan of operating the various clubs be adopted this coming season.

Should this system not meet with the approval of the other clubs in the circuit, the Wheeling delegation has been advised to withdraw from all active discussion in the league undertakings, and plans will be made immediately for entrance into the Central League.

Bob Prysock, who last season managed the Hanover club of the Blue Ridge League, will pilot the Wheeling Stogies this season in the Middle Atlantic League. Prysock's appointment was approved by the board of directors today. He will play second base in addition to managing the club.

Prysock, before going to the Blue Ridge loop, managed the Wheeling team for two successive seasons and gave the Wheeling team a pennant in the last half of the 1928 season. The club lost the play-off to Fairmont.

Is Bass Champ? Let Public Decide, Comish Rules

FARLEY DROPS PLAN TO PROBE MORGAN FIGHT

New York Ring Chief, After Ordering Purses Held Up, Cancels Investigation.

Fans to Be Permitted to Pass on Benny's Right To 130-Pound Title.

By DAVIS J. WALSH,
International News Service.

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.—"In the event we discover chicanery existed, it will be up to the public to decide whether Benny Bass is entitled to hold the 130-pound championship of the world."

This was Commission Chairman James A. Farley's way of saying today that, if there was something putrid in Patagonia about Bass' two-round knockout of Tod Morgan last night, he was not in a position to do anything drastic about it. He added, in fact, that neither the principals nor their managers had been summoned before the meeting of the Boxing Commission next Tuesday and that, if any investigation was under way, the board had taken no steps in the matter. He seemed to forget that he himself had instituted the first step last night in ordering the fighters' purses held up, even while Morgan still was writhing in the resin.

"I just thought it would be a good idea to hold up the money for a couple of days," was his rather unconvincing explanation.

BETTING ODDS PECULIAR

Meantime, Broadway rocked with innuendoes, most of them concerned with the fact that Morgan was supposed to have entered the ring as a 1-to-5 shot in the betting. These extraordinary odds against a champion who had held his title for four years, coupled with the fact that they were offering a good price that Bass would win by a knockout over a man who never had been knocked out, probably was responsible for the dubious attitude of those around the ringside. The betting had plainly said that a certain thing would happen and then it did happen. It takes little more than this to make suspicion a certainty in the minds of those who follow boxing.

Anyhow, the story today was that it cost Bass money to win the title. The story said that Morgan wouldn't take the match until he was guaranteed $35,000, and that Bass had to agree to make up the difference out of his purse. This arrangement, by the way, is far from unusual. Mandell did it the time he won the lightweight title from Rocky Kansas and the circumstances passed almost without comment. By the same token, Bass' quick victory last night would have turned up no particular post mortem, if the betting odds had remained within reason.

MAY ABOLISH TITLE

This called attention to the rapid change of fortunes the fight underwent, with Morgan almost scoring a knockout in the first round and then going out himself in the second with two rights to the jaw, each producing a knock down. Bass is notorious for his hard hitting, so that his turning of the tide with a single punch was strictly in character. But the odds were far too high and, besides, Commissioner Farley immediately took charge of the money, so naturally everybody is suspicious of everybody.

As the young reporter wired to his paper, there is much excitement, but can learn nothing.

However, from another source it was learned that there is some official sentiment here in favor of abolishing the title to which Bass fell heir only 24 hours ago. Such a step, perforce, would furnish the commission with an "out," in the event that it finds itself unable to finish what it started.

This would make it a costly evening for both parties, as indeed it figures to be, anyhow. The Madison Square Garden Corporation, through its matchmaker, Tom McArdle, declared itself today as being reluctant to do business again not only with last night's principals but with any fighters managed by Frank Churchill and Phil Glassman.

Frank Bruen, vice president of the Garden, suggested today that the 130-pound division, several times in questionable repute since its inauguration here seven years ago, be abolished immediately. He said also that in the event the commission took action against Morgan and Bass they, too, along with any other boxers of the managers involved, Glassman and Frank Churchill, would also be "abolished" as far as the Garden is concerned.

Grid Coach Scores Officials' Group

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Dec. 21.—(AP.)—The Eastern football official group, headed by Walter Okeson, was described as a "close corporation" by Reggie Brown, member of the Boston University coaching staff, here today during the sport rally which Izzy Zarakov, former Harvard football and baseball star, conducted for the members of his Maine summer camp.

"The rules are in a chaotic condition," Brown said, "and I advise all players not to waste any time until they become stabilized. We don't bother much about rules at Boston University."

Brown, in referring to the officials assigned by Okeson, said that the Boston University team was victim of some "mighty poor" officiating during the past season.

LOCAL AMATEUR HEAVY CHAMP ENTERS MONEY RANKS

NOVAK—Frank Novak, senior heavyweight boxing champion of the Allegheny Mountain Association of the A. A. U., who has fought his last amateur bout and probably will make his professional debut at Motor Square Garden New Year's afternoon.

BIG HANDS—Muscular arms and unusually large hands are two of the chief assets of Novak in the ring. He is a cooper by trade and is employed at the Heinz plant on the North Side, where he swings a six-pound sledge many hours a day putting heads and hoops on barrels, as pictured above. Below is a closeup photo of the calloused hands that have scored many knockouts and also one of his manager, George (Cy) Siebert, of the North Side, examining the maulies with a satisfied smile. Novak's success in the amateur ranks promises a good future as a money fighter.

College Loop Chiefs Meet

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 21.—(AP.)—Clean athletics and continued friendly relations were emphasized at the eighth annual meeting of the Middle Atlantic States Collegiate Athletic Conference today. The conference was attended by more than 40 delegates.

Upon the recommendation of the executive committee, which met last night at Swarthmore College, the conference today decided to apply for membership in the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

H. C. (Curly) Byrd, director of athletics and head football coach at the University of Maryland, talked on "The Aims, Ideals and Accomplishments of the Southern Intercollegiate Association," in which he pointed out the strict eligibility rules that are now in force and the friendly relations of the 23 competing colleges and universities.

He urged the Middle Atlantic States Conference not to allow petty squabbles to crop up in their ranks and pointed out if any college was supposed to be running its athletics on a questionable basis it was better to go to them in person and talk things over, rather than let the "campus gossip" spread wild rumors.

L. G. Grossman, athletic director at Susquehanna University, spoke on "The Middle Atlantic States College Conference and Its Aims."

Novak, Local Amateur K. O. Star, Turns Pro

A. M. A. Heavyweight Champion Boasts 18 Knockouts in 23 Bouts.

By HARRY KECK, Sports Editor.

BEGGING Mr. Ripley's pardon, believe it or not, but Pittsburgh boasts a fighter who never goes into the ring without a piece of iron concealed in his glove.

He is Frank Novak, 20-year-old Slavish heavyweight, of the North Side, who has won the junior heavyweight championship of the Allegheny Mountain Association of the A. A. U. twice and been the runner-up once and also has won the senior title twice and now is ready to turn professional. He probably will make his first start for money on New Year's afternoon at Motor Square Garden.

The piece of iron this young husky packs in his mitt is a bit of shrapnel that became lodged there during the World War. It doesn't bother him and he has not tried to have it removed.

GREAT KNOCKOUT RECORD

In a little more than two years of fighting as an amateur, Novak has compiled the excellent record of 18 knockout victories, one victory on a decision, three defeats by decisions and one knockout defeat.

He has scored 10 of his knockouts with his right fist and eight with his left. He is a straight, standing up boxer who wields a wicked left hook and a pile driver right. George (Cy) Siebert, of the North Side, who has piloted him through the amateur ranks, has signed a contract to act as his manager in the professional division. Siebert is a former middleweight boxer with more than 20 years' experience in the sport.

Novak was born on Christmas Day, 1908, at Dol Logatec, Slovenija Jugoslavia, and arrived in America with his mother in August, 1924. He settled on the North Side and went to work in the Heinz plant, where he is employed as a cooper. Much of his muscular development has come through his long hours of tossing a six-pound sledge in the act of capping barrels and driving hoops on them. He has combined his training and fighting with his work, invariably going on in the amateur shows after a full day's toil.

STOPPED ONLY ONCE

The young heavy's first bout was against Andy Stabile, in Slavish Hall, Fifty-seventh and Butler streets, Lawrenceville, on November 16, 1927. He won by a knockout in the first round. He then knocked out Bob Wayjeski in three rounds and following this bout came his only knockout defeat, by George Clemmons, in two rounds, in the junior championships at Motor Square Garden. He says he listened to the advice of inexpert handlers, who told him he must train down and dry out for his bouts, and did not eat for two days before entering the ring against Clemmons, and was so weak he could not hold up his fists. After this bout he drifted into the hands of Siebert, who has steered his course successfully ever since. A little more than a year ago, he evened the score with Clemmons by knocking him out in a single round in the same ring to win the district senior title.

INJURED BY SHRAPNEL

On October 15, 1917, the town in which Novak lived in the old country was shelled by the Allies' army, composed of Russians, Greeks, Italians and French. Two German ammunition trains were blown up and Novak's home, a three-story building, had the second and third floors blown out. In the excitement, young Novak rushed out into the street and was struck by shrapnel, a bit of which still remains in his hand. His hands, by the way, are the largest on any fighter in these parts, and he never is bothered by brittle bones. The World War took the lives of his father and a brother. A married sister lives in Italy. Frank and his mother reside at 10 Calder way, North Side.

Following is the complete record in the amateur ranks of Novak, who scales 182½ pounds and is well-proportioned:

Between Rounds

Jimmy Belmont, of Braddock, and Tiger Joe Randall, of Elizabeth, welterweight rivals, box the 10-round main bout of the Christmas afternoon show in Motor Square Garden.

Larry Madge, of Cleveland, and Joe Trippe, of Rochester, N. Y., a pair of punchers, do the honors in the windup at McKeesport Thursday night.

Johnny Risko and Tuffy Griffiths are in the big bout of the week, in Madison Square Garden, New York, Friday night.

Benny Bass, who took the junior-lightweight title from Tod Morgan Friday night, was the third boxer to lift a crown during the year now drawing to a close. Jackie Fields annexed the welterweight title from Joe Dundee in Detroit and Battling Battalino stripped Andre Routis of the featherweight laurels at Hartford, Conn.

Promoter Francis Flynn, of the Moose Temple, is trying to rematch George Panka, of Homestead, and Harry Williams, Negro heavyweight, of Rankin, for his 10-round main bout next Friday night. They fought a furious battle to an official draw in the same ring last Friday night.

The Junction Park arena will stage its third show of the season on January 6. Matchmaker Ray Eberle is at work on his card.

DUNN ISSUES CHALLENGE

Johnny Dunn, that classy featherweight of New Kensington, is wondering why the promoters give him the runaround and at the same time declare in accents wild that there is a dearth of local talent. Dunn has beaten Jackie Rodgers twice and has boxed Tommy Crawley, Phil Zwick, Milton Cohen, Tommy Paul, Abe Goldstein, Archie Bell, Cecil Payne, Johnny Ryan and others of note and has appeared in main bouts in several cities. He certainly has a legitimate kick. He is willing to box anybody in his class, including Johnny Datto, Midget Mike O'Dowd and the other hard hitters, and may be reached by calling New Kensington 415-J.

The Clairton A. C. has entered seven boxers in the A. M. A. junior tournament at McKeesport January 8 and 9. Eddie Hebner and Johnny Warner head the list.

Battling Gizzy, of Donora, and Young Corsey, of Canton, O., top off an all-star bill at the Coliseum, Washington, Pa., Christmas afternoon. Walter Ketchel and Harry Spencer will appear in the semi-final.

Art to Box In St. Paul

ST. PAUL, Dec. 21.—(AP.)—Arthur (The Great) Shires, manager-tamer and fighting ball player of the Chicago White Sox, has been signed for a 10-round bout here January 7, Promoter Jerk Doran announced tonight.

The Great One's opponent has not been selected, but he will be chosen more for color than for class, Doran said, preferably an athlete who has won a name in some other sport than boxing and who stands about even with Arthur in ring experience.

Daron said he would consider challenges from football players, hockey players, umpires or other baseball players. The bout will headline a card made up entirely of heavyweight matches.

Bakerstown Cards Coon, Fox Trials

Bakerstown will be the scene of a coon and fox trial on New Year's Day, according to an announcement yesterday by the Bakerstown Coon and Gun Club. The first trial will start at 12:30.

Only One Team Not Scored On in College List Here

JAMES J. LONG Sport Comment

Pitt Feat 19 Years Ago. Never Equaled Since. Champion Elevens Fail.

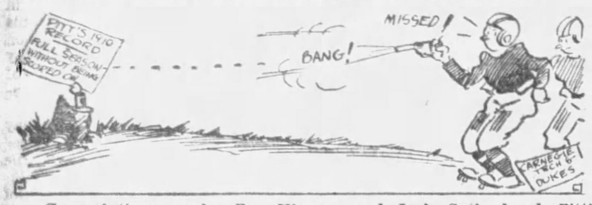
Coast Contract Tough. Grantham Shifts Often. Pirate Outlook Bright.

NINE FOES HELD POINTLESS IN 1910

IT'S one thing to sweep through the full length of a football season without being defeated or tied, but to complete a regulation collegiate gridiron schedule of eight or nine games without being scored on is quite a different matter. St. Mary's, of Oakland, Cal., almost got away with it this year, but tripped over the last hurdle on Thanksgiving Day, when Oregon rang up six points.

In view of the great elevens that the University of Pittsburgh has produced at various times during the last decade and a half, the question has been raised as to how many of them succeeded in holding all of their opponents scoreless throughout their campaigns. The answer is that no Panther team of that period was able to do it.

YOU'VE got to go back 19 years to find an instance in which a Pitt outfit, or any other local college machine, for that matter, achieved such a feat. And that was the only time it was ever done by the Blue and Gold. As for the city's two other big schools, neither Carnegie Tech nor Duquesne has ever placed such a season to its credit since branching out into major or near-major schedules.



Several times under Pop Warner and Jock Sutherland, Pitt's teams have been standouts. More than once they soared to the Eastern championship, and this year marks the second time the Panthers have won the national distinction of being selected to play in the Tournament of Roses classic staged annually in Pasadena.

BUT in all that long stretch none of the powerful Pitt aggregations has come through with the perfect record of not having a point scored against it. There was a wonder team on the field in 1916, to which many still point as the greatest of all time here, but it was scored on by Navy and Carnegie, though winning its eight games.

Again in 1917 the Panthers were at the peak with an eleven that captured all of its 10 engagements, but it was scored on by West Virginia, Penn, W. & J. and Penn State.

BEFORE the development of these two great teams, the eleven of 1915 also went through its schedule of eight games unbeaten and not tied, but the Navy, Penn and Allegheny College scored on it. Thus there were three consecutive seasons without a defeat or a tie, but none in which the opposition failed to score. Pitt's Eastern champions of 1927 also were scored on by Nebraska in the regular schedule before being defeated by Stanford in the post-season battle on the coast.

THE one Panther team to complete a season without permitting any of its opponents to register a point was that of 1910. It played nine games and won them all by double-figure scores while shutting out every foe, piling up a total of 286 points to none for the enemy.

Ohio Northern was defeated by 36 points. Westminster by 18, Waynesbury by 46, Georgetown by 17, Ohio University by 71, West Virginia by 38, W. & J. by 14, Carnegie Tech by 35 and Penn State by 11. The late Col. Joe Thompson was coach of that team, and Bob Richards was captain.

AMONG the players were Dr. C. B. Quailey, now alderman of the Fourth Ward; Polly Galvin, Norman Budd, Jim Stevenson, Bob and Dave Richards, Tillie Dewar, Billy Hittner, John Lindsey, Andy Blair, George Gehlert, George Brown, George Bailey, Raymond Butler and John Frankel.

Others on the squad were Hinchman, Reed, Michel and Hazlett. Joe Keally, now a boxing referee, was trainer. The team left a mark at which other local college elevens have been shooting for 19 seasons without success.

IF FOREWARNED is forearmed in football, as in other things, Pitt's gridders will be better prepared mentally when they leave for Pasadena next Wednesday (Christmas) night than they would have been if Carnegie Tech had not encountered Southern California in Los Angeles on December 14. For that 45-to-13 beating handed to the Skibos, the largest score rolled up against the Schenley Park boys since Penn State swamped them 49 to 0 in 1913, served to show the strength of the Trojan team and to prove it an opponent that the Panthers must respect.

THE final stages of a football struggle are the hardest upon players not accustomed to the climate of Southern California. That was shown by the collapse of the Steffenites after they had outplayed the Westerners in the first half.

SO THERE is no doubt that the weakening effects of the heat had much to do with the rout of Carnegie, which Pitt will seek to avenge, but at the same time it is clear that any eleven that can pile up 45 points against the Tartans will be a formidable foe.

HOWEVER, that does not mean that the Panthers cause is hopeless. Far from it. Defeating Carnegie and defeating Pitt, as measured by their relative strength in 1929, are vastly different propositions, as the Trojans will discover.

Coach Sutherland will present a better line, a better backfield, a defense more likely to stop the sensational Russell Saunders, and an attack that will be much harder for Southern California to resist. What will be more important in the weakening climate is that Pitt has a flock of splendid reserves who may be able to save the regulars from being worn to a frazzle, as were Carnegie's. The Panthers are likely to succeed where the Skibos failed.

RARELY has there been a baseball player as good as George Grantham whom it was so difficult to settle in one regular position. He has been used at first base, at second, in the outfield, and there was even talk of trying him at third base last spring. Now he will go back to the second sack for the Pirates if Gus Suhr makes good at first base next season.

SUCH a move will not be lacking in promise. Grantham may have superiors at the midway station, but before he was injured he played good enough ball there last season to satisfy anybody, and it must not be forgotten that he was at the keystone in 124 games in 1927, when the Bucs won the pennant.

So he couldn't have been a very weak link as a second sacker, and there is plenty of ground for the confidence that that position will be well cared for next year, provided Suhr comes through at first. Dick Bartell ought to develop into a satisfactory shortstop, and the team will be all the stronger if Stuart Clarke, Charley Engle or Ben Sankey proves capable of beating him out for the job. With new pitching strength in prospect there is no immediate cause for worry about the Pirates in 1930.

JACK DEMPSEY On Boxing

Carey Craves Adventure. He's a Millionaire. Yet Pockets Are Empty.

Gets Into "Jams" Through His Pranks, But Always Pays Off.

OH, FOR AN IRISH HEAVYWEIGHT!

WILLIAM F. CAREY, of Madison Square Garden, is worth millions. But he is constantly "broke." He absolutely ignores the need for cash on hand and roams here, there, and everywhere with hardly enough silver in his pockets to buy himself a haircut.

Carey's habit of going around cashless has led him into a thousand and one odd plights. But some way, somehow, he always has extricated himself. When in New York he usually frequents the same places, is known in such, has unlimited credit and, of course, suffers no embarrassment.

But there are other occasions.

During the recent snowstorm in New York, Carey, walking along Eighth avenue, saw a snow shoveler whose shoes were in bad shape. Carey walked to the curbing, called the man over and said:

"You can't go on working with shoes like that. Tell your foreman to give you 10 minutes off and I'll buy you a pair of shoes."

Carey and the shoveler went into the nearest shoe shop. The man picked out an $8 pair of shoes. When time came to pay, Carey had no money, as usual. And, of course, the shoveler was broke. The clerk, naturally, demanded cash.

"Look here," said Carey, "I'm good for this $8, but at this minute I'm broke. Now you let the man go along with his shoes and I'll call my office, have them bring the money—and I'll wait here as a sort of guarantee of good faith."

Carey phoned his office, the messenger always in readiness for emergency calls from the boss got the needed cash, dashed to the shoe store and "redeemed" Carey.

Usually Carey picks up a taxicab in front of the Garden. The drivers all know him and just send in a bill for the ride. But sometimes Carey gets a strange chauffeur. When the trip is ended the man wants his pay—and Carey generally has nothing to use in payment. Of course, he explains who he is, maybe tenders a card and gets the driver to agree to send in a bill which always is paid—with a bonus tossed in.

But not all strange drivers take Carey's word for it. They want cash or they'll call a cop. Several have. Fortunately, the officers knew Carey and ok'd the bill. But several times they didn't. So there was nothing for Carey to do but order the man to drive to the Garden or to one of the banks housing Carey's funds.

His secretary, Miss Elsie Miller, and his associates constantly try to load him up with cash each morning so that he will be saved from walking moneyless into a strange barber shop or restaurant. But Carey won't carry cash in his pockets.

Often he invites folks to luncheon and dinner and, when bill-paying time arrives, he must borrow the money from his guests. Although he won't carry money around with him he will borrow as every occasion demands. He doesn't keep any tabs as to the loans. He trusts to his memory. But apparently it isn't so good on that point.

Frank J. Bruen, general manager of the Garden, tells about it in this way:

"Bill Carey will go through a whole day borrowing from every Tom, Dick and Harry. The next morning he will have a hazy idea as to the total amount and the persons from whom he borrowed. He gets the cash and starts to pay off. But the funny thing is that sometimes he tries to pay $10, $20 or $50 to folks he never borrowed from."

Bill Carey, whoes sense of humor is developed to the nth degree and whose whole nature craves adventure, once explained to me his refusal to carry money in his pockets:

"If I carry cash to meet all obligations as they fall due, that's just tame stuff. But when I go around without cash and time comes to pay and I have no money—only a good alibi—well, I get $1,000 worth of fun arguing with taxi drivers, barbers, restaurant cashiers and the others on the point of extending credit to me until later in the day or until the next morning. If you don't think it's fun, go try it yourself."

What's become of these Irish in the matter of heavyweight reckoning?

From John L. Sullivan's time down to Gene Tunney's the champion or his most dangerous rival either was a complete Irishman or had some Irish blood coursing through his veins. But, of a sudden, we have come upon an era when not one Irish lad is mentioned as measuring up to the standard as Tunney's possible successor.

Von Porat, from the Scandanavian countries, recently fought it out with Phil Scott, an Englishman, to determine who should meet Jack Sharkey, who is of Lithuanian descent, losing on a foul. Before that time, Schmeling, a German, was the big threat, having beaten Risko, a Bohemian, and Paulino, a Basque.

Scott got his chance with Von Porat by winning from Campolo, a man from the Argentine. Beyond those fellows we have Primeo Carnera, a gigantic Italian, and Young Stribling, an American—but not of Irish origin, and then there's George Godfrey, the Negro, belonging to the top notchers.

Not an Irish lad in the group!

Have the Celts lost their fighting eagerness and ability to do a job successfully? Certainly a great number of them have taken shots at the thing called success in heavyweight fisticuffing. But all of them—the Loughrans and their kind—have been driven back into defeat.

Sullivan was Irish—so was Corbett. Fitz was a Briton. But after Fitz came Jeffries, of Irish extraction. In the meantime, the big threats were Irish, such as McCoy, Sharkey, Maher and the lot of them.

Johnson, of course, was a Negro, but Frank Moran, an Irish youth, was his rival. Willard, who was not Irish, spanked Johnson, but then I took Willard, after which the Irish Tunney won the title from me.

All along the line for nearly 50 years a son or nephew of Erin either was boss or was one of those standing right alongside the heavy throne in the matter of greatness. But now you can scan the fistic horizon and see a Lithuanian, a German, an Italian, an Englishman, a German, a Negro and men from all countries—except Ireland.

It seems to me that the Irish ought to rise up in indignation, get organized and do something about this doleful matter. Certainly, it doesn't seem right that there isn't a great Irish heavyweight in the front row these days.

Let's get some Irish into heavyweight harness—Irish who can do things with their fists.

"But," sighed Jim Corbett, the last time I met up with him, and during which occasion we discussed the disappearance of Irish battlers, "Where'll we get 'em?"

Pierpoints Beat Celtics, 2-0, Advance in Cup Play

MOTORS FLASH POOR FORM IN TOURNEY GAME

Powell, McCurdy Score Goals In Battle at Homewood; Large Crowd Attends.

Jimmy Moreman Misses Many Opportunities to Register Points for Victors.

By TOM BIRKS.

THE Pierpoint Motors soccer team advanced in the national amateur cup tournament yesterday afternoon at Homewood at the expense of the Pittsburgh Celtics, the Motors winning by a 2-goals-to-0 score. Both goals came late in the second half, Charley Powell scored the first with a great shot, and Johnny McCosky scored the second, when Henderson only partly stopped a penalty kick.

However, the game was a flop as far as a real battle was concerned. Of course the hard, rough ground did not help matters much, but the winning of the game by the Pierpoints can be laid to the fact that the halfback line functioned perfectly, and gave a poor forward line chances galore.

A good-sized crowd braved a bitter cold afternoon to watch the game, which had been classed as the battle of the season, but it fell far short. Pierpoints gave a pitiful exhibition of soccer, and the Celtics were worse. Had the Celtics reproduced the Douglas form they would have won easily.

It seems as if Jimmy Moreman keeps his goal-scoring ability until he gets out of town, for again in this game he missed enough chances to win half a dozen games. Pierpoints had the advantage of a litle wind in the first half, and the Celtics found themselves playing defensive soccer. Joe Harbin was the best man on the field and held the Celtic front line in his grip. Stenzel, Van Jura and Harbin kept breaking up the Celtics' efforts to get away, and lobbing the ball in front of Henderson, the Pierpoint front line showed a pitiful weakness scoring goals. Charley Powell made a good partner for McCosky, but should have been playing center forward.

In the second half Powell got away with a burst of speed, and shooting across the field beat Henderson for the first goal. With seven minutes to go, the Celtics' defense punched the ball out of goal with Henderson beaten. McCosky took the kick. Henderson partly saved the shot, but it hit the cross bar and went into the net. The lineup:

GOAL—Powell scoring the first goal for Pierpoint in its 2-0 victory over the Pittsburgh Celtics in the National amateur soccer competition at Homewood yesterday afternoon.

ACTION—A bit of midfield action in the Pierpoint-Celtics game. The victors pressed the play most of the time and some great work by the Celtics' goalie was necessary to keep down the score.

PENN TOPS INDIANA

JOHNNY GOLDEN AND MEHLHORN TIED FOR LEAD

Eastern Stars Set Pace at End of First Thirty-six Holes in Pasadena Open.

Course Record Falls Before Stroking of Paterson (N. J.) Pro.

PASADENA, Cal., Dec. 21. —(AP.)—Two golf exponents from the Atlantic seaboard, Johnny Golden and Bill Mehlhorn, today stroked their way to the lead of a field of more than 100 players in the Pasadena $4,000 open tournament, putting 36 holes of qualifying play behind them with cards of 140.

Within a stroke of this pair trooped a quintet of links performers tied for second place. Among them was George Von Elm, Detroit amateur, who yesterday headed the list with his fellow-townsman, Walter Hagen.

Golden collected five birdies in his round today, shooting both the outgoing and income nines two under par. Mehlhorn's outgoing card was a beauty. It included four birdies, which enabled him to finish with 33, three under perfect figures. He came home in par 35.

GOLDEN SETS RECORD

Along with Von Elm came Craig Wood, defending titleholder, from Bloomfield, N. J.; Horton Smith, Joplin, Mo.; Joe Kirkwood, the trick shot artist from Philadelphia, and Densmore Shute, Columbus, O., all with scores of 141.

Golden, who hails from Patterson, N. J., shot 67 on today's 18, one under the course record held by Wood, and four under par figures. This was by a stroke the best card of the proceedings. Wild Bill Mehlhorn, New York professional, and Kirkwood, had 686, for the next best count.

On the basis of scores of 151 or better, 64 qualified to compete for the money in tomorrow's concluding 36 holes. Outside of the select group stood Clarence Clark, Tulsa, Okla., professional, who won the San Gabriel amateur-professional event a few days ago, and Tommy Armour, of Detroit. All the other favorites survived.

FARRELL IN RUNNING

Johnny Farrell, New York, runner-up in the Professional Golfers' Association championship, shot a sub-par 70 to keep in the running with a 142, with six others a stroke behind.

In this group was the great Haig. Stubborn greens, which saw him three-putt a number of holes, were responsible for his 74.

The leading cards included:

School Fives Enjoy Rest

High school basketball teams in Western Pennsylvania will enjoy a real vacation during the holiday period, no games being scheduled until January 3, when the Western Pennsylvania Interscholastic Athletic League opens its annual campaign.

The W. P. I. A. L. includes in its membership all the high school quintets in the western part of the state. The winners in the various sections meet in a championship series at the close of the season, the champion meeting the victors from the other sections of the district.

Dukes, Adrian Meet In Only Local Game

Pitt Panthers Idle Until December 31; Carnegie Tech on Road.

PITTSBURGH'S followers of collegiate basketball face another lean week insofar as games are concerned, only one contest being carded here, that between Duquesne University and Adrian on the Bluff court next Friday night.

Dr. Carlson's University of Pittsburgh Panthers will not engage in any active competition until New Year's Eve when they oppose the Buckeyes of Ohio State University in the Stadium pavillion, while Coach Hogan's Carnegie Tech passer play two games abroad this week-end, meeting Youngstown Y. M. C. A. in Youngstown, Friday, and St. John's College in Toledo, O., next Saturday night.

FEW GAMES CARDED

Aside from the contests mentioned the three local college aggregations have little in store for them until after the first of the year when they enter their year's schedules in full stride.

Next Saturday Geneva College will start its campaign in a non-collegiate affair, tackling the crack Buhl Club in Sharon.

The Panther-Buckeye game is one of the headliners on the Pitt program and is certain to attract a large number of Big Ten alumni to the Stadium. The Ohioans are said to have a powerful floor machine this year and they loom as a real test for Coach Carlson's Panthers.

Judging from the manner in which Coach Ralph Hogan has taken hold of the basketball squad at Carnegie Tech, the Tartans are due for a bright season in the floor sport. It will be recalled that the past two years have been lean ones, to say the least, but better things are now in store for Plaid followers.

Hogan was himself a star player in high school and college days. The high school team which he captained back in Iowa won 34 consecutive games, then after losing a hard-fought contest, stretched its winning streak to 53 games.

NEW STYLE STARTED

Coach Hogan has instituted a new style of attack at Carnegie Tech this year, something which is practically new around these parts and should cause Tartan opponents no little trouble in solving. His attack is built around a tall center and active, rangy forwards. He has just what he needs in Merten, elongated center, and Capt. Nease and Logan Webster, forwards who stand over 6 feet in height.

Capt. Nease is expected to have a great year. He starred at guard last season, his first on the varsity, but this fall Hogan moved him up to forward where Nease is perfectly at home. He is active, can shoot well, and fits into team play. Nease hails from Tarentum, where he played on the high school team some years ago.

Another boy who should go great guns this year is the veteran Wayne High, guard. The Reading boy never looked better than now and should worry opposing forwards quite a great deal.

FLORIDA RACE MEET IS OFF

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Dec. 21. —(AP.)—W. E. Ford, manager of Keeney Park racing plant, said tonight that Frank A. Keeney, owner of the track, had informed him there would be no more racing at Keeney Park this season.

Keeney said, according to Ford, that insofar as Keeney Park was concerned, the winter racing season in Florida was off.

Fred O. Eberhardt, Tallahassee publisher, whose threatened injunction proceedings were said by Keeney to have caused the closing of the Keeney track yesterday, issued a signed statement only in which he declared that it was his purpose to "suppress by injunction the use and occupation of any other race tracks in the State of Florida where gambling is habitually permitted."

The park closed late yesterday following Eberhardt's announcement that he had planned to file application for an injunction today seeking to enjoin operation of the plant on the grounds that alleged gambling existed there, which, he said, constituted a "nuisance and a violation of the state law." The park opened a scheduled 27-day meet last Saturday, but closed abruptly at the end of yesterday's events.

Blameless, Turf Idol Win Races in Mud

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.—(AP.)—Mud runners had their innings at Jefferson Park, New Orleans, today as a cold, raw rain kept attendance down to less than 1,200. The fourth and feature race, a 5½ furlongs sprint for two-year-olds, went to Blameless, given a good ride by O'Malley. Blameless took command a furlong from home and won by four lengths. Colonel Bell was second and Justina third. The biggest jolt to the form sheets came in the second race where Rocket Glare paid $78.50 for $2 to win.

At Havana, James Butler' Turf Idol splashed through heavy going to a victory in the featured purse. Imperator was second and Carloman third. The time for the six furlongs was 1:17 and the winner paid 5 to 1 in the betting.

YALE ICEMEN WIN

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.—(AP.)—The Yale hockey team, intercollegiate champion last season, defeated a fighting Dartmouth squad tonight, 3 to 2, to open the college season at Madison Square Garden. The Elis scored twice in the second period to gain the victory.

BOWLING LEAD CUT

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.—(AP.)—Joe Falcaro, of New York, shaved more than 100 pins off Joe Scribner's lead in the fourth block of their world championship individual bowling match here tonight. With 20 more games—two blocks—to go, Scribner led by 38 pins.

Army Gridders Near End Of Journey; Trojans Drill

very grouchy and very much out of sorts. It will take 'em two days to get anyways near the trim they hoped to be in today. All the stiffness and soreness and lack of exercise, with its accompanying effect, detrimental to be sure, on the physical welfare of the squad will not do the Cadets' chances against Pop and his Cards much good.

Upon arriving in Palo Alto tomorrow, the huge Cadet party will be split up somewhat. The Varsity, reserve and freshmen teams will stay in Palo Alto, while others of the outfit, including Gen. Smith, commandant at West Point; Maj. Fleming, graduate manager of athletics; Capt. Wells, director of publicity, and other staff officers, will move into the St. Francis in San Francisco, where Army headquarters will be established.

TOUCHING SCENE

A very touching scene took place at the Santa Fe station last evening as Los Angeles acquaintances and Pittsburgh stay-overs took sad leave of the Dutch Krieder. Tears welled in the eyes of the guests as Mr. Krieder majestically boarded the Chief, crack choochoo of the Santa Fe, and in a loud voice gave three rousing cheers, first for Carnegie Tech, second for himself and third for Frank Moran, Old Mary Ann.

Included among those of the farewell party were folks well known in Pittsburgh. There were Dr. and Mrs. Arnold Gibson, Mrs. Vera Vaughn, George Gray, Mr. and Mrs. Beans Reardon, Bob Meusel, Bob Miller, official of the Biltmore, and, boo hoo, your own correspondent.

And after the train had pulled out, imagine the embarrassment of everyone when Dutch's hat was discovered in my hand. Such a life!

TROJANS IN LONG DRILL

PASADENA, Cal., Dec. 21.—(AP.)—Coach Howard Jones sent his University of Southern California gridsters through a strenuous dummy scrimmage today, placing special emphasis on the play of the line, which he said would have to click on New Year's Day if the Pittsburgh Panthers are to be turned back at the Pasadena Rose Bowl.

Jones placed Capt. Nathan Barragar at the running guard position, from which he had been crowded in mid-season by a sophomore, John Baker. Barragar apparently has regained his early-season form.

Jones indicated he was far from pleased with the functioning of the Trojan line in the Carnegie Tech game, which saw the Tartans outrush the Trojans in the first half, before they wilted and took the short end of the 45-to-13 score. Pittsburgh, the eastern representative in the annual intersectional classic, has a line touted highly along the Atlantic Coast.

SCRIMMAGE TUESDAY

The first scrimmage against the Spartans, the cannon fodder against which the U. S. C. first-string brushes up its defense against opponents' particular brand of football, is scheduled for Tuesday. Christmas Day will be a holiday in Trojan football circles, but Thursday the squad will be cut to 35 men and moved to a Pasadena hotel. Practice will be shifted the day after Christmas from Bovard Field on the campus, to the Rose Bowl turf.

The Trojan coach said he was satisfied with the team's backfield strength, augmented this week by the return of the fleet-footed Jesse Hill to the fullback berth. Hill, one of the most elusive runners on the Pacific seaboard, and a track man of note, has been out with a twisted knee. Don Moses, halfback, and Jones, were at Bovard Field today, still evidencing effects of bad colds which confined them to their homes yesterday.

WARM WELCOME FOR CADETS

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 21.—(INS.)—A huge army rally will greet the West Point football team when it detrains at Palo Alto at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

Every officer and retired officer in the Bay region was being recruited tonight as a member of the reception committee and hundreds of them from Maj. Gen. John L. Hines, commander of the Ninth Corps Area, down will be on hand with a rousing cheer for the Cadet athletes.

The Thirtieth Infantry band has been practicing old West Point songs and it will be grinding out music when the West Point special train rolls into the Stanford Campus.

The Army reception committee will escort the team, 100 players in all, to Branner Hall, where they will be quartered while in Palo Alto, and then Coach Biff Jones will probably get a few of the train kinks out of his boys.

Sportsmen Leave Fields for Winter Indoor Events

HUNTERS TURN ATTENTION TO LOCAL RANGES

Trapshooting and Revolver Matches to Attract Many Pittsburgh Gun Enthusiasts

Bench Shows in Various Sections of Country on Program; South Draws Many

By GIB MARSH.

Gib Marsh

NOW that the hunting season is an event of the past and the sportsmen have shelved their rifles and shot guns for the year they will turn their attentions to the various winter pastimes. Those sports will include the week-end trapshooting contests at the various gun clubs about this vicinity, indoor revolver matches, bench shows and the running and schooling of sporting dogs. And the various sportsmen's associations will schedule the monthly entertainments, showing moving pictures of big-game hunting, angling scenes and views of games refuges and fish hatcheries, which will be another means for the sportsmen to assemble and discuss their favorite pastimes.

Many local sportsmen will journey into the southern states where quail and waterfowl shooting may be enjoyed and patrons of the field trial dog will invade the South where a number of the blue ribbon events for bird dogs are staged annually. However, the majority of the local owners of gun dogs take advantage of the splendid laws in this state for the running of sporting dogs and obtain a lot of pleasure and recreation in running and schooling their pets in the rural districts of Allegheny County.

The state laws permit the running of bird dogs, beagles and raccoon hounds until March 1. And when the weather permits this group of sportsmen with their dogs roam over the fields and through the thickets, seeking a covey of quail or a large, strong rabbit to give the beagles a workout.

REVOLVER LEAGUE

THOSE who follow the revolver shooting sport will center their activities on the contests staged by the local revolver league which includes quite a number of clubs in this section. Weekly matches are staged by this league and the schedule continues through the winter months.

When the weather permits the weekly trapshooting contests staged by the local gun clubs are patronized. Many trapshooters are not enthusiastic about shooting in cold weather, but winter shooting does offer an opportunity to master the game. And certainly there's a multitude of points in the sport to learn. And the time to master those details is during the winter months, especially the novice who is working with different guns of different stock dimensions to determine which of those dimensions are suitable.

During January the first of the registered trapshooting tournaments, those of national interest, will be staged in the south. Probably the mid-winter tournament at Pinehurst is always the first of these major events to attract the target breakers. This tournament continues for one week and in former years was a most popular event. During the past few years it has not been patronized with the same large fields of gunners That the attendance has fallen off is likely due to the fact that in nearly every state important winter contests are staged and it is no longer necessary to journey to Pinehurst for participation in the sport.

MADISON SQUARE SHOW

FOR the patrons of the bench show pastime the first and most important show will be staged by the Westminster Kennel Club, at the Madison Square Garden in New York. That exhibition draws nearly 2,500 dogs, the fashionable of the canines of this country. Every breed from the burly Great Danes to the pigmy top types will be benched and the breed winners will be listed and recognized as the national champion of its respective breed for the year.

As usual Pittsburgh and vicinity will be represented at this show with a score or more of dogs, all possessing the necessary baggage of quality and confirmation to hold their own against the nation's best. Four breed champions were captured by Allegheny County dogs last year at the big bench show. I am told there are a lot of Western Pennsylvania dogs now being groomed for this banner show. The New York show opens the national winter bench show circuit. From New York the fashionable canines are usually shipped to Boston, another show of class. The big local exhibitor over the winter circuit will be Robert F. Maloney, who will exhibit his wonderful group of pointers, which proved to be the best in this country last year.

The star of this group will be Herowithm J. P., undefeated last year, and is regarded as the greatest pointer ever shown in the United States.

BENCH SHOWS HERE

A SCORE or more bench shows are scheduled in towns within a short distance of this city, which always attract a lot of interest among the Pittsburgh exhibitors. So the followers of the bench show sport have a generous program for their winter's pleasure. However, there is one event that is no longer staged for the pleasure of those who follow the pastimes of the great outdoors and that is the sportsmen's show in New York. That was a popular event some years ago. Shows of that character are staged annually in Cleveland and Chicago, but no longer in New York. The New York show was discontinued because of the heavy expense and for the same reason it was discontinued in this city.

Those shows included an exhibition of guns, fishing equipment, usually a sporting dog show and contests for casters, small bore rifle shooters and revolver events. I remember at the New York show trapshooting contests were staged on the roof of the garden. These shows were so decorated that when you entered the impression was conveyed of walking into a forest. Scattered about the big hall were pens containing deer, bear, all species of small game. However, it was a costly enterprise and the gate usually failed to cover the overhead expense in New York.

ON SCORING RAMPAGE

LOWREY—When Frank Frederickson, player-manager of the Pirates, was forced out of the lineup with a wrenched knee about 10 days ago, Jerry Lowrey, sturdy young wingman, was given a chance to do his stuff as a member of the starting forward line. When Jerry was graduated from the reserves his scoring total was about zero, but he has maintained such a rapid scoring pace in recent games that he now is tied with Darragh and Frederickson for the individual leadership among the Pirates. Lowrey has hammered the puck into the enemy net nine times and he has assisted in the recording of two other tallies.

Spooner, Spare Goalie, Signs Buc Contract

ANDY SPOONER, reserve goaler, has "made the grade" and now is a full-fledged Pirate iceman.

Andy, who won considerable renown while tending the nets for the Port William team, reported here last Tuesday to try out as an understudy to Joe Miller. Although only 19 years of age, the newcomer convinced Manager Frank Frederickson that he was old in hocky experience and hockey cunning. Frederickson tendered Andy a contract. Andy signed.

Other members of the Pirate squad regard Spooner as an exceptionally promising goalie. He is exceptionally fast, and is well schooled in the tricks of his trade.

The acquisition of Spooner boosts the Pirates' list of up-and-coming youngsters to five. They are Manners, Lowrey, Barton, Jarvis and Spooner.

Leidenroth Made Member of S. A. R.

Hugo Marion Leidenroth, coming local golfer, and son of Honorary Adjutant Capt. Hugo Leidenroth, of the Pittsburgh Commandery, Knights Templar, has been accepted as a member of the Pittsburgh Chapter, Sons of the American Revolution, Col. Franklin Blackstone, vice president of the local S. A. R. society, has announced. Leidenroth was made a member through descent from Capt. David Steel, of the Thirteenth Virginia Regiment, 1776.

Pirate Six Plays In Detroit Tonight

Local Skaters to Meet Cougars in Return Engagement Here Thursday

By CARL W. SHATTO.

AN exceptionally light schedule is the Christmas gift which National Hockey League clubs receive from the loop chiefs. This week's card is the lightest of the season, only nine games being scheduled. The abbreviated program will enable many of the performers in hockey's big show to spend Christmas Day with relatives and friends at their homes in Canada.

The Detroit club, Pittsburgh's "natural" rival, has been overlooked by Santa Claus, and its only gift will be a lot of work. The Cougars are slated to participate in three of the nine games on the card, and they will be traveling to and from battles when not engaged in actual competition.

MEET COUGARS TWICE

The Pirates have a very prominent place in the Cougars' picture. Tonight they will start the Detroiters down their thorny path when they make their season's debut against the Auto City puckmen, and on Thursday night the Cougars will be at Duquesne Garden when the Bucs make their only home stand of the week.

The locals have the edge on the Michiganders in that at the conclusion of tonight's joust they can journey to their homes for a Christmas dinner while the Cougars rush to New York to meet the Americans in a Christmas Eve engagement.

The Cougars will travel from New York to Pittsburgh and will be here to receive the Pirates when they return from their homes for the Thursday night fight.

BUCS WELCOME REST

The few days of rest which the schedule provides will be very welcome to Frederickson and his men. The Bucs encountered opposition in big quantities when they met the Leafs in Toronto last night, and the game tonight will be their second in as many days. Moreover, the locals still are badly crippled. MacKinnon's sprained ankle is well on the mend and he probably will be in top form by Thursday, but Drury, out for more than a month with a broken hand, does not expect to get back in harness until the first week in January. Player-Manager Frederickson's wrenched knee is showing very little appreciation of the excellent treatment it is receiving, and he does not expect to be able to exchange his crutches for skates before January 15.

WARM FIGHTS EXPECTED

Both Pirates-Cougars games probably will produce some exceptionally torrid battling. The Pittsburgh and Detroit clubs have taken turns at beating out each other to get into the Stanley Cup play-offs for so many years that they have come to be regarded as natural rivals, and their meetings to be regarded as high spots of the season. The Cougars are only about one jump ahead of the Bucs at the present time, and the locals' courageous, brilliant play in recent starts prompts the belief that the Michiganders' lead will be erased completely before another week has passed.

SCORING RACE CLOSE

Frederickson's injury has been a 100 per cent handicap to the Buc leader, but a boon to Lowrey in the individual scoring race. The Pirate pilot was right up among the league leaders in tallying when forced out of the lineup Lowrey has come on with a rush since he has been teamed with Milks and Darragh in the starting line, and now is tied with Frederickson and Darragh for the lead among the locals. The Pirates individual scoring record, last night's game not included, is as follows:

Frederickson	4	7	11
Darragh	6	5	11
Lowrey	9	2	11
Milks	5	5	10
MacKinnon	5	2	7
Jarvis	2	4	6
McCaffrey	3	3	6
White	5	0	5
Briden	0	2	2
Manners	0	1	1

Station WCAE will play Santa Claus to thousands of gridiron enthusiasts by broadcasting play-by-play accounts of both the Stanford-Army and Pitt-Southern California football games, to be played on the Pacific Coast.

The Army-Stanford game is to be staged at Palo Alto next Saturday and WCAE will start broadcasting an account of this contest at 1:45 Pacific Coast time (4:45 Pittsburgh time).

The Pitt-Southern California game is to feature the annual Tournament of Roses and will be staged in the Rose Bowl at Pasadena on New Year's Day. Graham McNamee, who is to describe the doings of the Panthers, will tell of the Parade of Roses and Battle of Flowers, immediately preceding the fray.

W.&J.'s Floor Team 'Green'

WASHINGTON, Pa., Dec. 21.—Washington and Jefferson College basketball athletes will spend an abbreviated Christmas vacation with the home folk, as they are to report to Coach Pete Henry next Thursday and resume practice in preparation for the coming season.

Coach Henry.

The Presidents will present practically a new combination and it will be tested for the first time by three games with Y. M. C. A. quintets of this district—East Liberty, December 31; Butler, January 1, and Tarentum on January 4.

Coach Henry has cut the squad again. The players remaining are: Lewis, Secrist and Hamilton, veterans, and Wilson, Smith, Sickler, Butler, Harris, McNeil, Martin, Kaiser, Umberger, Joy, Boys and Fry, all sophomores.

What has all the appearance of being a tentative varsity combination for the Presidents is with Lewis and Glenn Smith, forwards, with Sickler making a strong bid; Stew Wilson, center, and John Butler and Kenneth McNeil, guards. Umberger is also showing much promise as a guard.

Coach Henry is not highly optimistic, but believes that he will be able to build a capable team from the 15 players he has selected. Deb. Secrist, brilliant W. & J. end, is a candidate for the floor team, but is with Andy Kerr's squad en route to the Pacific coast and will not be available until somewhat later.

WALL STREET LOSSES SHOW IN BUSINESS

Christmas Trade Is Not Suffering, Leaders Say; Bankers Voice Optimism.

By W. S. COUSINS

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.—The rally in the stock market struck a snag this week as the result of year-end selling to establish tax losses and the accompanying short selling of the professionals, whose sharp-shooters have been on the alert for "weak spots" in the speculative list.

Neither Wall Street nor the industrial and business community look for startling immediate results from the President's conference with business leaders, though their influence in preventing the slowing down of strategic sections of industry and the prevention of unemployment and reduced wage scales have already had a solutary effect on business. It will not do to pooh-pooh the severe financial losses suffered by thousands of big and little dabblers in the stock market all over the country.

These losses are not fictional, but real, and will be, and are, reflected in a falling demand for goods of all kinds. The Christmas trade has not suffered in the opinion of prominent mercantile leaders, but the slowing down in the steel, automobile, copper and other industries has been the most pronounced for a year-end since 1925.

PACE TOO FAST

Even without the crash in the stock market, there was no assurance that business and industry could or would continue at the pace set in the middle and the third quarter of this year. The pace speeded up the operations of the giant steel mills to 100 per cent of capacity at a time when the normal running was 70 per cent or less. Millions of tons of steel which ordinarily went "through the works" in the early fall, and thence into the channels of consumption, were called for in mid-summer, with a hurry-up delivery tag attached. The result was to hasten the manufacture of steel products which would normally be in the forges at this time.

New York bankers, though optimistic over the outlook for next year, recognize that numerous handicaps stand directly in the path of the business and industrial revival. Among the outstanding may be mentioned:

The over-produced condition of the automobile, oil, copper and other industries.

Tapering off in demand for raw and manufactured goods in important lines.

Reduced purchasing power and weakened confidence resulting from the violent break in stock prices.

Because of these handicaps they look for comparatively poor first quarter of 1930 with business stepping up in the second quarter and finishing the year with a flourish.

RECORD EARNINGS

Despite the sudden tapering off of the steel, automobile and other industries in the last quarter of this year, corporation earnings in 1929 will exceed those of 1928, the best of the post-war years, and thus establish a new high peacetime record. It was hardly to be expected that we could continue breaking records and establishing pinnacles particularly when the past records have already reached extraordinary heights.

The three major sections of American industry which have been given the most credit for the revival of industrial prosperity after the war are; steel manufacturing, building construction and automobile manufacturing. Enormous increases in the volume and cash value of the outputs of these industries are written large in the records of post-war American prosperity, and in many respects they are inter-related as representing the individual and corporate needs of a growing country.

The steel industry in 1929, even with the heavy decrease in operations in the last three months of the year, established new high peace-time records for output of finished steel and for net earnings of representative corporations.

AUTO OUTPUT LARGE

The automobile industry made the error of turning out too many cars and trucks in the first half of the year, forcing them down the dealers' throats and instituting a price-cutting which proved costly, to say the least, for many of its important units.

The building construction industry thrives on personal and family prosperity and cheap money. Abundance of money in the mortgage markets at favorable interest rates stimulates home construction, while the withdrawal of funds from this market, such as was witnessed by the crowding of credit into the 10 per cent call loan market, starves the whole construction industry and curtails building.

BUILDING ON GAIN

For that reason it was easy to see that the industry this year would fall far short of the $6,628,000,000 record for buildings of all kinds hung up in 1928. This year's total will be somewhat under six billions, the large increase in commercial building in the centers of population and the huge projects put through by the utility corporations offsetting only partially the enormous falling off in home and suburban construction. The year ends more favorably for the building trade than it opened, because of the loosening up of money supplies for the mortgage markets.

Sugar Market.

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.—Raw sugar was quiet today and in absence of business prices were unchanged. The undertone was steady. Price changes in raw futures were narrow and operations were mostly in the form of evening up for over the week-end adjustment and in exchanging from the January to the later positions. There was a little covering and trade buying early which caused advances of 1 point on some positions, but the demand was not aggressive and the inactivity in the spot market seemed to discourage holders, and reactions followed, with the market closing net unchanged to 1 point lower. Approximate sales, 20,450 tons. December closed 1.82; anuary, 1.87; March, 2.00; May, 2.07; July, 2.13; September, 2.19.

Refined market was unchanged at 5.10 to 5.15 for fine granulated, with a good withdrawal demand, but no new business.

FARMERS' GRAIN GROUP OFFERS LIFT WHEAT

Previous Sellers Rush To Purchasing Side As Prices Start Climb.

CHICAGO, Dec. 21.—Nerve and audacity won a quick triumph in the wheat pit today for friends of higher prices. Offers which the newly-organized $25,000,000 Farmers' National Grain Corporation sent broadcast to buy wheat at above current market quotations had the immediate effect of putting wheat values aloft 5½c a bushel without the corporation actually taking ownership of any wheat whatever. Instead, previous speculative sellers of wheat future deliveries stampeded to the buying side of the market, and foreigners, who have been stubbornly avoiding purchases from North America, reversed that course and made haste today to acquire 2,000,000 bushels for trans-Atlantic shipment, the largest amount taken in a long while.

The Chicago wheat market closed buoyant at practically the day's top figures, 4⅞c to 5½c above yesterday's finish. Corn closed 1⅜c to 2c up, oats ⅞c to 1½c advanced, and provisions unchanged to a setback of 10c.

Tax Loss Selling Helped Bears to Depress Market

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.—A combination of liquidation to establish losses for income tax purposes, liquidation of stock collateral loans by banks to enhance year-end statements, and aggressive short selling by professional "bears" carried share prices in the stock market this week down to the levels of the early stages of the late November rally.

There was no reappearance, however, of large scale or frightened liquidation. The market was extremely dull during the early days of the week, trading slackening up to a state of lethargy not witnessed since last June. But this served merely to hold bearish activity in abeyance, as one of Wall Street's traditions is "never sell a dull market."

HOLIDAY TRADE

Speculators for the advance were apathetic, in view of the uncertainties surrounding the general business situation. Although faith in the fundamental soundness of conditions remains unimpaired, predictions as to how many months the current recession may last are extremely varied. The general volume of holiday trade was reported at a level about as high as last year's, but reports from various sections of the country and on different lines of merchandise were highly uneven.

The market was somewhat unsettled by receivership for International Combustion, a bull favorite of a few months ago, and sharp pressure agaist Fox Film, accompanied by rumors of difficulties in effecting a reorganization. These shares, together with some of the specialties and merchandising issues, notably Montgomery Ward, were driven to new low levels for the year.

PRICE INDEX DROPS

The Standard Statistics Company-Associated Press Price Index of 50 leading industrial stocks lost 11.4 points, net, durmg the week, that of the 20 utilities, 15.7 points, and that of 20 rails, 4.9 points. Not since the first few days of the rally from the bottom levels reached on November 13, have these indices touched such low levels.

So-called tax selling was estimated in large volume, as this year provides the first real opportunity to sell stocks as low levels to establish losses for income tax purposes. Owing to the rather uncertain business outlook, sellers feel fairly confident that they will be able to buy back their shares after the 30-day limit at levels not far from those at which they are selling. The stock market has reached its highest level of the year in December in four out of the past five years, which has obviously given little opportunity to establish losses around the year end.

MONEY FIRMER

As banks loans on securities have declined but moderately, in contrast to the enormous curtailment of brokers loans, it is believed that banks have been liquidating weakly held loans rather liberally. The condition statement of weekly reporting member banks, appearing for the previous week, was more favorable than the brokerage loan statement for the same period for the first time since brokers' loans began their precipitous decline. This week's brokerage loan compilation, however, disclosed a drop of $39,000,000, more than cancelling the $33,000,000 gain of the previous week.

Money was a little firmer during the week, call money touching 5 per cent late Friday for the first time in about a month. This was largely in reflection of holiday currency demands, and continued outflow of gold, $16,500,000 leaving this week.

Auto Registrations Down in November

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.—Additional evidence of the current lull in the buying of so-called luxury articles is furnished by the latest returns of new car registrations. Reports from 21 states show passenger car registrations for November of 50,125, a decline of over 38 per cent from October and 14 per cent for the same month of 1928. Complete returns on registrations from all states for the first 10 months of this year were 3,557,899 passenger cars, an increase of 28.6 per cent over the corresponding period of 1928.

Requests President To Call Conference On Cigaret Business

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.—George J. Weymss, chairman of the Joint National Committee of Tobacco Retailers and Jobbers for Living Margin of Profit, has asked President Hoover to call a conference of the four leading cigaret manufacturers, American Tobacco Company, Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co., P Lorillard Company, and R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company, in an effort to improve the condition of cigaret retailers. Mr. Weymss suggests the inclusion of representatives of the distributing branches at such a conference.

Cigaret manufacturers have disclaimed responsibility for disorganized conditions among cigaret retailers and claim that concerted action, the only kind which could be effective, is illegal. Mr. Weymss says all the profits and prosperity of the cigaret industry go to four companies, while the retailers and wholesalers accept all the losses.

COTTON CLOSES FIRM AT GAIN

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.—The cotton market was higher today on week-end covering and trade buying. Recent improvement in the technical position was reflected by comparatively small offerings. The buying was encouraged by more cheerful view of reports from the cotton goods markets and reports of better tone in the stock and grains markets. January contracts sold up to 17.02 and closed at 17.01, with the general market closing firm at net advances of 23 to 27 points.

The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 126,000 bales against 174,000 last year.

LETTERS FROM INVESTORS

Conducted by LEO HILLMANN.

KEEP IN THE BANK

Mrs. W. H.—I have saved $500 and want to buy good common stock, on which I can make a profit. What do you suggest?

Ans.—Picking stocks for "profits" entails guesswork. Advice that is based on guesswork is useless. We only advise on investment, which signifies income. However, the best place for the $500 is in the bank. Add to it as circumstances permit and watch the amount grow. Then, when you have $2,000 cash, consult us.

DEPENDS ON MEANS

A. M.—I have been told to buy Standard Brands. What is your opinion?

Ans.—Standard Brands controls several well-established food products enterprises. In 1928 earnings for the merged companies equaled $1.70 a share on the 12,350,000 shares outstanding. An initial quarterly dividend of 37½ cents a share paid October 1 will be duplicated January 1. Whether the stock is suitable for you, we do not know. Do you own any securities? How much cash have you accumulated?

INCOME ASSURED

P. M.—I am a working man and bought six shares American Telephone and Telegraph at 220. A friend told me I made a mistake. What is your opinion?

Ans. — You selected a good stock, if you bought for income. The yield at the price you paid was about 4 per cent. When you may expect a greater return is anyone's guess. American Telephone and Telegraph earned in nine months of this year $9.24 a share, compared with $9.10 for similar period last year. In 1928 net profits were $12.11 a share, against $11.76 in 1927. In addition to dividends, paid for 46 years, stockholders have received valuable "rights."

NO ADVICE

D. W. — Please give me your opinion of a purchase of International Combustion Engineering at current levels. Do you think the stock will sell higher?

Ans. — Guessing the market movements of stocks is outside our line. We advise only on investment. International Combustion Engineering common is a gamble. Dividends of $2 a share were distributed from 1922, but the quarterly payment of 50 cents a share due November 30 was omitted because of company's necessity to conserve cash resources. When you are ready to invest, write to us again.

THREE STOCKS

B. S.—I own $2,000 each American Gas and Electric 5s, 2028, Bell Telephone of Canada 5s, 1957, Bethlehem Steel 6s, 1948, and Canadian National Railway 4½s, 1968. I have over $4,000 in a bank, which I want to invest. What shall I buy?

Ans.—Have you thought of buying stocks? For about $3,200 you can get 10 shares each American Type Founders preferred. Idaho Power 7 per cent preferred and Utica Gas and Electric preferred. You would have an annual income of $210. Your bonds are sound. Of course, you know that Bethlehem Steel 6s, 1948, will be retired February 1. Keep the rest of your fund in the bank.

DIVIDENDS EARNED

M. M.—I own outright 25 shares Procter & Gamble at 94. What is your opinion of the stock?

Ans. — Procter & Gamble represents a soap business established in 1837. Earnings have been good. For fiscal year ended June 30, they were $14.85 a share before the five-for-one split, compared with $12.05 in 1928, $11.38 in 1927 and $9.17 in 1926. The present company has paid dividends in varying amounts from 1891. The new stock pays $2 a share annually. Earnings in excess of dividend requirements assure the income, but what affect they will have on your paper loss no one could tell you.

EARNINGS GOOD

E. C.—I own 25 shares Montgomery Ward at 100. Shall I hold or sell?

Ans.—Must you sell? You would take a loss of more than $800. No one, however, knows future prices. Montgomery Ward conducts the country's second largest mail order business and operates close to four hundred retail stores. Earnings have been on an upward trend from 1922. Dividends were paid from 1915 to 1920; nothing until October, 1926, when $1 a share was distributed; $4 in 1927, $5 in 1928. From February to August last, the new stock paid 87½ cents a share quarterly. In November the rate was increased to $3 a share annually. Last July stockholders received "rights" for more stock on favorable terms.

NO DIVIDENDS

Mrs. J. M.—I am a reader of your paper. Please give information on Continental Oil and your opinion of a purchase of the stock.

Ans. — Continental Oil Company (Delaware), organized in June, last, acquired properties and assets of Marland Oil and Continental Oil of Maine. Funded debt is $34,756,900; capital stock, 4,777,029 shares, no par. Earnings for the nine months ended September 30 were $1.63 a share. No dividends have been paid by the present company. Therefore, the stock is a speculation, on which we cannot advise.

STOCKS FOR INCOME

J. F.—I have saved $4,000. I want to buy stocks, those which you think have good chances for advancement. Please give suggestions.

Ans.—Advice is useless when based only on guesswork. We cannot help you select stocks on their chance to advance. Should you decide you want a regular income,

Moderate Rallies Made In Short Stock Session

By BROADAN WALL,
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.—Stocks rallied moderately in the two-hour session today, with gains most pronounced in those issues which were under the severest pressure on Friday. Accumulation of a substantial short interest, together with a drying up of selling for the purpose of establishing tax losses, resulted in strengthening technical conditions and attracted renewed buying from investors.

Union Carbide and Carbon finished 3⅛ points higher, Electric Auto-Lite 3¾ points, American Can 2¾ points, American and Foreign Power 1⅜ points and U. S. Steel a point. Columbian Carbon, which showed a net loss of 21 points the day before, had a sharp run-up of 10 points. In the railroad group, C & O. spurted 4⅜ points, New York Central 3⅞, Wabash 3, New Haven 2¾ and Erie 2. Total turnover for the short session was 1,788,000 shares.

RAILS DISAPPOINTING

Movement of the rail shares as a group was disappointing in view of the publication of the Interstate Commerce Commission's consolidation plan.

As Commissioner Eastman himself pointed out, the plan is at best a makeshift and as it will be subject to rather long drawn out disputes, the only good result to be expected is that it may hasten legislation that will give the roads more leeway in carrying through their own merger ideas. In that way at least one or two consolidations would be effected that would benefit railroad conditions to some extent.

Radio benefitted from an overcrowded short interest. Constructive and bearish factions on the market have been centering their efforts on Radio during the last week with the expectation, perhaps, that the stock may furnish some clue to the future trend of the entire market.

FOX SEEMS OVERSOLD

Fox Film, a favorite bear target recently, appeared to have reached at least a temporarily oversold condition. Predictions of the weekly mercantile reviews that holiday trade this year would approximate in dollar volume that of a year ago, had immediate reflection in the erchandising shares.

Foreign Exchanges experienced their usual week-end quietness, with sterling a shade lower and other European currencies holding firm.

Wheat prices soared on reports that the grain corporation had entered the market with the purpose of supporting prices around these levels. Cotton fluctuated in a narrow range.

A McKeesport garbage wagon was demolished, and one of a team of horses slightly injured, when struck by a Baltimore and Ohio passenger train at the Eleventh street crossing, McKeesport, yesterday.

According to Acting Desk Sergt. John Brennan, of McKeesport police headquarters, the wagon was crossing from behind a freight train which had just passed, and was struck by an eastbound passenger train on an adjoining track. John Hoagland, gateman, police said, had raised the crossing gates unaware of the approaching passenger train. A. C. Yochum was the engineer of the train. Police did not learn the name of the driver of the wagon.

'One Shot' Typhoid Injection Success

HAVANA, Dec. 21.—(AP.)—A "one shot" method of vaccination against typhoid fever recently discovered by surgeons and bacteriologists of the Cuban army, was pronounced a success today by an examining board of the Department of Army and Navy.

A report issued by the department said that up to the present injection experiments have been 92 per cent effective. The old three-dose injection system is to be discarded under plans of the department, which claims that not one case of typhoid has been found among 17,000 soldiers treated with the single injection.

U. S. Will Close Mexican Consulate

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—(AP.)—The State Department announced today that it plans to close the American consulate at Manzanillo, Mexico, probably about the first of next year, because of lack of business.

Officials said definitely that the closing had no connection with the closing of the Mexican consulate at Laredo, Tex., earlier in the week, and that the decision had been reached a month ago. Manzanillo is a small port on the Pacific coast of Mexico.

Repairs will be made at Paramaribo, but the passengers will finish their journey southward by steamship. A broken gas line caused the fire.

NEWSIES AWAIT THEATER PARTY

Everything is ready for the big holiday parties the Sun-Telegraph is giving at the Aldine Theater tomorrow morning and Tuesday morning. The management of the theater is putting on the entire program of the week for the Sun-Telegraph youngsters, starting promptly at 9 o'clock. The feature picture will be "Condemned," with Ronald Colman and Ann Harding, one of the outstanding talking pictures of the year. There also will be a "Krazy Kat" comedy, a newsreel and a technicolor picture, "Mexicana."

Perhaps the most wonderful feature of the show will be the first appearance of "Televox" in a theater. It is being furnished by courtesy of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company expressly for the Sun-Telegraph carrier boys, and it will be the first time that this latest electrical wonder has been demonstrated to others than adults.

"Televox" will be dressed in its Christmas clothes. "Televox," by the way, is none other than a man made of iron and steel with mechanism for a brain that follows every instruction. It is so near to the human that it does scores of things that a man can do. It obeys orders at the blast of a whistle. The Westinghouse company will have an expert on hand to tell the boys all about "Televox" and demonstrate everything this marvel does.

Christmas Calls Runaway Boy Football Star Home

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 21.—(INS.)—Hungry and penniless with the Christmas holidays near, Merrill Morrison, 19-year-old captain of the championship Central High School football eleven, has written his parents from a town in Florida asking for railroad fare so he may return to his parental fireside in time for Christmas, his mather revealed today.

"It's the old story," said she, "of a boy away from home, alone, home-sick and hungry, whose thoughts have turned to the luxuries and pleasures he had at home and wants to go back to them again."

Morrison disappeared a couple of weeks ago. He visited a friend in Lancaster the next day, and then dropped out of sight. Police at the request of his parents started a nation-wide search for him, but without results. The first news of his whereabouts was received in the letter from the missing youth.

The money requested has been sent the young grid star, and he is expected to start home Monday.

WALL STREET'S CHRISTMAS TO SHOW NO GLOOM

Brokers, Bankers 'Forget' Debacle, Plan Big Bonus Gifts; Baskets for Poor.

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN.
International News Service.

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.—Wall Street's 1929 Christmas spirit is undimmed. It is just as cheery as if the late unpleasantness had never happened, a tour of the financial district revealed today. It's going to be a "big Christmas" in "the street of gold."

Yuletide chatter is in the air. Brokers and bankers are "forgetting" the recent debacle that sent stock prices crashing down. They are looking to 1930 with optimism and "let's go" is the slogan. Employes are talking of the bonuses they are to receive. Christmas holly adorn the windows of banks and brokerage houses; presents are being distributed with a generous hand, and the scarlet-garbled Salvation Army lassies tinkling bells before donation pots are finding the intake surprisingly heavy.

The New York Stock Exchange will give Christmas bonuses of 10 per cent of their 1929 salaries to its employes. This is substantially the same as paid last year. Substantial bonuses are being announced right and left—by the big banks, the brokerage houses and individual operators.

CAROL SINGING

Wall Street will hold a Christmas celebration on Monday when a large tree will be lighted and members of the financial community will unite in caroling. The Rev. Caleb R. Stetson, rector of the famous Old Trinity Church, located in the heart of the district, will pronounce the benediction.

The New York Curb Exchange is planning a "big Christmas eve." Baskets of toys will be distributed to the poor and in each basket, or bag, will be a $1 bill and an order for a pair of shoes. The United States Steel Corporation will have a Christmas celebration next week and the New York Stock Exchange will have a Christmas program at which addresses will be made and carols sung.

"There is no place in the world where the Christmas spirit is more pronounced than right here in Wall street," said William J. Boyd, who has lived in the district for 75 years. He was born in the shadow of Wall street, and for years had been sexton of Trinity Church. He still is.

MEN HAVE FAITH

Strangely like Santa Claus himself in appearance, Sexton Boyd's eyes glowed as he talked Christmas spirit with International News Service in the church rectory today. Wall street downhearted? Mr. Boyd laughed.

"The men of Wall street are men," he said with conviction. "They have faith. It is the men with faith who succeed."

Boyd has known them all—the late Elbert H. Gary, the late J. Pierpont Morgan, the Rockefellers, all the big men from '65 to today. Why, he even knew Grover Cleveland. The now deceased President was a pallbearer at a funeral in Old Trinity. And Mr. Morgan—

Sexton Boyd becomes reminiscent:

"Mr. Morgan came here to the church to hear the bishop of London preach a sermon. He had to stand up, so great was the crowd. I said: 'Mr. Morgan, I'll get you a seat,' and he, democratic man that he was, replied: 'No, thanks, I can stand as well as the next.'"

SAW LINCOLN

Mr. Boyd recalls seeing President Lincoln ride in a carriage along Broadway past Old Trinity Church. He said, however, that no event he ever witnessed raised more enthusiasm than the procession for Col. Lindbergh after this flight to Paris. He speaks with great pride of Trinity church. He says, "it's more than a church—it's a national institution; people from cities and hamlets all over the country, and from all parts of the world, come to visit it." In the graveyard adjoining the church are the graves of Alexander Hamilton, Robert Fulton and many other distinguished citizens.

"Last Christmas," said Mr. Body, "there were 1,200 at noon services here and 800 at the 2:30 p. m. service. We probably will have just as many, or more, this Christmas. You'd be surprised how Wall Street men drop into church daily. Business and religion go together."

And so it seemed. There is something about Old Trinity Church that attracts the human soul, just as Wall Street attracts the mind. There it stands in lower Broadway, its soaring spire much lower than the towering structures all about it. But somehow it dominates the picture. To the hurrying throngs in the streets it is a reminder of things unseen, it has an appeal to the soul—particularly so around Christmas time.

P. A. Joyce, president of the Equitable Gas Company's Association will preside at the Gayety Theater festivities. D. J. Hennessy, assistant controller of the Philadelphia Company, will be the general chairman.

Miss Evans Makes Her Bow at Ball

By PATRICIA PITT

THOUGH there won't be enough snow in Pittsburgh this Christmas for us to hear the merry jingle of sleigh bells, if there were sleighs instead of limousines, I do think Jack Frost will do his very best for us this Yuletide, and give us enough to make Pittsburgh glistening white.

In addition to the Christmas cheer of giving and receiving gifts and seeing all the members of one's family, there'll be the gayest of gay social events for everyone, particularly debutante and school sets. And of course the college set will attend all the bud affairs.

Laura Evans Makes Bow

AND the week-end has been just as eventful as the days to come. Last night one of the most popular buds of the season, Laura Evans, daughter of the Howard Salisbury Evanses, made her debut at a ball her father and mother gave in the Pittsburgh Club. The stage in the ballroom was banked with ferns and bamboo, with smilax festooning the walls. And the dinner tables were centered with pink roses and lighted by slender pink tapers.

A dinner for the buds of the season and a few of the girls who made their bows during the last few seasons preceded the ball. And at the dance later all the groups of the social world were represented.

The debutante, who received with her mother and father and sister Evelyn, looked charming in a simple gown of white transparent velvet, in the princess mode, contrasting with her vivacious brunette coloring. Her slippers were of American beauty satin, and flowers in the same shade formed her Colonial bouquet. Black velvet with a crystal embroidered bertha was worn by the deb's mother, and green tulle by her sister. And Mrs. Evans wore a shoulder corsage of orchids, and Evelyn, of gardenias.

Two of Laura's roommates at Miss Porter's School at Farmington came on for her debut, and are week-end guests at the Evans' home. They are Betty Jones, daughter of the T. A. D. Joneses, of New Haven, Conn., and Mary Greenway Russell, of Winchester, Va.

James A. Farrell, Jr., of New York, is also a week end

Characterizations Clever At Elsa Maxwell's Party

By CHOLLY KNICKERBOCKER

Universal Service Society Editor.

ELSA MAXWELL'S Party! It would be difficult to say which of the many characterizations was the cleverest and which of the entertainments was best.

First honors for the former should be divided between Mrs. "Charlie" Lawrence, who, garbed as "Eleo" Sears, was so like the well-known Boston social-athletic marvel it was difficult to realize she really was not "Eleo;" George Gershwin, who was more like "Groucho" Marx than "Groucho" himself; Mrs. Sloane Dodge, who was announced as "Mrs. Jerome Napoleon Bonaparte," and Hugo Rumboldt, who came as Mme. Von Hindenburg and who remained true to the character all evening.

As for the entertainment—a brilliant part of the event—my vote goes to Evelyn Laye, who sang several of her numbers from "Bitter Sweet." But running a close second were Beatrice Lillie, who was attired as Clifton Webb; Ruth Etting, who came as Ruth Etting; Fanny Brice, who was, according to her own confession and the announcement made on her arrival, "Mary Garden," and Gertrude Lawrence, "Yvonne Printemps."

To illustrate how seriously Elsa's guests took the event

Christmas Cheer Brought to Needy by Women's Clubs

Work Intensified And Changed for Holiday Season

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

SINCE service is synonomous with the Christmas spirit, it follows that the women's clubs keep Christmas all the year around. Even the most cursory review of club acitivities would show this to be true. But at Christmas time this spirit is intensified and perhaps changed a bit to suit the season. For instance, only at Christmas do we have the Toy Mission, that most worthy movement which has become an institution under George L. Bond's fathering.

One is probably safe in stating that no other philanthropy receives more help in general from the club women than does the Toy Mission. Scarcely an organized club in the city but recognizes it either by a cash contribution or a toy shower, and in nearly all the year books one can read at the foot of a December page "Toy Mission Day." Toy Mission headquarters this year, by the way, are on Penn avenue, near the Congress of Clubs.

Blind Helped

If there is only one month in which to help the Toy Mission, by contrast there is the work for the blind, another very general activity among the clubs, that is kept up all through the year. Nearly all the clubs have regular days on which the members meet to cut and sew carpet rags for use at the Workshop for the Blind. Some have dinners and luncheons annually for their sightless beneficiaries.

The Christmas party and entertainment given yesterday at Trinity Parish House by the social service committee of the Pennsylvania Association for the Blind represents one of the finest pieces of Yuletide philanthropy. On a smaller scale the same may be said of the holiday dinner which the Christmas committee of Torrance House (the home for blind girls) will give on January 6.

This late date has been chosen because the majority of the girls and women living at Torrance House are invited to private homes for Christmas day and New Year's. The Christmas committee of seeing friends who are arranging the dinner are Miss Ldye Kerr Wilson, Mrs. Anna S. Dilworth, Mrs. Walter A. May, Jr., Mrs. Frances Speer Reed and Mrs. James G. Lewis. Torrance House will have both outdoor and indoor Christmas trees this year.

Scholarships Given

A distinctly different form of service is that done by the Sarah Sloan Scholarship Club, still the only club in the country which devotes itself exclusively to scholarship work.

Seventeen young men and women are at present going through college on scholarships provided by this organization, which has $2,600 invested in their educations. These scholarship students were invited to the club's Christmas luncheon held yesterday in the Congress of Clubs. By the way, the Scholarship Club membership is open to men, and two of them have already availed themselves of the opportunity to become life members.

Christmas at Cresson Sanatorium will be brighter for the interest the Health Colony Club shows in the patients there. Scout knives, 250 of them; 75 dolls, 60 toys, 25 purses, each containing a coin; 24 pencil box sets, 24 strings of beads, 15 books, 20 scrapbooks, 24 records and 30 yards of flannelette and 30 yards of percale, were sent up for the children, and each one of the men in the Health Colony cottage was given a package containing hose, necktie, handkerchief and playing cards. Sixty wool caps were sent by the club to Leech Farm.

Blankets Donated

Blankets to Faith Home, which is at present blanketless; boys' clothing to Penwood Home, and shoes for 27 children at Curtis Home, is the special Christmas giving of the Junior Guild of Squirrel Hill, one of the most efficient philanthropic organizations in the city, and one that works quietly through the entire year.

More than 200 gifts of dolls, toys and clothing were collected by the Dorothy Miller Christmas committee of the New Era Club at its annual ingathering in the home of Mrs. Charles S. Miller, for whose daughter the committee was named. These gifts, in addition to four baskets of groceries, will be distributed to investigated cases through three institutions and in private homes, which otherwise would be Christmasless.

Various philanthropies are engaged in by the different departments of the Congress of Clubs, one of the most admirable pieces of work being done by the home department in its "adoption" of a family, a mother and her six children ranging in age from 17 years to 22 months. Improvement in their well-being has been marked since the home department began its care. The winter's coal has been paid for, milk has been provided and clothing furnished and special remembrances added for Christmas.

Family Aided

The Town Club is another group specializing in the care of a family, to the members of which it carries Christmas cheer in addition to looking after them to a certain extent during the other 11 months of the year.

This wholly inadequate list is intended only to give some idea of the scope of "Christmasing" done by the clubwomen of the city, and is by no means inclusive of either clubs or activities.

Christmas Messages of National, State and District Club Leaders

"THE General Federation News," official organ of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, carries this Christmas message from the president, Mrs. John F. Sippel, of Baltimore:

I AM sending you my most sincere and heartfelt holiday greetings.

During the past year my entire program has been as much in contact with those overseas and with those who have gone from land to land with messages of peace as with those in our own country and the developments of the past 12 months renew within me the belief that the day of miracles is not over. The year just closing has witnessed a greater evidence of good will among men of all nations than has existed since the birth of the First Ambassador of Peace, and so I am convinced that the miracle of world peace is today more nearly a reality than ever before

May the peace of God be with each of you, my dear club women, and with those near and dear to you throughout this blessed Christmas season.

From Mrs. John A. Frick, of Allentown, president of the State Federation of Pennsylvania Women, comes this word through "The Messenger":

TODAY is Armistice Day, the day of days on which to write a Christmas message. The great Hebrew statesman and prophet—Isaiah — said to his generation: "How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings that publisheth Peace." Paul, an Apostle of Jesus Christ, echoed the words at the beginning of the Christian era. They have revibrated through the centuries until today we find the world demanding that the machinery of war be supplanted by the machinery of Peace.

Dr. Fosdick in an Armistice Day sermon reminded us that peacemakers can no longer be passive idealists, but must be active, intelligent citizens with their faces turned from outlawed war towards the friendly understanding of all nations that alone can lay the foundation of permanent peace.

To the Department of International Relations falls the responsibility of creating and guiding public opinion that will make the Federation a force in this great world need. What better gift could we lay at the feet of the little Christ Child than our solemn pledge to work and to pray for wisdom and courage; to add our voice to the demand of the world that there shall be peace for evermore. Then again will be heard the clear Hosannahs from the mountain top, and the angels will take up the song—"Christ the Lord of Love is born anew."

To each one of you, dear club friends, I send this wish—

"Joy and prosperity, happiness, peace;
Of these I wish you a blessed increase.
I bear you in memory this Yuletide and say—
'God bless you and grant you a bright Christmas Day.'"

Mrs. Ralph W. Johnston president of the Congress of Clubs and Club Women of Western Pennsylvania, says in "The Outlet" to her constituents:

CHRISTMAS is a home time and a busy time for everybody in the home, particularly Mother.

Mothers are not idle at any time, but Christmas brings many added duties and responsibilities. It also brings its joys.

Mothers have much pleasure in planning for the home comings. They plan to have the home look its best, to have the food the family enjoys most and to have just the right gift for each member of the family.

Christmas is a family time. It is the one time more than any other when children want to come back home. The story of the Christ Child which gives the day its religious significance also makes of it a family day.

May we always keep it so!

With best wishes to each and every member of the Congress that this Christmas shall be to each of you a happy time and that this Family Holiday shall make your home even more precious to you than it ever has been before.

PATRICIA PITT'S COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH SOCIETY

guest of the Evans family, and will attend the ball, of course.

Jane Sloan Presented

YESTERDAY afternoon another bud made her bow, Jane Arnold Sloan, daughter of the Andrew E. Sloans, of Moorhead place. Her mother presented her at a buffet luncheon given in the University Club. The bud wore a lovely gown of turquoise blue crepe Elizabeth and her mother, beige crepe Elizabeth. The deb carried a semi-colonial bouquet of talisman roses and Mrs. Sloan wore orchids.

The ballroom, where Jane and her mother received, was festive with evergreens and southern smilax festooning the walls and balsam trees filling the corners. The chandeliers were hung with crystals and the orchestra was screened with dark balsam. The tea table was centered with a profusion of crimson poinsettias.

Dance for Bud

AND I almost forgot to mention that Friday evening Caroline Crittenden, daughter of the William Jackson Crittendens, of Shields, was honored with a ball in the Pittsburgh Club, given by her father and mother.

Pittsburghers in South

WITHOUT snow and frosty stars and the pungent odor of pine needles, most of us wouldn't think it was Christmas. A few of our society folks, though, like to go South early and spend the holidays there.

And Palm Beach will have a very gay Yuletide season this year. Mrs. Henry Oliver Rea is already at Palm Beach at her villa, "Lagomar." Her son, Henry Oliver Rea, who's been spending the greater part of his time in New York, will go to Palm Beach for Christmas. And his two little sons, Michael and Oliver, are with their grandmother for the holiday season.

And Mrs. Rea's daughter, Mrs. George Andrew Benney and her family, who are at Sea Island, near Brunswick, Ga., for the winter, will join the Rea family party at Palm Beach.

A particularly beautiful fountain, which Mrs. Rea purchased in Europe, is being installed in her gardens, said to be the most beautiful in Palm Beach.

And the Thomas R. Cowells have arrived at Palm Beach for the holidays, too. And I hear that their new winter home is being decorated and furnished by Count and Countess de Vries.

Later in the season the James Francis Burkes are expected at Palm Beach. Mr. Burke is president, did you know, of the Florida Embassy Club, which has its formal opening New Year's eve, and is a director of the Bath and Tennis Club.

Debutante Dances

THERE'LL be ever so many balls this week. Tomorrow Dr. and Mrs. Robert Milligan will give one in the Pittsburgh Club for their deb daughter, Peggy; on Tuesday, Mrs. Harmar D. Denny will give a dinner dance in the Pittsburgh Golf Club for her debutante granddaughter, Katherine Denny, of Boston; on Christmas afternoon, Dr. and Mrs. Ogden M. Edwards, Jr., will give a ball for their debutante daughter, Katherine, in the Pittsburgh Golf Club, and on Christmas afternoon the James M. Magees will give a tea dance for their deb daughter, Frances Forsyth; on Thursday the J. Franke Drakes will give a dinner-dance for their debutante daughter, Ruth; on Friday the William Christopher Robinsons will give a dance in the Pittsburgh Club for their debutante daughter, Mary Franklin Robinson; on Friday the T. A. McGinleys will give a ball in the Pittsburgh Club for their debutante daughter, Mary Elizabeth Floyd, and on Saturday Maj. and Mrs. Alexander G. Pendleton will give a dinner-dance in the Pittsburgh Club for their debutante daughter, Helen.

Bud to Make Bow

AND in between these dances there'll be ever so many luncheons and suppers and breakfasts and theater parties for the buds and one debut. The Franklin C. Irishes will present their daughter, Lydia, at a tea in the Pittsburgh Golf Club.

The first debutante of the week will be Mary Wharton Knox, daughter of the Robert Knoxes, of Wightman street, who will be presented tomorrow at a small buffet luncheon in the family home.

And tomorrow Mrs. George W. J. Bissell will honor Mary with a breakfast in her home.

Engagements Announced

AND the Christmas season has brought us three engagements of marked interest. The Frank Adair Leovys, of Beechwood boulevard, have made known the betrothal of their daughter, Elizabeth Monroe Leovy, to Roberdeau Green Annan, son of the Roberdeau Annans, of Cumberland, Md.

Henry Adams Plumer, formerly of Pittsburgh, has announced the engagement of his daughter, Catherine Irwin Plumer, whom many Pittsburgh folks know, to Winton Murray, son of the Gilbert Donald Murrays, of Scranton and New York.

Catherine's mother was the former Edith Rankin, of Pittsburgh. Catherine's marriage will take place next month, I understand.

Professor and Mrs. Thomas Jefferson Wertenbaker, of Princeton University, have announced the engagement of their sister, Elizabeth Glass Marshall, of Lexington, Ky., to William Manning Swan, son of Mrs. Robert Swan, of Walnut street.

Presented at Luncheon

THURSDAY one of the most delightful debuts of the season took place when Alice Coburn Rust, daughter of the S. Murray Rusts, made her bow in the Rust home in Murray Hill avenue at a buffet luncheon. Alice returned last week-end from Smith College, where she is a junior this year.

The drawing room, where the bud received, was festive with Christmas greens and holly, with small pine trees in the corners. Sprays of mistletoe, tied with bright red ribbons, were placed here and there. In the dining room the table was centered with coral pink roses, and coral tapers were placed at either end of the table. The deb wore a youthful frock in a spring print of apricot and wood brown crepe. Her flowers were Talisman roses. Her mother wore a gown of panne velvet in a midnight blue shade.

Makes Bow at Dance

ON Monday evening another bud made her bow, Mary Black, daughter of Mrs. John L. Black, formerly of Pittsburgh. She was presented at a dinner dance her aunt, Mrs. Frank Nicholson Black, gave in the Pittsburgh Golf Club. The deb's gift bouquets were arranged against a background of cibotium ferns and palms and yellow pompons and roses were used elsewhere as decorations.

The bud wore a gown of white crepe, extremely long, with the skirt scalloped at the hemline, and her flowers were gardenias. Her aunt was attired in black chiffon velvet, and her mother in a gown of silver lame.

School Set Dances

IT seems that every day I hear of more students returning home for the holidays and of parties to be given for them. First I want to tell you about the dance the Ovid D. Robinsons, of "Robinwood," Coraopolis, will give in honor of their daughter, Helen Robinson, who returned home Friday from the Baldwin School at Bryn Mawr. It will be on January 3 in the Montour Heights Country Club and members of the younger school set will be guests.

And then the Theodore Whiteheads, of Farragut street, will honor their son, Ralph Carroll Whitehead, who is a student at Swarthmore, with a dinner dance in the Rittenhouse on New Year's night.

The Benjamin Rush Bradford Townsends, of "Fairway," Sewickley Heights, who are to give a school set dance in honor of Laura Liggett, daughter of the Sidney S. Liggetts, and Henry T. Irwin, Jr., son of Henry T. Irwin, of Edgeworth, have changed the date to December 30.

And then Harry Darlington, III, will be honored with a dance by his parents, the junior Harry Darlingtons, in their home on January 3.

And Isabelle Bown, daughter of the E. Elmer Bowns, of Wellesley avenue, who is returning from Wellesley College, will have as her guests, Ruth Perry and Sylvia Breck, of New York, and she and Louise Sedenburgh will honor Ruth and Sylvia with a tea in the Pittsburgh Athletic Association on Friday, December 27.

Sponsor Harvard Concert

THE holiday season for the debutante set will be made more festive by the visit of 50 of the Harvard University boys. They will arrive from Cambridge on Thursday, and will be entertained at luncheon by the local alumni, and that afternoon will be guests at several teas. That evening they will give a concert in Carnegie Music Hall in which the banjo, mandolin and vocal clubs will take part.

Among the patrons and patronesses for the event are Mrs. Horace Forbes Baker, Mrs. H. L. Hilliard, Mrs. Frank A. Leovy, George Nicola, Stanley N. Brown, E. H. Wolfe, James MacCloskey, Jr., John R. Gaggin, Mrs. Howard Irish, Mrs. W. Terrell Johnson, Mrs. C. D. Scully, Mrs. R. C. Cowan, Mrs. Wesley A. Looney and Marshall A. Christy.

Society to See Dancers

MANY society folks will vary their engagements for the holiday season by seeing Kreutzberg and Georgi dance on Monday evening, December 30, in Carnegie Music Hall.

Among those interested in their appearance are Mrs. George S. Baton, Mrs. John D. Evans, Mrs. Louis Hays, Mrs. F. A. Leovy, Mrs. J. H. Hillman, Jr., Mrs. Charles Brown, Mrs. Samuel McClay, Mrs. G. Bailey was leader for the first affair, the chief entertainment feature of which was a play, "The Fairist Shop," presented by Virginia Meals, Laura Colucci, Sam Loy, Jack Smith and Charles Rohleder, all members of the Westinghouse High School Senior Dramatic Club. Tea was served by Mrs. E. W. Kennedy and her social committee.

On Wednesday nearly 100 children were present to receive the gifts of candy, fruit, toys and stockings which the clubwomen provided. This affair was directed by Mrs. P. C. Walker, officers of the club and members of the home committee. After the presentation of the gifts the children were taken to a neighborhood motion picture house where they were guests of the management.

Color Creeps Into Dress Vogue and Threatens to Displace Popular Black

By PEARL GROSS
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.

SEVERAL changes are taking place in the mode. Most important of these is the note of color which has crept into vogue and now threatens to supplant the always popular all-black.

Not that black isn't fashionable. It is still the smartest of smart colors to wear daytimes and for formal occasions. But there is an evident swing toward dull greens for daytime and bright red for evening wear. New collections from the Parisian couturiers display the latest in evening gowns and, to a degree, they are more or less a brilliant red.

Maroon and dahlia have also achieved an important place on the color chart. Many women prefer the colors of burgundy, sombre onyx green, or the off-purple which is dahlia for their afternoon ensembles, in preference to the all-black costume. It is rather a change and, one must admit, a relief.

Hats are getting gayer in color, too, and not a few are brimmed. The off-the-face hat with the long back is being discarded by some discriminating women who do not like that style for daytime wear. It is severe. It is unkind to the face that is not perfect-featured and lends somewhat of a hard look, unless worn in the soft lights of evening. Thus we see lots and lots of tiny brimmed hats in the week-end shop-windows, proving that you never can tell about which way the mode will sway.

Coats Straight, Shorter

Coats, too, are veering away from the flare line and adopting the straight-line cut again. Dressy coats are noticeably shorter, to allow for the long, flared skirt. Sport coats are straight-line, too, and beautifully furred. By the way, it is possible now to get handbag, hat and shoes all of tweed to match the coat cloth. And what an adorable sports outfit this turns out to be!

In the lingerie world, suntan lace is the newest trimming for all types of undergarments, no matter what the color of the silk may be. Noticeable, too, is the trend toward tailored undies in modern lingerie, for underclothes must be rather unruffled and smooth to fit under the new tight-fitting dresses. Anyway, in buying lingerie, don't overlook the suntan lace effects which are certainly elegant and beautiful.

A very fetching note has invaded the field of handbag craft. This is the antiqued brocade bag which is of a goodly size—just the thing to carry lots of things therein—and which well-dressed women are adopting for daytime and travel wear. The brocade bag, besides being commodious, is colorful and has a zip-it pouch at the side. One selling for $12.75 is lined with satin and clasps with an amber colored stone. A splendid Christmas suggestion as a gift for the business woman.

Nightrobe Gift Suggestion

Silk nightrobe ensembles (with sun-tanned lace) is another irresistible and choice gift suggestion. This comprises one of the new-type short nighties, tied around the waist with a satin ribbon and a long negligee to match which slips over the night dress. Both are decorated with heavy lace.

The rage for jewelry continues in New York. Every kind and variety of jewel, real and simulated, are being displayed, with jewelry for all occasions—sports, formal frocks for day time, formal gowns for evening and just ordinary wear.

The evening hours are heavily rhinestoned and the daylight hours are given to dull gold or semi-precious stones. Pendants, chokers, bracelets and stone rings (stone all the way around) are offered as a match to any and every costume.

Nowadays, besides having hose, hats and handbags, as well as shoes, to match the ensemble, there is the important part that jewelry must play in the general costume. Whether the jewelry matches in color or is of a complementary shade, it must look unusual and "match."

This latter quotation applies to the rule that earrings, necklace, bracelet and ring must harmonize.

Avalon Girl Is Married In Her Home

MISS MARY WHEELER, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. C. Wheeler, of Avalon, became the bride of J. K. Shoub, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. John Shoub, of Perrysville avenue, on Saturday afternoon, December 14 at 3:45 o'clock, in the home of her parents in River road. The Rev. Dr. D. Wyler, former pastor of the Avalon Presbyterian Church, officiated.

The bride wore a princess gown of lace over white satin and her veil of tulle had a cap of real lace. She carried bride's roses and lilies of the valley. She was attended by Mrs. Isabelle Barber, of Akron, O., formerly of Avalon, who wore green satin and carried pink roses. Miss Madeline Emmet, of Oberlin, who played the wedding march, wore blue and silver chiffon. Hugh Edgworth, Jr., served as best man.

After the ceremony a dinner was served and later Mr. and Mrs. Shoub left for a Southern trip and will visit in Florida on Christmas at the home of Mrs. Walter C. Wagener, sister of the bridegroom. Mr. and Mrs. Shoub, Jr., will reside in Perrysville avenue after January 15.

Syria Club Yule Party On Saturday

A SHORT business meeting at 1 o'clock will precede the Yuletide "festival of friendship," to be held Saturday in Syria Mosque by the Syria Ladies' Social Club. The club choral, under the direction of Mrs. Bertha Gross King, will tell the Christmas story in song, and later there will be cards and refreshments. The rules of the club provide that all funds must go to the Shriners' Hospital for Crippel Children, but personal gifts will be brought to the festival, these to be sent to institutions. Cigarets and playing cards are especially requested for the ex-service men in the hospital. Saturday's event is in charge of Mrs. Arthur C. Meyers, general chairman.

Knowledge of 'Come On' Among Most Important Of Bridge Requirements

By ERNEST H. HEINRICHS,
Sun-Telegraph Bridge Expert.

AMONG the conventional plays practiced by the defensive side when playing against declarer the "Echo," the "Come on," also known as the "Signal," are among the most useful means which an adversary may exercise to convey certain information to his partner.

Learning how these plays are made is especially recommended to the beginner, because to know them, when and how to practice them, is one of the most important requirements for a bridge player. Many a trick, many a game and many a contract may depend upon their proper application.

In a general way all these plays are made in the same manner by playing first an unnecessarily high card followed on the next round by a lower one, although in the following example a singe card only completes the signal.

Playing against a no-trump declaration, and partner, as the original leader lays down the king for the first trick, you, holding queen, 8, 3, while dummy shows jack, 7, 4, play the 8 on partner's lead, who, instead of following with the ace for the second lead, should lead low to give the second trick to queen so as to prevent his long suit being blocked.

Another "echo" in no-trump is made when you hold four small cards of partner's original lead. In this case you play the second highest on the first lead, third highest on the next lead, and the highest on the third lead, holding the smallest until the last.

Signal Vital

Playing against a trump declaration the "come on" signal is often very vital to the adversaries. It is executed in the same manner, by playing first a higher and then a lower card. It conveys to the partner the information to continue leading that suit; it may be because you hold the queen and can take the third trick, or because you hold two cards only and you wish to trump the third lead.

For instance, the original lead is the king of hearts, in which suit you hold 7 and 4. Play the seven on the first lead and the four on the second, making it possible for you to trump the third lead. Or supposing you hold queen, 7, 4, in which case you can take the third trick and may possibly force declarer to use one of his trumps to take the trick.

In any event, it is the general rule when a high card is followed in the play by a lower one it conveys to partner the information to continue leading the same suit for a third round if possible.

Playing an unusually high card is sometimes called an "encouragement" card, and playing the lowest is known as a "discouragement" card. While the first means "continue leading in the same suit," the latter asks for a "shift to another suit."

In the following deal, the "come on" is shown in its practical application:

NORTH.	EAST.
Spades—A, 9, 7. Hearts—Q, 10, 3, 2. Clubs—K, 3, 2. Diamonds—Q, 5, 3.	Spades—J, 10, 8, 5, 4, 2. Hearts—9, 5. Clubs—7, 4. Diamonds—K, 7, 4.
WEST.	SOUTH.
Spades—6, 3. Hearts—A, K, 6, 4. Clubs—9. Diamonds—A, J, 10, 9, 8, 6.	Spades—K, Q. Hearts—J, 8, 7. Clubs—A, Q, J, 10, 8, 6, 5. Diamonds—2.

The game was played at four clubs bid by South, after West had bid three diamonds. West opened the lead with the king of hearts, South played the deuce from dummy, East the nine and South the seven from closed hand, West taking the trick. The latter then led the ace, dummy played the three and East the five. This play completed the signal, West led the third heart in spite of the fact that he could see the queen in the dummy, and East took the trick with his four of trumps. East now led the king of diamonds, the highest card of the suit his partner had bid, which took the fourth trick for East and West, setting the contract by one trick.

It is quite probable that an inexperienced player, not knowing the "come on" signal, and seeing the queen of hearts in dummy, might not have led hearts for the third time, in which case South would have made his contract at four clubs.

Bridge Brevities

In a series of matches at contract bridge played recently at one of the leading New York Whist Clubs, the contests were carried on to test two of the popular systems for bidding at contract, viz.: the "command" or "force" convention, and the "club" or "Vanderbilt" convention, the result being a victory for the former.

* * *

Mr. Millard. the local auction bridge champion, had the unusual experience recently of playing a no-trump contract in a deal in which each player held 12 cards only. The interesting feature of the incident was that the mistake was not discovered until the cards were played to the last trick.

* * *

"Count that day lost" when some expert or other does not send us an announcement that he, or she, has written a book on a new system of contracting for the declaration in contract bridge.

E. B. C., Canonsburg, Pa.—A suit is called "protected" when it contains the ace or a guarded high card, i. e., K, x; Q, x, x.

Mrs. M. R. S., Kittanning, Pa.—A player sits "over" the player on his right and "under" the player on his left.

F. L. H., New Castle, Pa.—A "master card" is the highest unplayed card of a suit.

A major tenace is the ace and queen of any suit; king, jack, a minor tenace; and ace, queen, ten, a double tenace.

In American Bridge the losing side in a deal cannot score, because in that form of Bridge honor cards have no scoring value.

In progressive Aution Bridge, two players at each table move to another table after a stipulated number of games—usually four—have been played.

Miss V. H. B., Parkersburg, W. Va.—There is no law which forbids you to lead trumps against declarer; neither can it be considered unethical.

Contract Bridge was primarily designed to be played at the "rubber" game.

MADELON'S MIRROR OF FEMININE FANCY

I'VE been scanning the weather reports for the past few days to see if there are any predictions for a white Christmas. As I write, a few tiny flakes are wafting downward, rather undecided whether to come to earth or not. Everything will be perfect if the huge feathery flakes fall, mantling our beloved but somewhat dingy city in magic white. There's something about a Christmas snow that makes it totally different from any other; one wants to dance through it scuffling one's feet like a three-year-old; lights are brighter, people are happier; in the east a Star shines larger and more luminous than all those around it. A thousand human shortcomings mysteriously disappear at Christmas. For a time, a glimpse may be had of man's innate goodness, his potential spirituality. It is truly a season of peace on earth and goodwill toward one's fellowman. I take this opportunity to wish for you all the very merriest Christmas possible, and if Madelon's columns have been of any assistance to you during the rush of Christmas shopping, I am happy.

. . . Sensible

THREE girls I know decided to exchange gifts in a sensible manner. One selected something she most especially wanted, and the other two paid for it. Two of them selected shoes at the Hotel Roosevelt shop of the Parisian Bootery Shops; and the third, to keep in the spirit of things, decided on a lovely pair of satin mules with ostrich feather trim, and some silk hose, at the same shop. Every one was pleased, and the gifts cost the girls very little; for shoes at the Hotel Roosevelt shop are $7.00 and $9.00, mules $6.50, and hose $1.19 to $2.50. Other gift suggestions would be rhinestone heels for evening slippers, or rhinestone shoe buckles.

. . . Say It With Furs

MR. J. C. CONNOLLY, furrier on the third floor at 207 Fifth Avenue, is paraphrasing the slogan "Say It With Flowers" into "Say It With Furs," and he is really offering some marvelous bargains in beautiful fox scarves and fur coats. Mr. Connolly's prices are as low now as you will find during the January fur sales, and he is recognized throughout this section as carrying merchandise worth every penny he asks for it. There's no more lovely and worthwhile gift than a good fur neckpiece or a coat, and Mr. Connolly can deliver as late as Tuesday night. Pointed foxes as low as $55.00 to $130.00; Hudson Seals (dyed muskrats) for $210.00.

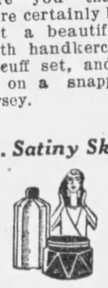
. . . Year-around Gift

I THINK every one should give themselves a Christmas present. And the very best sort of one I can think of is a course of beauty treatments. Simply make up your mind that out of each week's allowance or salary is to come an OGILVIE SISTERS' facial, and an OGILVIE SISTERS' scalp treatment, at the Graham Hair Shop, 222 Jenkins Arcade. We owe it to ourselves and to our friends, to look as nice as we can; and the most enjoyable and satisfactory way to do it is to place ourselves under the hands of experts such as we find at the Graham Shop, which sponsors the methods of these famous beauty specialists, the Ogilvie Sisters. Call Atlantic 8392 for appointment.

. . . Dress Sale

WHEN I was on the dress floor of Max Azen's 705 Penn Avenue, yesterday, I learned they were going to send out cards to their regular customers advising them of a sale of dresses at $12.85 and $18. I looked over the lot and found many that were formerly marked at $25.00, $29.50 and $59.50, so I asked Mr. Azen to let me tell the readers of the column about such unusual values. He agreed that I might do so, and in case you are among those who received a card, I want to assure you that these dresses are certainly bargains. I bought a beautiful black crepe with handkerchief collar and cuff set, and I have my eyes on a snappy little black jersey.

. . . Satiny Skin



HAVEN'T you noticed, on bright days, the blackheads that are forming in the pores of your nose, around your mouth and chin? Ofcourse you've used cold cream, but most of it leaves the skin greasy, and with a base for more dirt to collect. Marion Gray, a beauty expert in New York, is recommending a liquid preparation known as Creme Lac, which comes in combination with a wonderful astringent. The combination is $3.00, and lasts for a long time—long enough to prove to you that your skin can be made shell-like and satiny again. Write Marion Gray, 30 Irving Place, New York.

. . . For Christmas

HOW many folks will wake up Christmas morning to find a Lincoln in their stocking? I called Mr. Lowe, of Lowe Motor Company, 5124 Liberty Avenue, to check on the happy ones in Pittsburgh, and he gave me quite an imposing list (which I don't dare publish, of course). There's not a better season in which to test the Lincoln car. The streets are like greased glass; a fine mist is flying in the air, which would cover most windshields, but not the new Lincoln's. A mere touch of the wheel guides this heavy car; a mere step on the brakes stops it silently and easily; a tap of the finger shifts gears. I'd like to talk with the new Lincoln owners about a week from now and get their reactions.

. . . Uncrowded

I SHOULD think the Myrtle Bennett shop, at 2002 Jenkins Arcade, would be a pleasant place to finish one's Christmas shopping, for several reasons. First, the lingerie she has is delightful, and it is even below many of the department stores in price—just think, crepe and crepe satin pajamas and gowns, hand made, with hand made drawn work and embroidery, for $4.95, $5.95, and not more than $10.50; glove silk gowns, beautifully tailored, at the very special price of $4.95. Imported and domestic silk scarfs from $2.25 up. Then, her shop is blessedly quiet and uncrowded; and if you like, she'll stay open evenings if you'll call her and make an appointment. Quite a number of men appreciate these evening shopping opportunities, and the interested personal attention.

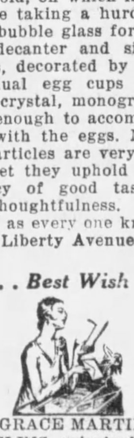
. . . Late Deliveries

GILBERT'S, at 632 Smithfield Street, will be open until nine o'clock tomorrow and Tuesday, and purchases made as late as six o'clock Tuesday evening will be delivered that night. Everything under the sun to make happy your friends who are gifted with exquisite taste and a fine appreciation of beautiful things. Gilbert's lamps, book ends, smoking stands, mahogany boudoir desks, tapestries, fine etchings, reproductions of precious antiques, are priced at even less than you would pay for ordinary things elsewhere—and to know they came from Gilbert's, shop of the unusual in furniture, stamps them as perfection.

. . . Unusual Gifts

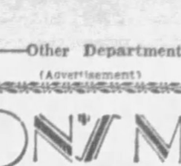
OF course Pittsburghers just naturally go to Reizenstein's when they want to buy a gift, especially if it must be a gift of unusual character. Such clever things as a footed crystal cigarette holder, edged with gold, on which is etched a horse taking a hurdle—old green bubble glass formed into a decanter and six little glasses, decorated by hand—individual egg cups of fine heavy crystal, monogrammed, large enough to accommodate toast with the eggs. None of these articles are very expensive, yet they uphold the supremacy of good taste and rare thoughtfulness. Reizenstein's, as every one knows, is at 625 Liberty Avenue.

. . . Best Wish



MRS. GRACE MARTIN CORNELIUS, principal of the Grace Martin Secretarial School, asks me to extend to the readers of these columns, among whom are no doubt many of her former pupils, the very best wishes of herself and the faculty for a happy Christmas and a successful New Year. (If they're graduates of the Grace Martin School, they're bound to be successful.) Vacation will extend to January 6th, at which time a small beginning class will be enrolled, so if you're planning to enter the school (which occupies the 18th floor of the Keenan Building, on Liberty Avenue) better see about enrolling now, so you can start with the new classes. Mrs. Cornelius will be there Monday and Tuesday, and part of the time during the Holidays.

. . . Romance



BE WE old or young, the spirit of romance never dies within us, as is proved by the throngs that pack the Gypsy Tea Shop, Pittsburgh's most interesting tea room, on the second floor of 207 Fifth Avenue. One is served a delicious lunch of sandwiches, salad, cake and tea, and one's future is foretold in the tea leaves by fascinatingly handsome Gypsies in costume. Second helpings of sandwiches and cake for the asking, lunch is 75c, and readings are free. I'll defy any girl to escape without a heart flutter if her future is read by the dark-eyed Romondee or Honduras, and Tomona and Rozelle are the girls. The tea room is a lovely place, and is so arranged that private parties can be held if desired.

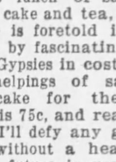
. . . Lovely Hair



SOME hair just naturally seems to be without life or luster, and there is nothing one does that helps it. I know it sounds too easy—too much like "hokum" to say that a mere shampoo can impart new life and sheen to dull, oily and lifeless hair—but actually, if you'll try this "Lemon Rinse" shampoo a few times you'll see that it really does. It is an excellent cleanser; removes all oil and dust from the scalp and hair, seeming to polish each hair until it gleams and shimmers. Marion Gray, beauty expert in New York, will send you a bottle if you'll write to 30 Irving Place, New York, enclosing $1.00. This shampoo is good for any hair, but is particularly recommended for dull, medium-toned hair.

. . . Gracious

WOULD one ask Jean Lanvin to remodel a gown one had "picked up" at, say, a local department store? And can you feature the shocked horror with which you'd be regarded if you asked such a thing? I think Mrs. Lasner shows excellent restraint when she merely smiles graciously and tells people she is a creator, not a copyist, when they come to her studio at 615 Clark Building with corsets they have "picked up" somewhere, and implore her to "do something with them." In Lasner Foundations only can one experience the benefit of her skill; and in Lasner Foundations only will be found those things which make them inimitably her own creations.

. . . Refreshed

THE other day one of my friends remarked: "I'm simply dead. If I had time for a steam bath, I'd take one, but I simply don't have time to rest afterward." I explained to her that the electric cabinet baths at the Pittsburgh Natatorium (on Duquesne Way) are as effective as a steam bath for eliminating poisons, "ironing" out aches and stiffness. A profuse perspiration is induced in about eight minues; one's head is out in the fresh air all the time, there are no weakening effects. One can take a cabinet bath, a shower, dress and go right about one's business, within half an hour. Tuesdays and Thursdays are for women at the Natatorium, and if I were you I'd take a cabinet bath Tuesday and be rejuvenated for Christmas.

. . . Order Monday

I'M apt to become maudlin on the subject of McClements, the flower and fruit store at 535 Wood Street. I think the store these days is the most gorgeous place I've ever seen—and the gifts are just as gorgeous. Fruit cakes on lacquered trays, hothouse fruits piled around them, tied with ribbon and decorated with holly—can you feature a more striking gift? Lovely baskets of flowers, Maillard's chocolates in huge decorated boxes, glace nuts and fruits, brandied peaches in fancy jars. Anything one might select at McClements will be regarded as a gift deluxe by whoever receives it. Give your orders as early Monday as possible, for they're rushed to death right now.

. . . On the Bremen

AMONG other important arrivals on the Bremen were some exquisite fancies in jewels, both antique and modern settings, which were sent to The Little Shop Around the Corner by their foreign agent. These pieces have been anxiously awaited for the holiday business, and since they were delayed, the Little Shop has announced they will offer them tomorrow and Tuesday at a very special price. I need not tell you that they are very lovely, and very unusual, and that it is not likely you'll find anything like them elsewhere in the city. Rings, bracelets, necklaces, brooches, and pendants are included in the collection. They are worth seeing, even if you have no intention of buying anything.

. . . Christmas Clubs

THE 1930 Christmas Savings Club is forming at the Union Savings Bank, and when I read over the plans, and saw what really infinitesimal sums paid weekly make big checks for next Christmas, I was actually ashamed that I hadn't saved more for this Christmas. Just think, 50c a week will pay $25.50 next December; $2.00 a week will bring in $102.00; $5.00 a week will net $255.00. Then there are the progressive and reducing plans, which start as low as 5c, and which pay $65.00 next Christmas. I don't have detailed information about these various plans, but if you'll drop in at the Union Savings Bank in the Frick Building they'll gladly explain them all to you.

. . . Gifts Reduced

I FOUND Miss Edwards, of Edwards Gift Shop, literally swamped when I went in after the Christmas cards she was holding for me. You see, she is selling ALL her stock at greatly reduced prices, and naturally every bargain hunter still searching for Christmas gifts made for her shop, which is in Room 250, 7th Avenue Hotel. She still has a very nice selection of pottery, lamps, novelty gifts, Mark Cross leather purses and bill folds, and some of the perfume of Jonceaire, French parfumer, for which she is local representative. I saw three lovely costume rings and some necklaces, too, which she has reduced almost one-half. It would be wise to visit her, if you're looking for last-minute gifts.

. . . Shop Leisurely

JAY KIDDIE SHOPPE, 3007 Jenkins Arcade, is an oasis of quiet after the turmoil and bustle of the crowded streets. If you have a list of last-minute gifts for children that simply has to be taken care of, go into this dainty little shop, select your gifts leisurely, and they'll be packed and mailed for you. Such lovely things one finds there—tiny sweaters in white and pastels, silken socks, hand-made dresses, carriage robes, bath robes, silk and wool underthings, coat and hat sets, Zipper suits—everything dreamed of in the way of very smart apparel for youngsters from infancy to six years—and at very attractive prices.

. . . Redecorated

MAISON FREDERIC, 207 Fifth Avenue, is greeting the New Year with a completely redecorated salon. Black, silver and pale green form a most effective setting, as you'll agree when you see it. Walls are paneled in silver and green, outlined with black; dressing tables and equipment in the booths are black and green. Quite sophisticated, and very smart. M. Lichti impressed upon me that he has installed sterilizing cabinets similar to those used in physicians' offices, wherein every comb, brush and instrument that touches one's person is sterilized by live steam and terrific dry heat. Depend upon it, we'll always find Maison Frederic employing up-to-the-minute methods for everything.

. . . Satisfied

A WOMAN told me recently that her feet had felt good twice in her life—when she was a little girl and had gone barefoot one summer, and since she started wearing Menihan Arch-aid shoes from Ritter & Morrison's, 501 Liberty Avenue. She is giving three of her best friends a gift certificate entitling them to a pair of Menihan Arch-aid shoes "so they'll be more agreeable to go out with," she said. Menihan Arch-aid shoes come in dozens of beautiful styles, and they are fitted unhurriedly and painstakingly, so there is not a chance you won't get the shoe that fits you exactly. Sizes 2½ to 11. AAAAA to EEE. If you'll drop in, or call Ritter & Morrison, they'll give you a booklet containing important information on care of the feet.

. . . Broadcasting

CLASSES in homemaking, which were held at Utility Hall in the Philadelphia Building during October, November and December will be discontinued during the Holiday Week, but Miss Karen Fladoes, director of the hall, will talk over WCAE at her usual hours of 9:15 Tuesday morning and 9:30 Thursday morning this week. Tuesday she will give instructions for making last-minute Christmas cookies and cakes; Thursday she will tell you what to make out of the left-over turkey. Next Sunday I'll have an outline of the program of new classes, and I'll give you a hint of the subjects to be taken up. If you didn't attend the classes just completed, make a New Year's resolution to begin with the new ones.

McKeesport Girl Weds Ohio Man

MISS MARGARET ALICE BORLAND, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Borland, of Versailles avenue, McKeesport, became the bride of Halsey Robinson Jones, of Youngstown, O., son of the Rev. and Mrs. Everett W. Jones, of Bridgeville, Saturday, afternoon December 14, at 4 o'clock in the home of the bride's parents. The bridegroom's father performed the ceremony assisted by his uncle, the Rev. Dr. Edward Harper, of Kittanning, before an embankment of cibodium ferns and palms.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of eggshell satin in princess style with a cap of lace, an heirloom, worn by her grandmother. Her veil was of tulle and she carried white roses and lilies of the valley. Mrs. T. C. Jones, Jr., of McKeesport, sister of the bride, and Miss Dorothy Jones, of Bridgeville, were bridesmaids and wore gowns of orchid taffeta and carried yellow Pernet roses. Little Christine Borland, cousin of the bride, wore taffeta and carried a basket of flowers, and Fauntley Muse Jones, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Jones, was ring bearer. Oliver Woodford Jones was his brother's best man, and the ushers were William C. McNeill, of Washington, and T. C. Jones, Jr., of McKeesport.

A reception followed the wedding, after which Mr. and Mrs. Jones left for a wedding trip to Atlantic City and the South.

The bride is a graduate of Beaver College for Women and the bridegroom of Washington and Jefferson College and Carnegie Institute of Technology.

Duquesne's Yule Party On Tuesday

THE activities committee of the Duquesne Women's Civic Club under the chairmanship of Mrs. William Penman will sponsor a Christmas party for the needy children of the community Tuesday afternoon in the high school auditorium. A special entertainment for the mothers of the children is to be held shortly after Christmas.

The club's choral society will visit and sing for the shutins on Christmas Eve. Mrs. E. F. Kepner has been made chairman of the newly formed activities committee of the club and will have as her coworkers Miss Elizabeth Weinstein, Miss Sarah Mikaloff, Mrs. A. D. Elliott and Mrs. Rex Garland. The Monday evening Chautauqua class will not meet until January 13. The Friday class held its meeting last week with Mrs. Guy Walker leading.

Characterizations Clever At Elsa Maxwell's Party

I might report that Bertrand L. Taylor, Jr., shaved off his mustache in order to appear as a correct Sascha Guitry to "Gertie's" Yvonne!

The announcement of the arrival of Mrs. Vincent Astor as "Nina" De Polignac was greeted with cheers, and when Mrs. William Hayward tripped down the steps as Mae West the merriment ran high.

The personal triumphs of the evening went to Mrs. John Gaston, who put in an appearance as Mrs. Walter Rosen—fluffy hair, feather fan and the startled fawn look. Pinna wins the brown derby. She was simply marvelous.

And one must not overlook the fact that Mrs. J. Norman De R. Whitehouse was garbed as one of her close friends, "Bertie" Cruger.

There were two Princes of Wales and dozens of Helen Morgans. "Jack Chaqueneau, who really looks like the heir to the British throne, essayed the Prince in a golfing mood, while Emily Vanderbilt Thayer was H. R. H. in a more formal moment.

One of the Helen Morgans, "Kitty" Bache Miller, was the best, with Natica Nast running neck to neck. It was really an inspiration on the part of Sarah Jane Sanford to appear as her brother, "Laddie," in polo attire. And when Sarah Jane beckoned to "Epps" Hawkes to park on her lap there was much applause—"Laddie" having once given "Epps" the "rush" of her life.

Two Peggy Joyces

Dicky Gordon, one of Elsa Maxwell's life-long friends, was a stunning figure as John Barrymore in black tights and a mantle reminiscent of the Melancholy Dane, and the two Peggy Hopkins Joyces — no party would be complete without Peggy—were Mrs. Grafton Minot, whose husband came as Robert Goelet (or at least he looked like Robert to me!), and Mrs. Jules Glaenzer, who had as her cavalier Walter Wanger, attired as David Belasco.

A touch was added by Mrs. Wanger, the lovely Justine Johnstone, who chose a costume that looked suspiciously like one once worn by Lenore Ulrich.

Cecil Beaton, as Mercedes De Acosta, was grand — but naughty. He went to great trouble to make himself up like the aesthetic Mercedes, and even had that lady's highly painted red ears and tri-corner hat. Pretty little Mrs. Carroll Carstairs came as Marjorie Oelrichs, Jr., the great endorser, and Harvey Ladew, as his uncle, Berry Wall, was a sensation. I suspect Harvey borrowed the habiliments from his famous relative. But it must have taken hours to adjust the false nose. And where did Harvey find the chow dog?

Alda Puffs Cigar

Mme. Frances Alda forgot about the Metropolitan and the radio for the time being and was "Al" Smith, bravely puffing away at a cigar, at the same table sat the Louis G. Kaufmans as Weber and Fields. "Hoytie" Wiborg was announced and in swished Eleanor Barry with a duplicate of one of "Hoytie's" evening frocks and the omnipresent bandana swung over her shoulders.

The entrance of the entire Von Hindenberg family was a small sized riot, and John Emerson, as Calvin Coolidge, won the applause of the onlookers and a nod of approval from his wife, the diminutive Anita Loos, who was a combination of everyone else at the party.

So cleverly garbed as Grover Whalen was "Essie" O'Brien it was suggested that Elsa put him on the reception committee. And Ralph Barton, as Neysa McMein, was more than the usual eyeful—even to Neysa herself. Mrs. R. Thornton Wilson, who never is frivolous, was stately as L'Aiglon and occupied a table with her close friends, Helen Astor and Mrs. Harriman Russell, who was a divine Fanny Brice. While she scorned fancy dress attire, I assume Mrs. Jay Gould was "royalty"—for she danced throughout the evening with Prince George of Russia. Also representing the Astor family were the Serge Obolenskys. "Buzzy" and "Brown" Warburton simply exchanged attire—and it was difficult to tell which was which until "Buzzy" complained that his sister's—er, "stays" were "killing him." Let's hope "Brown" never hears of that libel on her waist line.

MRS. PENN S. SPANGLER is one of the aides for the Christmas meeting of the Pittsburgh Female College Association which will be held December 30 in the College Club.

Mme. Takarabe Presented To Capital Society at Series of Functions

By GEORGINA WASHINGTON.
Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.

A QUAINT figure, as sweet and charming as if she were a beautiful pattern on a teacup, was presented to the capital this week in the person of Mme. Takarabe, only woman member of the Japanese delegation to the London Arms Conference.

In her native costume of "Obi" sash and satin embroidery, this daughter of the land of the rising sun completely won stolid Capitolians. Mme Takarabe, on this her first emergence from her homeland, was feated in a series of brilliant social functions from the time of her arrival last Monday until the delegation departed.

The arrival of the Japanese officials served the double purpose of bringing to Washington a notable group of diplomats from the land of which Lafcadio Hearn has told us so much; and it also marked the official lifting of the 30-day period of mourning of Secretary Good.

Having postponed all official dinners and receptions, the White House again glowed with lights and flowers on Wednesday night when President and Mrs. Hoover gave a formal dinner for the Japanese delegates. In the afternoon they were entertained by the Japanese ambassador and Mme. Debuchi. On Thursday, Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson, entertained the delegates at luncheon at the Pan American Union.

Mme. Takarabe is accompanying her husband on the official mission across seas. She belongs to one of the most illustrious families in Nippon, being the daughter of the famous Japanese naval hero, Admiral Yama Moto.

SERVING

MRS. C. M. WHITE is serving on the committee for the Southern Club's annual charity ball the night of December 27 at Hotel Schenley.

Miss Grundy 'Hostess'

Abuzz with admiration over this charming lady, the social set also spent much time during the week in speculating over the sensational entry into their midsts of Mr. Joseph Grundy, the new Senator from Pennsylvania. Mr. Grundy is a bachelor. He settled all question of social obligations during his stay in Washington by announcing that his sister, Miss Margaret Grundy, would be his "official hostess."

A distinguished visitor to the capital this week was Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, of New York, the famous sculptor. Mrs. Whitney did not have time for social engagements this trip, although the "arty" set were very anxious to entertain her. She spent most of her time, however, in discussing with the public buildings and public parks office details regarding construction work for the Titanic memorial which is to be erected here. Mrs. Whitney is the sculptor of the memorial.

The younger set was thrilled by the elegant debut of Countess Alice Szechenyi, the second of several daughters of the minister of Hungary and Countess Szechenyi. This took place at a tea at the Hungarian legation. The countess' elder sister, Countess Cornelia Szechenyi made her debut two years ago. The lovely Countess Alice really made her official bow as a debutante, however, at a dinner given in her honor by her grandmother, Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, in New York the first week in December.

Stimsons Fete Hoovers

The Secretary of State and Mrs. Stimson gave their dinner for President and Mrs. Hoover yesterday and will entertain again on December 23, when the British ambassador and Lady Isabella Howard will be the ranking guests.

Meanwhile the famous Mrs. "Jimmie" Curtis, who was an active Hoover campaigner and always particularly interested in politics, heretofore, has turned her exuberance to the business world. She opened a shop here three years ago, but later turned the management of it over to Mrs. Maurice Crumpacker, widow of the Oregon congressman.

This time, the energetic Mrs. Curtis, whose whims and vagaries are always interesting to Washington society, has ventured into the interior decorating business, now adding business success to her already vast social triumphs. This isn't an unusual note among the social feminine set, Georgina observes, for more and more debs and society matrons here are daily turning to outside fields of interest, even to the exclusion of attending social events. This is all in line, of course, with the modern woman's spirit of independence.

Beechview Women Hear Yule Program

MRS. E. C. PAFENBACH was hostess to Monday evening's meeting of the literary section, Beechview Women's Civic Club. Roll call was responded to with Christmas quotations and Mrs. Ross F. Altwater gave a reading from Kate Douglas Wiggins' "The Bird's Christmas Carol." Discussion of the study book, "Exploring Your Mind," was continued. The club has canceled its sewings until after the holidays.

A GOOD THING TO REMEMBER

The next time you lose something don't despair or give up hope until you have done both of these things:

First look in the Sun-Telegraph "Lost and Found" Columns to see if the finder has advertised. If he has not, then do this. Call GRant 5400 and ask the ad taker to run a Classified Ad telling the world what you have lost. It will cost only a few cents and you are pretty certain to locate your lost, prized possessions. Most folks are honest and genuinely interested in returning lost property to its rightful owners.

Remember this little bit of advice the next time you lose your purse or your Pekingese—

Yule Cheer Traditional In Theater

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

CHRISTMAS week in the theater these days is much like any other week. The old spirit of carnival has departed—it breathed its last long ago in America. Pierrots and Columbines and Pantaloons and their harlequinades are traditional of the British and French theaters, anyway, and not of America, so it is no wonder that transplanted atmosphere and the pantomime that some literature associates with Yuletide play-going are not any part of our idea of how to spend a Christmas afternoon or evening.

Yet our holiday spirit is not much different here from what it is in other lands, and we always have associated gayety and frolic as complementary to a full day for December 25 and the days surrounding it, for Christmas in the theater is of a week's instead of 24 hour's duration. Something light and gay. Bubbles of entertainment that come to life with a sparkle like effervescence of champagne.

Or Ginger Ale

We could choose ginger ale as a simile just as readily, since it effervesces in just as lively a manner, and perhaps would be more appropriate these Volstead days, but there is no poetry in the word, and we just can't help being sentimental on the eve of Christmas. And who ever heard of anybody becoming sentimental on ginger ale?

Too, the absence of champagne (our assumption, that word, "absence") may be just a little significant, sort of a deadly parallel. Formerly it was little more difficult for a theater manager to hit upon some roving band of troupers devoted to amusing the public through the frolic medium and book these mimes long in advance as his big winter holiday attraction than it was to get wine. Now it is difficult for him to book any kind of a show very long in advance, and he considers himself lucky if he has a show at all for one of the best weeks of the season. We can't blame Volstead for this state of affairs, of course, and it likely is only a coincidence that as champagne became scarcer so did gayety on the stage. But why blame it all on the movies?

Words With Holly

There is a whole paragraph without a word of Christmas cheer in it, and I had set out to be cheery and gay and to dress up our

Berlin Critics Slam 'Strange Interlude' With Much Unanimity

By GILBERT W. GABRIEL

(Universal Service Dramatic Critic.)

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.

I HAVE been reading over some of the very blue notices of the recent production of "Strange Interlude" in Berlin. The German critics did not take to O'Neill's biggest (and some of us think, his greatest) play at all. They were almost unanimous in clouting it, guffawing at it. They were almost choral in proclaiming its unimportance, and in directing their motets, instead, at the handsome acting of Elisabeth Bergner. The Berliner Tageblatt sums up the first performance in two short paragraphs. "Seltsames Zwischenspiel" is the play's translated title. "The piece, more a story than a drama, with a technical speech-track which is only partly successful, etc." And then: "Elizabeth Bergner, Rudolph Forster. And once again Elizabeth Bergner."

The cast must have been a good one, true.

Names Familiar

These names of the players, Wiemann and Theoder Loos, in addition to the two above, tap briskly against the memory of anyone who knows the personnel of the German stage today. Bergner, of course, is a darling of their gallery-gods, probably the most stirring and amazing mid-European actress now alive . . . Very much alive.

A slender, vibrant, often feverish and capricious young creature, an instinctive and assertive player, as popular on the screen as on the stage. Her versatility is supposed to be confounding. Imagine her as the little hoyden of "The Constant Nymph," which she carried to much greater success than it had here in a country of its own original language, and then as O'Neill's vasty Nina.

Sooner or later we'll have this Bergner over here, I suppose. They tell me she speaks an already agreeable English, and understands what she speaks; she won't have to spout it phonetically, in the manner of Maeterlinck's famous attempt, or hurriedly learn it to order, as Moissi has so obligingly promised to do. But she's taking her own sweet time about the several American offers she's had. You can't blame her. After all, Berlin isn't a little Iberian village, and she is first in Berlin.

Some of these Berlin papers carry photographs of the Kuenstler Theater production, as well as reviews. From the picture one gets a better, more immediate clue. One can see why "Seltsames Zwischenpiel" couldn't have

DRAMATIC

ETHEL BARRYMORE, dramatic actress, begins an engagement of two weeks in the Alvin Monday, when she will appear in "The Kingdom of God," first of two plays, the other being "The Love Duel," as the New Year week feature in that theater.

Miss Barrymore for Uplift, W. C. Fields for Laughter, In Theaters Holiday Week

By GEORGE SEIBEL

MAURICE BARRYMORE was a brilliant actor who came over from England and married a sister of John Drew. That is the origin of our "royal family"—John, Lionel and Ethel. And the greatest of these is Ethel.

The brothers have gone to Hollywood. But Ethel has risen to a place like that once held by Fanny Davenport and Helena Modjeska. It would be a hard task to find the name of any actress that will rank ahead of her. Mrs. Fiske is the only one in her class.

She has used doubtful judgment sometimes in her choice of plays. She should never have tried Juliet, the little girl of Verona, nor Rose Bernd, Hauptmann's unhappy Tess. But Ethel Barrymore has a remarkable range of power. The humor of the Drews, the romance of the Barrymores, are in her blood.

She started her stellar career in Clyde Fitch's "Captain Jinks," she graduated in a few years to Ibsen's "Doll's House," and now she can put a keener edge on the wit of Somerset Maugham or a deeper note into the spirituality of Martinez Sierra.

Author of "Cradle Song"

Sierra is known to the American public chiefly as the author of "The Cradle Song," the delicate idyl of maternal affection produced by Eva Le Gallienne. Miss Barrymore's play by this author is called "The Kingdom of God," but is not a religious drama, nor is Sister Gracia a nun in the ordinary sense of that word.

It is a religious drama in presenting a picture of human duty, love and obedience blending in a life lesson spread over three periods of Sister Gracia's life. In the first act she is 19, in the second 29, in the last 70.

There are people who do not like this sort of play. There are people who prefer a merry-go-round to a cathedral. Maybe they are right. There are some who like stained glass better than crystal mirrors. Maybe they are right.

"The Kingdom of God" is a modern humanized edition of those marvelous old "autos sacramentales" which Calderon and Lope de Vega were writing about the time of Shakespeare.

It is poetry touched with mysticism.

It reminds us once again that Spanish literature is a rich mine of precious metal. Those who have read only Ibanez and heard of "Don Quixote" little realize how many poets, novelists, dramatists and philosophers modern Spain can boast of.

Who Is This Sierra?

Martinez Sierra is a disciple of that other great dramatist, Jacinto Benavente, whose "Passion Flower" was the best thing Nance O'Neil ever did. Sierra was 17 when he took his first work, "The Song of Labor," to Bena-

Cohan to Say Goodby Broadway Next Spring

By BLAND JOHANESON

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.

WHEN George M. Cohan says goodby to Broadway and goes Hollywood, what is left of the Great White Way? It's like a boy stabbing his own mamma. Even the chop suey parlors will be draped in crepe when George M. leaves for the United Artists studio in the spring. There's hardly a person left to carry on the traditions of the theater.

Broadway already has begun to feel the approach of Christmas, and the competition of the shops. But an opening every night next week will revive the drooping box office treasurers. "Devil May Care," "Sally," "Tiger Rose," "Seven Keys to Baldpate" usher in the gay holiday season.

Warners are opening the first of their new theaters, the Beacon, on Christmas Eve. It's uptown in the West Seventies. A mezzanine on which both the girls and boys can smoke is one of the modernistic features of the new playhouse.

Movie-Go-Round

BY LOUELLA O. PARSONS

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 21.

CONSTANCE BENNETT must be much in evidence in Gay Paree. Everyone who comes home tells of seeing her dining at this and that cafe. She was a member of the same party in which the Marquis Henri De La Falaise and several other people, well-known in Filmland, were guests. Connie, they say, looks more stunning than ever. Will she come back to America? We hear she is a stockholder in Pathe and we rather suspect she will be back to look after her interests. Of course, many of the film players own stock in the various companies. If they didn't believe in the company making their own pictures, for goodness sake, in whom would they believe?

CHRISTMAS at Gloria Swanson's house promised to be a rather dismal affair. Little Joseph, Gloria's adopted son, has been very, very ill with a mastoid infection and far too ill to even think of a Christmas tree or toys. He is much better now and probably will be well enough on Christmas Day to share in the festivities with Gloria II, daughter of Gloria, a young lady 10 years old now. Anyone who knows Gloria Swanson appreciates what a really good mother she is and how devoted she is to these two children. She has spent most of her time these last few days at the bedside of little Joseph.

THERE were plenty of reports at the time Marian Nixon married the young Chicago millionaire, Edward Hillman, II, that he wouldn't permit her to continue her screen career. Like most tales of this kind, it was apparently just idle gossip. Miss Nixon has a contract with Warner Brothers, and her trip to Europe was only in the nature of a leave of absence. She returns to Hollywood January 24, bringing, of course, the bridegroom. Her next picture is to be "Sweet Kitty Bellairs." Wonder why Jack Warner and Darryl Zanuck brought that out of the moth balls. It's a terribly old play, yet they probably have some new angle.

THE good friends of Pola Negri in Hollywood are glad that she and Serge have kissed and made up. When Pola was here she refused to discuss her marital troubles more than to say Serge is the finest man she had ever known. When Pola refuses to talk you know she feels deeply. She is such a child of emotion that it is the most natural thing in the world to tell her troubles or her joys to those in whom she places her confidence. Perhaps the little domestic battle will clear the air and Pola and Serge will settle down to greater happiness. Let's hope so. Meanwhile report says they are returning to America. Pola is making three pictures abroad, but she does love California.

LOOKS as if my prophecy that Lowell Sherman would marry Helene Costello is correct. Of course, they say nothing in the world comes true but death and taxes, and yet when a wedding date is set for the last of March it seems as if both Mr. Sherman and Miss Costello mean business. Lowell becomes John Barrymore's brother-in-law when he marries Miss Costello, two good actors in one family.

HOLLYWOOD just loves anything new. Lotti Loder, the Hungarian girl brought to this country by Darryl Zanuck as a potential Warner Brothers' star, came into the Brown Derby last week. Lotti was chaperoned by Mrs. Jack Warner and Mrs. Darryl Zanuck, and if you think she didn't look the place over you are mistaken. One young producer, who uses his hands to help his conversation, was gesticulating more than usual. "It is not polite to point," she said to Mrs. Warner in German. Irma Warner, being nothing if not tactful, shushed her up and changed the subject.

AL JOLSON should be sure of a good story for his first United Artists picture. There is no one who knows the demands, the limitations and the advantages of the stage better than George M. Cohan. He has written the majority of his own stage successes, he knows enough not to keep Al weeping. True, he is a great sentimentalist and too much sentimentality is the very thing that Mr. Jolson must avoid if he wants to keep up the reputation of "The Jazz Singer" and "The Singin' Fool." But Mr. Jolson usually has enough relieving comedy to counteract too much sob stuff.

RUDY VALLEE is featured in "The Vagabond Lover," new photoplay attraction in the Sheridan Square.

EDITH KING, new leading woman for the George Sharp Players in the Pitt, will be seen with the company Monday in "The Barker."

Gilda in Two-Reelers

Gilda Gray, lately the shimmy star of "Aloma," "The Devil Dancer," is breaking into talking pictures, via the two-reelers. She has just made one based on "Frankie and Johnny" at the Paramount Astoria Studio. Gilda always yells and makes threats when anybody in this town hints that she isn't a great actress. She may be in this playlet, for it was directed by Dudley Murphy, whose "St. Louis Blues" and "Black and Tan" have been the most sensational short features yet shown on Broadway.

Miss Fanchon, of Fanchon and Marco, has deserted the coast and come to Broadway to produce her famed presentation units for the local Fox theaters. The local girls are fluttering, for haven't they heard that Fanchon and Marco have developed several of our glamorous movie stars.

Erwin With Kane

"Business Is Pleasure," an Elsie Janis story, is the next feature scheduled for the Astoria Paramount Studio, after Helen Kane has finished her "Dangerous Nan McGrew." Stuart Erwin, who scored a violent hit as the stupid college boy in "Sweetie," will come east again to play opposite the little comedienne.

The town is stripped of its visitors, the market is off, the night clubs are empty, the theaters starve during this dreariest week of the year. Grosses showed that Fifth avenue, not Broadway, is getting the town's spare cash.

The Roxy went 'way down to $83,000 last week, with Lenore Ulric's "South Sea Rose." The kind critics pronounced it one of the worst of the year. The Capitol slid to $49,000 with "Song of Love." "Half Way to Heaven" brought only $66,000 to the Paramount.

Santa Claus Asked To Bring Curious Presents to Stars

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Universal Service Motion Picture Editor

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 21.

THE brilliant poinsettias, blooming so gaily in Hollywood's front yards, remind us that Yuletide is here and that in a few days we shall be wishing our friends a Merry Christmas. Hollywood is getting ready for this event in the usual way, regardless of the current rumors that the stock market had put Santa Claus out of business.

"I suppose," writes one of our most faithful correspondents, "the motion picture stars get everything they want for Christmas." Does any one get everything he wants in the world, either in worldly goods or, what is more important, in complete happiness?

Let us see what some of our friends in the movies would like to find in their Christmas stockings. I am sure Evelyn Brent would like a written assurance that she is to have better stories during the coming year.

Chaplin Wants Silence

The best Christmas present Charlie Chaplin could possibly get would be the end of the talkies. Clara Bow would like nothing better than a promise there will be no more printed rumors of her quarrels with Harry Richman.

Johnny Barrymore would like to make an arrangement with Dr. Stork to deliver an actor to carry on the traditions of the Barrymore family. Ronald Colman would like to have a promise that the girls leave him in peace. Marion Davies would like a musical comedy with the same opportunities that "Marianne" gave her.

Benny Rubin wants a medal for being the best master of ceremonies in this country. (He'd better try to get it.) Buddy Rodgers would like 20 debutantes, with June Collyer's beauty and Mary Brian's sweetness, to go with him to the film premiers.

No Rumors Desired

Dolores Del Rio craves a promise that no more rude reporters will try to pin an engagement on her. The poor little rich boy, Tom Mix, wants a cottage instead of the vast Mix estates.

Bebe Daniels would like to have a 1930 to match with her 1929. Lillian Gish wants a chance to be a vamp—on the screen. Will Rogers hopes dress suits and microphones go out of style. John Gilbert longs for a good old-fashioned domestic quarrel with his Ina Claire, without the world getting on to it.

Nils Asther wants to be engaged and to name his own wedding day without Hollywood trying to arrange matters for him and Vivian Duncan. Lupe Velez would like to kiss Gary Cooper in public as often as she likes without any restraining press agents. Bessie Love would like to have time between pictures to get married.

Paul Whiteman wants another "Rhapsody in Blue," a

New Photoplay Features Eight Pairs of Sisters

By MILDRED FILLMORE

OUT of the West comes the movie Santa Claus with a whole sack full of Christmas week film footage and talk. And here's hoping the sack is crowded with as many good things as Santa's advance agents promise.

Down in the Grand the Warner boys are saying "Merry Christmas" with "Show of Shows." This production, heralded as their 1929 screen achievement, is a film revue, and has been done in Technicolor. Seventy-seven names well-known in the stage and screen realms are featured, and there are said to be 1,000 Hollywood beauties who furnish "background." One of the highlights is an episode that presents eight sister teams. Richard (Weary River) Barthelmess introduces the sisters, and they are Sally Blane and Loretta Young, Sally O'Neil and Molly O'Day, Shirley Mason and Viola Dana, Helene and Dolores Costello, Hariette Lake and Marion Byron, Alice and Marceline Day, Adamae and Alberta Vaughan and Lola and Vendrill Armida.

Georges Carpentier, the young Frenchman who used to box; Beatrice Lille, English comedienne, and those other amusing stage girls, Winnie Lightner and Irene Bordoni, are a few of the many performers. John Barrymore is on hand with some Shakespeare, and Ben Turpin, who we haven't seen for a long time, is present with his crossed-eyes.

Grim Drama by Colman

Ronald Colman is bringing some grim dramatics to the Aldine in the talkie, "Condemned." Ann Harding, blonde and talented, who two or so summers ago appeared in Pittsburgh as a stock actress, plays opposite him. She is, as most of you know, Mrs. Harry Bannister in private life.

The picture concerns itself with the life and inhabitants of Devil's Island, which is the notorious French penal colony off the coast of South America. Heroic Ronald has the role of a dashing, debonair young thief who falls in love with the warden's mistreated wife. And Miss Harding appears in this role. Louis

Five Talkies In 5 Months

By JERRY HOFFMAN
Universal Service

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 21.

"IT'S not the things that people say that makes 'em interesting," was Dorothy Revier's parting thrust, "but the things they don't say."

That had all the earmarks of a nasty dig. But, by the same token, Dorothy Revier should be the most interesting person in Hollywood. It wasn't the fault of either of us, that there wasn't much to say to each other. I caught Dorothy in one of those quick luncheon periods, when she had but a few minutes in which to change her costume, grab a cup of tea and return to the set.

Busy Girl, Dorothy

She's a busy girl, is Dorothy Revier. One can readily realize how she has made five pictures, all talkies, in as many months. It is only a few weeks since she completed her role in "The Mighty" opposite George Bancroft. Since then she has completed three other picture parts.

The unusual part of it is that Dorothy is not relegated to any one type of character. Her last few productions have presented her as a hard-boiled wise-cracking type, an ultra refined lady, an English woman and a sweet gushy ingenue. It's the last type she hates to do.

"Every time I play a sugary girlie," says Dorothy, "I want to slap myself and say, 'Turn human, baby, turn human.'"

The press of time gave both Dorothy and the interviewer the fidgets.

Only 10 Minutes Left

"What'll we talk about?" I nagged, "we have only 10 minutes left."

"Too bad this isn't New York," replied Dorothy helpfully.

"What's that got to do with it?"

"Well, I could tell you how much I love your tall buildings; what a thrill I get out of your subways; how the noise and bustle of your Great City (don't

Concert and Terpsichore In Events of Yuletide

By J. FRED LISSFELT

THE Christmas holidays, usually so barren of musical entertainment, with the exception of college plays, brings two noteworthy events this year. Clubs and churches are attending arduously to playing and singing of carols and hymns, but none of them can compete with the Mendelssohn Choir's performance of Handel's "Messiah."

A few weeks ago Ernest Lunt's choir sang the other most popular oratorio, Mendelssohn's "Elijah," and proved what a complete musical organization that body of singers has become. Doubtless Christmas week's "Messiah" will eclipse all other performances by that choir, for it sings the Handel music yearly, each time with greater fervor. Dan Beddoe, America's foremost oratorio tenor, is to return, which assures delightful singing of those beautiful arias. Ruth Shaffner, soprano; Grace Leslie, contralto, and Sigurd Nilsson, basso, complete the quartet of soloists.

Dancers Listed, Too

But a dance evening, that is said to electrify audiences, is to be the holiday feature also, a dance recital by Harald Kreuzberg and Yvonne Georgi.

We first heard of this dancing pair while they were solo dancers at the Leipzig opera in Germany. Everyone re-

Superfilms in 1930

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 21.

NINETEEN-THIRTY is destined to bring phenomenal changes in motion pictures.

Inspiring spectacles on superscreens; the beauties of natural colors; new pictorial qualities with third dimension, stereoscopic film; a greater use of out-of-doors locales and a world-wide dominance of American talking pictures through foreign-language translations made in Hollywood—these are a few of the innovations which loom on the movie horizon.

In pointing out that motion pictures have passed through the tribulations which came with sound, William Le Baron, vice president in charge of production of Radio Pictures, stressed that film producers are rapidly progressing to new goals in the realms of production and exhibition.

"We will all witness great things in 1930," Le Baron said. "Progress undreamed of a few years ago will be made in artistic and technical fields. Wide film, giving super-sized images and eliminating distortion of images when seen from the sides of the theater, will soon be shown by means of the Spoor-Berggren process."

El Brendel Gets Start in Cellar

By KENNETH R. PORTER
Universal Service

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 21.

IF YOU want to be funny start in the cellar (called basement in Beverly Hills) and work up—or out.

This is, if you care to ape El Brendel, whom William Fox thought funny enough to place under a long-term contract for talking pictures. Half the fun's in his face; the rest in his lingo. That bane Swedish.

Getting back into the cellar:

"Aye bane start to be funny in our cellar at home. Oh, pardon me," and the little Swede, born Irish, switched into American. "Being funny is serious business. At least with me. It means money in the bank and meat on the table. I was only 14 when I found an old pair of wooden shoes and learned to dance in them. Clogged all over the house until the family was nearly 'bugs' and I finally landed in the cellar. It was damp down there, but I was too young for rheumatism.

Cellar as "Theater"

"The cellar was soon turned into a 'theater.' I started using German dialect with my dance and charged a penny admission to the neighbor kids. Then I added chin whiskers and a bald skull cap to my outfit and decided I was ready for 'big-time.' I acted all over the place. My studies went from bad to worse, so, without the consent of my parents, I quit school."

Brendel is modest, both in manner and speech. He's as reliable as the day is long, has a beautiful home, a charming wife and has not "gone Hollywood."

Finds Himself Job

"My persistence soon found me a job," laughingly continued the comedian. "We were living in Philadelphia, and local theaters needed good talent bad. I was that, but I got $8 a week. I sang, told stale jokes and did sleight-of-hand tricks to fill out the bill. Finally I was booked for vaudeville and toured the country for 12 years in my own skit. My German act was 'worn out' by vente. Benavente took the young poet into his company and he became an actor. He was influenced by Maeterlinck in his mystical vein; he got the tricks of the theater from Benavente and from the audiences to whom he played. There is much to be learned from audiences, both by the actor and the playwright.

Now Sierra has written about 40 plays and translated or adapted about 50 more from various languages. Those Spanish dramatists are inexhaustible. Ink must be very cheap in Madrid and Barcelona.

But we are concerned at present only with "The Kingdom of God," because it brings to us the first lady of the American theater, Ethel Barrymore, whose rare charm was first revealed in Barrie's "Alice Sit-by-the-Fire" as her tremendous power was first shown in Pinero's "Mid-Channel."

She brings a leading man, Lewis Calhern, who would be the greatest of Don Giovannis if he could sing.

'Vanities' of This World

While Ethel Barrymore is showing us stained glass and "The Kingdom of God" in the Alvin, the Nixon will have the merry-go-round with the "Vanities" of this world—Earl Carroll's seventh edition. W. C. Fields is the principal comedian, and "Miss Universe" is presented as the acme and apex of feminine pulchritude.

Dorothy Britton is her name. She secured her extensive title at Galveston, Tex., crowning her supreme over Miss Ashtabula, Miss Siberia, Miss Patagonia, presumably Miss Saturn and Miss Aldebaran. Whether the competition extended beyond our Galaxy into the regions of the Spiral Nebula, only Einstein and Earl Carroll can tell.

The crowd will go to look at Miss Britton and to laugh at the jocosities of Fields. He started as a juggler in dime museums, he has played vaudeville in Africa, he appeared in burlesque for the fabulous salary of $35 a week, he was in "The Ham Tree" with McIntyre and Heath, and now he makes thousands laugh every week and gets thousands for doing it.

Some statistical shark and efficiency expert ought to calculate how much each laugh elicited by the antics of Mr. Fields is worth, dividing chuckles into dollars.

Circus Life in Pitt

Other fun-merchants and other divinities surround these two in Earl Carroll's big show. Dorothy Lull is said to be a remarkable dancer, Ben Blue is a comic of amusing gifts and there are said to be 125 in the chorus who minister delight to eye and ear.

The boisterous side of life also has the right of way in the Shubert Pitt, where George Sharp's Players are presenting Kenyon Nicholson's comedy of carnival life, "The Barker," in which Walter Huston scored a big success in New York.

A new leading lady makes her bow on Monday evening—Edith King, of whom many words of praise have been heard from those that know her work.

Harland Tucker will play the part created by Huston and that part has enough movement and color to give him the first good chance he has had in several weeks. The large cast will enlist the full strength of the company.

Gorgeous stage shows at the Penn, Stanley and Enright, with talking pictures of varied types and vaudeville to vary the talking picture drama in the Harris, will give this Christmas week a cheery and festal note for the waning year.

been quite the same as "Strange Interlude." Their trinity of gentlemen concerned in it are a meaty, middle-aged lot, among whom the beautiful Bergner looks like an ageless little elf. Two of them wear monocles, one sports a beret with dress clothes.

Mood Escapes Set

One picture, particularly, of that celebrated climactic scene where Nina has her three men gathered around her. We all raved about the subtle, pensive quiet of that scene on the opening night. We all thought the Guild did wonders by having its actors do nothing but sit blessedly still in the lamplight. The Berlin picture hints of a far different mood. The three men are packed close upon a couch, a trinity of stiff shirts. On a balustrade above them Bergner stands with rapturously outflung arms, a ballet pose, a stance of impish, unearthly ecstacy, more like Peter Pan preparing to fly out of the window than Nina trudging up to her all too human bed.

Of course, this is simply snap judgment from a snapshot. I can't do more than conjecture.

Boy Wonder of Theater, Jed Harris, Returns to Broadway He Deserted

By BUSHNELL DIMOND

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.

THE most fascinating, envied and feared figure of the local theatrical world has just emerged, Napoleon-wise, from a self-decreed Elba, and Broadway is all eyes and ears in its efforts to find out what he's going to do next.

I am referring to Jed Harris. This extraordinary young man—he's under 30—has been killing time in London and the Continent for about a year. He pulled up stakes with a decisive gesture; announced that he was through with the theater—"The shell game of the arts," in Percy Hammond's bitter phrase—and was going to loaf and invite his soul—indefinitely.

Mr. Harris' return seems to be in the nature of a survey. He isn't, he says, positively committed to a production. If he finds a play he likes he'll do it. Otherwise, no. His re-entry on the Broadway scene seems to me significant if for no other reason because the impresario of "Broadway" waves away all talkie talk imperiously. He isn't interested. At least, not just now.

There is significance, too, it would appear, in Harris' scrutiny of the New York dramatic field, which, excluding a handful of wildly successful productions, is undeniably in a bad way, the latest staggering blow being the defection to Los Angeles of George M. Cohan. Harris, I think it may be fairly claimed, has the temperament, the autocracy, the inspiration and the capacity for work to put the street on its feet. Dictatorship is not indicated, but certainly men of his tang and drive are needed.

by anyone. His imagination is fiery, and he can hold a roomful of people in a hypnotic vise as he recites 'King Lear' or God knows what—anything. But he has queer sudden streaks of timidity—the very successful 'Berkeley Square' lay in his desk for a couple of years."

These remarks, while they may not reveal the man's entire stature, are pat at the moment. The Theater Guild, as I write, is preparing to bring to town a play called "Meteor," by S. N. Behrman, who wrote the delightful "The Second Man" and adapted "Serene Blandish." The new piece is said to concern itself with a man, a genius, with a thirst for power, unheedful of other people's feelings, physically intuitive, a disturbing person. Mr. Behrman used to be Mr. Harris' press agent.

For the Records

It's rather interesting to glance at his past achievements—and fiascoes.

His opening gun proved to be of the pop variety. This was a ribald and ingenious farce, called "Weak Sisters," gustily played and dealing with a modern Mrs. Warren. The piece flopped largely because across the street was "Cradle Snatchers," of similar import. I still think the first-named play, by Lynn Starling, was funnier than that of Norma Mitchell and Russell Medcraft.

Harris followed this up with the moderately popular "Love 'Em and Leave 'Em," and then walked into the millionaire class with "Broadway." This he followed up with "The Royal Family," "Coquette," "The Front Page," all extraordinary smashes, and "Spread Eagle" and "Serena Blandish," which collapsed in spite of forced campaign.

Imagination Fiery

"Jed is so remarkable a producer," said a man who knows him intimately, "that his finest achievements will never be seen phrases and sentences in holly barries. I feel that I was doing very well at it, too, until that ginger ale comparison forced its way into this article against my will. Anyway, from here on, it will be, if not Christmasy, at least an attempt to be.

First of all, we are to have all that Santa Claus can give us in the way of amusement, and it promises to be high class entertainment, too. All of the legitimate houses, two of which have been dark for a week, are to be open. There is to be plenty of gayety, with just enough of the serious to cause reflection. All theaters—those devoted to stage drama and the cinema shrines as well—will do their best to see that what the good St. Nicholas has brought for amusement patrons is presented to those for whom the gifts are intended in a manner befitting the season as well as the nature of the offerings that Kris Kringle brings to us.

Spirit Is Everywhere

That is to be Christmas in the theater for those on one side of the footlights. But Christmas is not confined to that side only. As we know, it is everywhere, on the stage as well as in the auditorium. We know it is a holiday for us—we, ourselves make it evident. Our pretty trees, our wreaths of green and red, our tinseled Christmas trees, our holiday happiness and feeling of good will toward all mankind—all of these are our symbols of our own state of mind and of the fact of Christmas and all that it connotes. Our very presence in the theater has a special meaning at Christmas time. It is the moment of relaxation in the great festival.

And what about the other side of the footlights—is there relaxation there, too, a giving up to the Christmas spirit? I assure you there is. The players are having just as much fun as you are. They know they are engaged in making people happy and that is their supreme satisfaction. The significance of their mission is a consciousness within them in a degree of special potency at the Christmas season.

Workers and Players

But they are working and you are playing. You dismiss it with the thought that, well, that is their business and they must take what comes with their calling. That is neither an unfeeling nor an unkindly thought, for it is just what the troupers think about it, too. It has always been that way. Yet Christmas is Christmas with troupers, who are far from home and firesides, just as it is with everybody else. And it is as far from cheerless as your own is.

They celebrate the holiday much as you do, within the limitations that the mimic world imposes. They send their gifts and they receive presents. With most companies it is the custom to have even a Christmas tree and a holiday feast after the Christmas night performance. On such occasions the company becomes a big family and they are as merry as the traditional Christmas bell.

That is the kind of a grip Santa Claus, with his kindly influence, has on the actor as well as the audience. In his imagination the actor sees the stockings of childhood hanging on the mantel. He sees the glistening snow radiating the reflections of the stors on a long-past Christmas morning when there is no other light save that and the red coals of a stove or fireplace. He senses the magic and the sentiment of the season and his feeling makes him one of us, present at our feast, as we are at his.

Serve the—ah—ginger ale, and a merry Christmas to you.

Publix Units For Stanley

THE Stanley Theater is to present its first Publix Unit stage show beginning Friday, January 3. The Publix organization creates a minimum of two miniature revues a week, 104 pint-sized musical comedies a year, employing singers, dancers, jesters, specialty teams, musicians, etc.

The production of these revues begins, naturally, with the producers, of which there are 10. Each of these is responsible for the creation and production of a unit every four weeks and he must have the unit rehearsed and ready to act four weeks in advance.

The ideas for these units come from news events, songs, popular names of the moment, slang expressions and dance novelties. Around any one or more of these items a revue may be constructed.

Publix offers something to the theatrical performer that, previous to its conception, had never been thought of, 50 consecutive weeks of appearances in the best theaters in the country.

'Vanities' Bill On Nixon Stage

THE Earl Carroll "Vanities," seventh edition, comes to the Nixon for Christmas week, opening Monday evening. W. C. Fields, comedian, is featured in nine humorous sketches. Dorothy Britton, who won the title of "Miss Universe" at the Galveston International Pageant of Beauty, will play several parts in "Vanities" as well as reigning as the beauty queen. The company includes Ben Blue, the Bennett boys, Theodore, Enrica and Novello, Joey Ray, Grace Wells, Paul Russell, Patrick Henry, Dorothy Lull, Elsie Connor and Vivian Wilson. "Vanities" has 45 scenes and episodes.

Stage in Penn Has 'Novelties'

FOR the Christmas week attraction, beginning Monday, the Penn will present Nat Nazarro, Jr., and His Aristocrats of Jazz in "Novelties." It is a Boris Petroff production featuring Boyce Combe, English comedian, and Gene Sheldon, who is billed as "the life of the party." Supporting entertainers include "Two Black Dots," dancing silhouettes, Ann Chang, Chinese star of syncopation, and the Gamby Hale Girls. The screen offers Joan Crawford in her first all talking picture, "Untamed." An organlogue by Dick Leibert and an overture, under Elias Breeskin's direction, will be on the bill.

Vaudeville Acts On Harris Bill

KEITH vaudeville in the Harris features the Six O'Reillys, a group of foreign gymnasts making their first American tour. Gene and Myrtle Moore in "Bits & Hits of Broadway" is another important booking. Szita and Anis, with Esther Deeter, offer a variety of dances intermingled with bits by a singing pianist. Packard and Dodge are funmakers, not automobiles, but their comedy hinges upon one's knowledge of the trials and tribulations of the motor car owner. Victor Graff, growing in popularity each week, offers an appropriate holiday number, called "Christmas Follies." "Street Girl" is the screen feature.

Ronald Colman Star in Aldine

"CONDEMNED," new Ronald Colman starring picture, comes to the Aldine Monday. It is a picture of the life among the convicts serving terms in the French penal colony of Devil's Island off the coast of South America. Colman's role, that of the dashing, debonair young thief, who falls in love with the warden's mistreated wife, is taken from life. This character formed the central figure of Mrs. Blair Niles' book "Condemned to Devil's Island" from which "Condemned" was adapted, and the original of the character is living now in his cell on Devil's Island, it is said.

Good Times, Loew Slogan

A NATION-WIDE "festival" of optimism and good cheer, with a slogan of "Good Times Are Here!", is to be launched in January, with Loew's and United Artists Penn and Loew's Aldine taking an important part. Heeding President Hoover's vigorous attempt to spur the country on to bigger things in 1930, the Loew theater organization, with hundreds of playhouses from coast to coast, is planning to provide especially ambitious shows for "Loew's January Festival."

Photoplay producers are cooperating with Loew's to release exceptional pictures during January. Enlarged stage programs are being arranged. Every theater will be decorated gayly—150,000 feet of colorful pennants, or nearly 30 miles of display! Merchants and industries in various communities will co-operate by decorating stores and streets and putting on "festival" civic events, all aimed to pep up the neighborhoods for a lively start to 1930. Automobile clubs will be asked to help distribute several million stickers reading "Good Times Are Here," with the "festival" insignia.

Pitt Offering Is 'The Barker'

THE Christmas week attraction in the Pitt, to be given by the George Sharp Players, is "The Barker," a three-act play of carnival life, by J. Kenyon Nicholson, played in New York and on the road, with Walter Huston playing the role which Harland Tucker will assume. Miss Edith King, new leading woman, will make her debut with the company. The story is woven about the lives of a father who has been a "barker" with shows all his life, and his son, who finds his way into the circus and falls in love with one of the girls in the show. There is a large cast, with Mabel Kroman, Gus Forbes, Alice Ann Baker, Robert Fiske, Hugh Banks, Lucette Parker, Norman Porter, Billy Link, Agnes Bane, Charlotte Orr and others. An extra matinee will be given Wednesday, Christmas Day.

Holiday Revue On Stanley Stage

DICK POWELL offers "Season's Greetings" as the holiday week show in the Stanley. The Rockets are featured in a doll dance. An added attraction is M. Barth's "Kiddie Xmas Follies," featuring Pittsburgh children. On the screen "Pointed Heels" is the all-talk film. David Broudy directs the Stanley Orchestra in "Christmas Fantasy" as an overture and Bernie Armstrong remains at the organ with "Song Pluggers Holiday."

'Jingle Bells' On Enright Stage

JAY MILLS presents a holiday revue, "Jingle Bells," in the Enright. Featured entertainers are Lassiter Brothers, tap dancers, and Williams' Midgets. On the screen "The Battle of Paris," a romantic comedy of Gay Paree in wartime, is the attraction. Frank Roberts remains at the organ with a novelty, "The Night Before Christmas."

JOHN S. B. ARCHER, tenor, will appear with the Harvard University Instrumental Clubs in the Carnegie Music Hall Thursday night.

Miss Barrymore Comes to Alvin

ETHEL BARRYMORE will appear in two plays in the Shubert-Alvin for two weeks beginning Monday night, with matinees on Wednesday and Saturday. G. Martinez Sierra's "The Kingdom of God" will be acted the entire first week. Lili Hatvany's "The Love Duel" will be played the entire second week, opening Monday, December 30. In "The Kingdom of God" Miss Barrymore has the role of Sister Gracia, at the ages of 19, 29 and 70, a part unlike anything she ever has acted. The play is not religious nor is Sister Gracia a nun. Louis Calhern is leading man. The company of 50 players includes Mary Loane, Georgie Drew Mendum, George Alison, William Kershaw, Anita Rothe, Harry Plimmer, Eleanor Stuart, Gertrude Maitland, James Meighan, Olive Oliver, Wilma Thompson, Diane Van Dommelen, Ernestine Gaines, Malcolm Soltan, Marcel Dill, Joan Carvel, Eleanor Powers, Charles Powers, Lionel Dante, Edward Teene and Gregory Deane.

Song, Talk, Jungles and Grim Convict Drama in Films

New Photoplay Features Eight Teams of Sisters As One of Its Highlights

Wolheim, whose face is his fortune, and Dudley Digges are prominent in supporting roles.

Jungles Versus Gotham

The Penn screen is to present Joan Crawford in her first all-talkie, "Untamed." In a way it is a picture of contrasts for its locale is centered in two places —Central American jungles and New York. Joan is seen as the enticing daughter of a wealthy oil prospector, who after years of childhood in the jungles finally finds herself face to face with the complexities of modern life. Leaving Central America upon the death of her father, she goes to New York and proceeds to fall in love with a penniless engineer.

The film cast is a large one and includes Robert Montgomery, Ernest Torrence, Holmes Herbert, Gwen Lee, Grace Cunard, John Miljan, Edward Nugent and Gertrude Astor.

Crooning Mr. Vallee

The new photoplay in the Stanley is "Pointed Heels," which sounds modern enough. It is a singing and talking production and William Powell, Helen Kane and "Skeets" Gallagher are in the featured roles. This fellow Powell, who recently became quite prominent on the talk screen doing the sleuthing Philo Vance, has been in films a long time. He was one of the best villains back in the silent days. Incidentally, Mr. Powell, though born in Kansas City, lived in Pittsburgh a number of years.

Rudy Vallee, radio crooner, who recently made a brief screen appearance here in "Glorifying the American Girl," is out in the Sheridan Square as star of the R. K. O. picture, "The Vagabond Lover." The film plot is said to parallel in theme the actual life story of Rudy, who has risen from a country boy, son of a New England druggist, to be idol of the radio and night clubs. Mr. Vallee croons four songs during the action of the picture.

Miss Kane is recalled as that singing boop-boop-da-loop (or whatever it is?) girl who made her screen debut in "Sweetie."

"The Battle of Paris," heralded as a comedy romance of wartime Paree, is the current talkie in the Enright. Gertrude Lawrence and Charles Ruggles are featured. A new photoplay will open in that theater Friday, December 27, instead of Saturday, marking the inauguration of a new "opening day" there.

R. K. O.'s "Street Girl," starring Betty Compson, is getting a downtown showing in the Harris.

The Garden has "Why Bring That Up!" with Moran and Mack, as one of its bookings.

Roland Hayes Will Sing Here

ROLAND HAYES, Negro tenor, will give a concert in Carnegie Music Hall on Tuesday evening, January 7. This season marks Roland Hayes' sixth tour of America. In addition to a group of Negro Spirituals.

TEAM

GENE MOORE is a member of one of the featured vaudeville teams on the Harris stage.

ported them eccentrics, and assured us they were the only members of that opera who knew anything about rhythm. Then came a rumor that Kreuzberg was doing a specialty in Max Reinhardt's production of "Midsummer Night's Dream" in Salzburg and New York. Not until his New York recital was our curiosity aroused, and when later Georgi joined Kreuzberg in a recital, many who attended that performance wrote in superlatives, and begged us to divert any other entertainment for the sake of these dancers. Now we read almost unbelievable praise from Boston and other eastern cities.

Expression Modern

It seems these artists are finding in the motion of their bodies the same expression that the modernists in poetry, painting or music have already shown us. They are even monstrous at times, but always mindful of beauty and design within space. While they have graduated from the classic ballet, and have drawn inspiration from the Russians, they also have gone far beyond and founded a school of their own, based on the physical quality of their accompanying music.

How much more deeply dancers of the present are penetrating the meaning of music would rejoice the heart of a thinker like Richard Wagner, who wrote every gesture into his musical phrase. La Argentina must have been a revelation in this respect, for, though her steps were limited, she lived the music of Spain.

With Kreuzberg and Georgi we shall see new meanings for the works of Chopin, Prokofieff, Milhaud, Satie, DeFalla and Debussy. They must be of a thinking race of poets who are trying to combine the arts and their dancing begins a new epoch.

well with $16,000 at the Central and will remain over the holidays. "General Crack" started off mildly with $24,000 at the Warner. "The Love Parade" is still the hit of the street.

"Hollywood Revue," "Show of Shows," "Rio Rita," "The Trespasser" depart from the alley this week, making way for the holiday new ones.

"The Sky Hawk," last week's new special, sent the reviewers into hysterics. The picture was brought in quietly and the whispers were that it was to be pretty poor, but did the boys and girls rave over it. It is figure as a sure hit.

Vallee Picture Sheridan Booking

RUDY VALLEE'S initial starring film, "The Vagabond Lover," is the new attraction in the R-K-O Sheridan Square. The picture story, written by James Creelman, Jr., parallels in theme the actual life story of Rudy Vallee, who has climbed by his musical ability from a country boy, son of a New England druggist, to a radio and night club idol. Sally Blane has the heroine role. Other players include Marie Dressler, Norman Peck, Danny O'Shea, Nella Walker, Alan Roscoe, Malcolm Waite and Charles Sellon. Four songs are sung by Vallee during the action of the plot.

"I know—but isn't it a great idea?"

"Uh-huh. Let's go to New York."

Joan Crawford In Penn Picture

JOAN CRAWFORD is starred in "Untamed," which comes to the Penn Monday. She plays a girl, brought up in the Central American jungles, who suddenly is brought face to face with the complexities of modern life. Leaving Central America upon the death of her father she comes to New York and falls in love with a penniless engineer. The man in whose care Joan has been left when her father died in the tropics, leaving her a fortune, objects to her marriage with this poor young man and does all he can to thwart it. Jack Conway directed this film drama of present-day life. In the cast are Robert Montgomery, Ernest Torrence, Holmes Herbert, Gwen Lee, Grace Cunard, John Miljan, Edward Nugent and Gertrude Astor.

'Pointed Heels' Stanley Booking

BACKSTAGE life and domestic entanglement are prominent in "Pointed Heels," all-talking picture in the Stanley, William Powell, the sleuth of "The Greene Murder Case" and "The Canary Murder Case;" Helen Kane, the original boop-boop-a-doop girl; Fay Wray and Richard "Skeets" Galagher are cast in the leading roles. On the stage Dick Powell offers "Season's Greetings." Bernie Armstrong remains at the organ. David Broudy directs the Stanley Orchestra in "Christmas Fantasy."

Harris Screen Has 'Street Girl'

THE Radio picture "Street Girl," is current in the Harris. Betty Compson, who has reached new heights through the medium of talking pictures, heads the cast of well-known players. "Street Girl" was adapted from W. Carey Wonderly's story, "The Viennese Charmer," a dramatic tale of that little known, but intensely human district, New York's "Little Hungary." Featured in support of Miss Compson is John Harron. Comedy is furnished by Jack Oakie, Ned Sparks and Joseph Cawthorn.

Moran and Mack Garden Booking

"WHY BRING THAT UP?" featuring Moran and Mack, the Two Black Crows, will be presented in the Garden for three days, beginning Monday. The picture Thursday, Friday and Saturday will be "The Mighty," starring George Bancroft.

Aldine Ballroom Has Special Dance

A SPECIAL Christmas dancing party will be held this Monday night in the Aldine ballroom. Music will be furnished by Jimmy Zummo's orchestra. Finals in the dance contest being conducted by the ballroom management will be held Thursday night.

'Show of Shows' Current in Grand

"SHOW OF SHOWS," Warner Brothers' all-color and talking picture is current in the Grand. More than 75 prominent performers are seen and heard and more than 1,000 Hollywood beauties contribute their talents toward the dancing routines in the picture. The featured players include John Barrymore, Richard Barthelmess, Irene Bordoni, Georges Carpentier, Betty Compson, Chester Conklin, Dolores and Helen Costello, Viola Dana, Alice Day, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Frank Fay, Lloyd Hamilton, Lupino Lane, Lila Lee, Ted Lewis, Winnie Lightner, Beatrice Lillie, Nick Lucan, Chester Morris, Jack Mulhall, Ben Turpin, Grant Withers and Loretta Young.

Opera Events By German Group

THE tenor department of the German Grand Opera Company, whose forces visit this city on January 22 and 23, for two performances, boasts of half a dozen artists, some of whose names are familiar to music devotees, while others, famous in Germany and other countries of central Europe, are this season visiting American shores for the first time. Best known to Americans are Karl Jorn, formerly of the Metropolitan Opera, New York, and Johannes Sembach, co-star at the Metropolitan with Caruso in the heyday of that singer's regime.

Enright Books 'Battle of Paris'

THE all talking attraction on Enright screen is "The Battle of Paris," heralded as a romantic comedy of wartime Paree. Charles Ruggles, comedian, who scored success in "The Lady Lies," and Gertrude Lawrence, musical comedy actress are cast in the leading roles. The picture only will play five days at the East Liberty playhouse, the Enright going to a Friday opening policy at the conclusion of the run of this production. Supporting players are Walter Petrie, Gladys du Bois and Arthur Treacher. On the stage, Jay Mills presents "Jingle Bells."

Harvard Musical Clubs in Concert

THE Harvard University Instrumental Clubs will be in Carnegie Music Hall Thursday evening. In addition to the mandolin, banjo and vocal units of the club, the Gold Coast Orchestra will be a feature. The local committee, under whose auspices the Harvard boys come to Pittsburgh, includes Park J. Alexander, Horace Forbes Baker, H. V. Blaxter, W. H. R. Hilliard, Eugene Hunting, G. C. Kimball, Albert C. Lehman, John E. Ricketson, Charles W. Wilder, Charles Holmes Wolfe and George W. Nicola.

Both artists are disciples of the famous Mary Wigman School of Germany. Among the principal numbers on the program will be "Polonaise," by Chopin; "Dance of the Master of Ceremonies," from Reinhardt's Festival Play, Saltzburg, music by Scott; "In the Twilight," by Milhaud; "Variations," by Mozart; "Dance of Salome," by Scott; Spanish Impressions, by DeFalla; Three Mad Figures, by Prokotieff, and Russian Dance, by Wieniawski.

String Quartet Plays January 12

THE Yost String Quartet will give its second concert of the season January 12 in the Hotel Schenley ballroom. A new string quartet by Frederick Jacobi, an American composer, will be heard for the first time here. The Yost quartet comprises Gaylord Yost, Roy Shoemaker, Carl Rosenberg and James Younger.

REAL ESTATE and BUILDING

Increased Inquiry Noted in Real Estate Market

MORE ACTIVITY PREDICTED FOR FIRST OF YEAR

Better Demand for Business Property Seen in Spite Of Pre-Holiday Season.

The real estate market has turned inactive with the approach of the holidays and transfers are being recorded in smaller volume. A good inquiry has been noticed, however, and brokers predict brisk business for the early part of next year.

December is usually considered a quiet month in the house market although occasionally a home is purchased as a Christmas present. Usually, however, members of the family are too much interested in shopping to give attention to house-hunting and few deals are closed until after the first of the year.

Business leasing has shown some improvement recently. A number of large lease deals have been closed and a much better demand for space is seen. Substantial inquiry is also reported for first-class industrial property.

SQUIRREL HILL SALE

A large brick residence on the south side of Aylesboro avenue east of Wightman street, Fourteenth Ward, has been sold by the Fidelity Title and Trust Company to William M. McKelvey for $40,000. The lot is 133x169 feet.

In Mt. Lebanon, the Stevenson, Williams Company sold for L. S. De Puy, of New York, to George Newman 50x128 feet in Pennsylvania boulevard. Mr. Newman plans to erect a brick duplex.

In Crafton, Frank J. Black has purchased from the Carnegie Land Company 119x124 feet with a house at 241 Noble avenue for $15,000.

A brick house at 244 Forty-fourth street, lot 32x153 feet, has been sold by Leonard Kwaterski to the Rev. Hugh C. Boyle, bishop of the Roman Catholic diocese of Pittsburgh.

The Catholic Institute of Pittsburgh has conveyed to the county of Allegheny a tract of 13,890 square feet in Grenada street, North Side, as a part of the approach for the new McKees Rocks Bridge. The consideration was $17,500.

A brick residence on 100x351 feet at 4323 Irvine street, Hazelwood, has been sold by Henry Friedman to William H. Larkin.

Outdoor Advertisers Seek Realtors' Help

A resolution recently passed by the Outdoor Advertising Association at its annual convention looks toward harmony between billboard interests, civic improvement projects and those organizations seeking to protect property values. The resolution asks that the Department of Commerce of the United States make a survey outlining the manner in which advertising companies should proceed in suburban communities. The resolution suggests that the Department of Commerce secure the aid of the Department of Commerce of the United States, the National Association of Real Estate Boards, the American Hotel Association, the Association of National Advertisers, the Art Center of New York, and the National Federation of Women's Clubs in making its recommendations to the advertisers. The National Association of Real Estate Boards four years ago placed itself on record as opposed to outdoor advertising as such a nature that it destroys scenic beauty.

Watching Real Estate
By M. V. BURGESS

INCREASE in the 1930 tax millage by City Council brought a storm of protest from real estate and building interests. The higher tax rate, forced through by a majority in Council, was ratified without giving time to seriously consider any of the suggestions for economy brought forward by taxpayers at the public hearing. The blunt refusal of the aid offered by the business, real estate and building leaders of the city has caused resentment and the results are likely to be far-reaching.

CO-OPERATION being rejected, property owners are planning to conduct their own investigation of the expenditures of public funds. The Building Owners and Managers have already decided to make a complete study of the situation. The central aim of the Pittsburgh Real Estate Board for 1930, as expressed by its leaders, is to get at the root of the tax problem. City Council's action has at least had the good effect of arousing public interest.

RESULTS of the crash in the stock market have not yet taken the form of a boom for the real estate business. This is the opinion of a number of Pittsburgh brokers who have been watching the situation closely. In the case of costly homes, numerous prospects have withdrawn from the market. Although most stock losses are on paper, they nevertheless represent a real decrease in the buying power of the owner. On the other hand much more interest is being shown in lower-priced properties. The realtor is getting a hearing by individuals who would have laughed at him a few months ago.

BUILDING of homes for the market by speculators generally forms a large part of any boom in construction. The activities of the speculative builder are watched closely to determine the trend of the real estate market and supply and demand in the house market. Although the builder who constructs for the market is often misjudged because of the work of a few of his trade, he is generally a high class workman. He is responsible for the growth of many large cities.

WORK on the New Ohio River boulevard is reported to be six months ahead of schedule and the new roadway will be completed by Christmas of 1930, according to the contractors. Dwellings have been wrecked or moved at Verner Run, North Side; Bellevue and Emsworth in preparation for grading. Work on nine bridges along the line is approximately half completed. Plans for the new McKees Rocks bridge over the Ohio River, connecting with the new boulevard near Termon avenue, are well under way.

MANY of the Pittsburgh suburban districts outside the city have had big years in construction and real estate activity. West View and Ross Township have been very active. The North Hills district has been much helped by the construction of the new Perry highway, a wide boulevard for the northern traffic. In the South Hills, Mt. Lebanon is marking up a new building record. Most of the established Mt. Lebanon real estate men have had unusually big years.

BETTER salesmanship is considered the one key which, under present conditions, will open the door to an improved real estate market. Better selling in this case does not mean the "high pressure" variety. There has been plenty of that in the real estate business, usually fatal results in the long run. "High pressure" sales do not build good will, a great asset in any business. Complete information on property and an honest effort to render service will make many more deals over a period of years.

MANY brokers consider the deals which they make as their best form of advertising. A customer, well pleased with a bargain, will boast about it to his friends and if the broker has done a good job he will get credit for it. Many a run of sales has originated from one well-handled transaction. Ofter it requires years to gain a reputation for clean-cut dealing, but once acquired it brings business to its owner from many unexpected sources.

Four New Dwellings For Squirrel Hill

James McCafferty has requested a permit to build four brick dwellings and four garages at 6523-25 Rosemoor street, Squirrel Hill, at a total cost of $18,000. The ground was purchased from E. B. Hulley.

New Jersey Realty Board Joins Forces With Owners' Group

The Real Estate Board of Oranges and Maplewood, N. J., is the first member board of the National Association of Real Estate Boards to affiliate 100 per cent its associate members with the national association's property owners division.

Reports from the Oranges and Maplewood organization indicate that more than 125 property owners will be brought into this new division of the national Association, which was established to enable property owners, for the first time, to speak as a body and to take action in regard to legislative proposals of importance to real estate, and, through membership in local real estate boards, to work with the realtor in securing a more equitable distribution of the tax burden.

Property owners' divisions within local real estate boards were recommended by the association to its constituent boards at its latest mid-winter meeting, and at the next following meeting of the association's board of directors, organization of the property owners' division within the national association was completed. Albert W. Swayne, Chicago, is chairman of the division.

Realtor Committee Ready to Aid City

A committee to report on the cost of operation of the City-County Building and the rates of rental for the stalls in the Diamond Market has been appointed by J. W. Cree, Jr., president of the Pittsburgh Real Estate Board. The members are J. W. Bumford, chairman; Charles F. Chubb, R. L. McKallip, A. C. Vogeley, John L. Walsh and William C. Ziegler.

House Bids Taken In Heberton Avenue

Mrs. Mary L. Lewis is taking bids for the construction of two brick houses with garages attached at Heberton avenue and Jackson street, East End.

Saturday Danger Period for Worker

Saturday is the most dangerous day for the workmen, according to findings of a survey in New York reported by The American Architect. On construction jobs it was found that more men were injured on Saturday morning than any other half day. The explanation advanced is that the men are tired and anxious to get away for the week-end, hence their minds do not focus as clearly on their jobs as during other days.

REALTORS PLAN TAX DISCUSSION

The present situation of real estate in the national economic structure will be one of the central topics on the program for the annual mid-winter meeting of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, to be held in Phoenix, Ariz., January 23 to 25.

"A Nation Wide Tax Policy for Real Estate" is the subject of an address to be given by Simon E. Leland, associate professor of economics at the University of Chicago and tax consultant for the National Association of Real Estate Boards. Mr. Leland's address, which is scheduled for the second general convention session, to be held Friday, January 24, will take up the present tax problems of particular importance to real estate.

Harry H. Culver, of Culver City and Los Angeles, president of the association, will review the work of the association during 1929.

BEAVER REALTY BOARDS CONFER

The newly formed Beaver County Real Estate Board held a real estate appraisal conference at the Penn-Beaver Hotel in Rochester, Pa., Saturday. The speakers at this conference were Dr. Arthur J. Mertzke, director of education and research of the National Association of Real Estate Boards and Fred M. Babcock, of Chicago, author of books on appraisals.

The meeting was well attended by members of the new board as well as realtors from Pittsburgh and North Boroughs. Chester A. Lewis, of Beaver Falls, is the president of the Beaver County Real Estate Board and O. H. Locke, of Monaca, is secretary.

This conference was one of a series which have been held in different parts of the country and which are sponsored by the National Association of Real Estate Boards. Members of the Pittsburgh Real Estate Board present were J. W. Cree, Jr., L. T. Stevenson, R. T. Mackintosh and J. Roland Brady.

PLANNERS SEE U. S. BUILDINGS LOSING BEAUTY

Architects' Institute Starts Campaign of Education To Improve Construction.

A campaign of public education in "good architecture and good environment" has been started by the American Institute of Architects, with the purpose of eliminating "the careless ugliness" of the nation's cities.

American cities are "90 per cent ugly," and the result is enormous waste and depreciation, according to Charles E. Cheney, of Palos Verdes Estates, Cal., chairman of the institute's city and regional planning committee, which is striving to stimulate an awakening in behalf of better architecture.

"The seriousness of the situation lies, however, in the fact that the percentage of new buildings, really esthetically good, is not increasing," Mr. Cheney says. "In some cities it is even decreasing. The building inspectors tell us they are getting fewer plans today than formerly by men trained to produce good design."

Ceremonies Mark Opening Of New Realty Exchange

The New York Real Estate Securities Exchange, the first market of its kind in the world, was formally opened for trading last week. Ceremonies attended by many men prominent in finance were held on the floor of the exchange.

A message from the White House was read expressing President Hoover's gratification that the exchange had decided to go ahead with its opening plans in furtherance of the President's efforts to stimulate business. Many other congratulatory messages were read including those from Andrew W. Mellon, secretary of the Treasury; Ogden L. Mills, under secretary of the Treasury; Joseph V. McKee, president of the New York City Board of Aldermen, and E. H. H. Simmons, president of the New York Stock Exchange.

Patterned in general on the New York Stock Exchange, the new exchange provides the investment and financial world with the first organized market solely for securities based on real estate.

Pledging himself to a spirited administration of the Exchange, President Cyrus C. Miller praised the untiring efforts of those who made the Exchange possible after 20 years' planning.

He said in part:

"In organizing the Exchange, its members have put forth on an uncharted sea, but it is the result of well nigh irresistible forces whose moving principles are well known. Confident of its success, they realize that only through the experience gained from actual operation will the maximum results of their ambition be attained. The day of collective ownership has come for real estate as well as for other industries. In the competition for the public's dollar, real estate cannot afford to do less for the public than other industries do. By the organization of exchanges on which their securities are sold, they give the public liquid securities. Real estate is preparing to do the same."

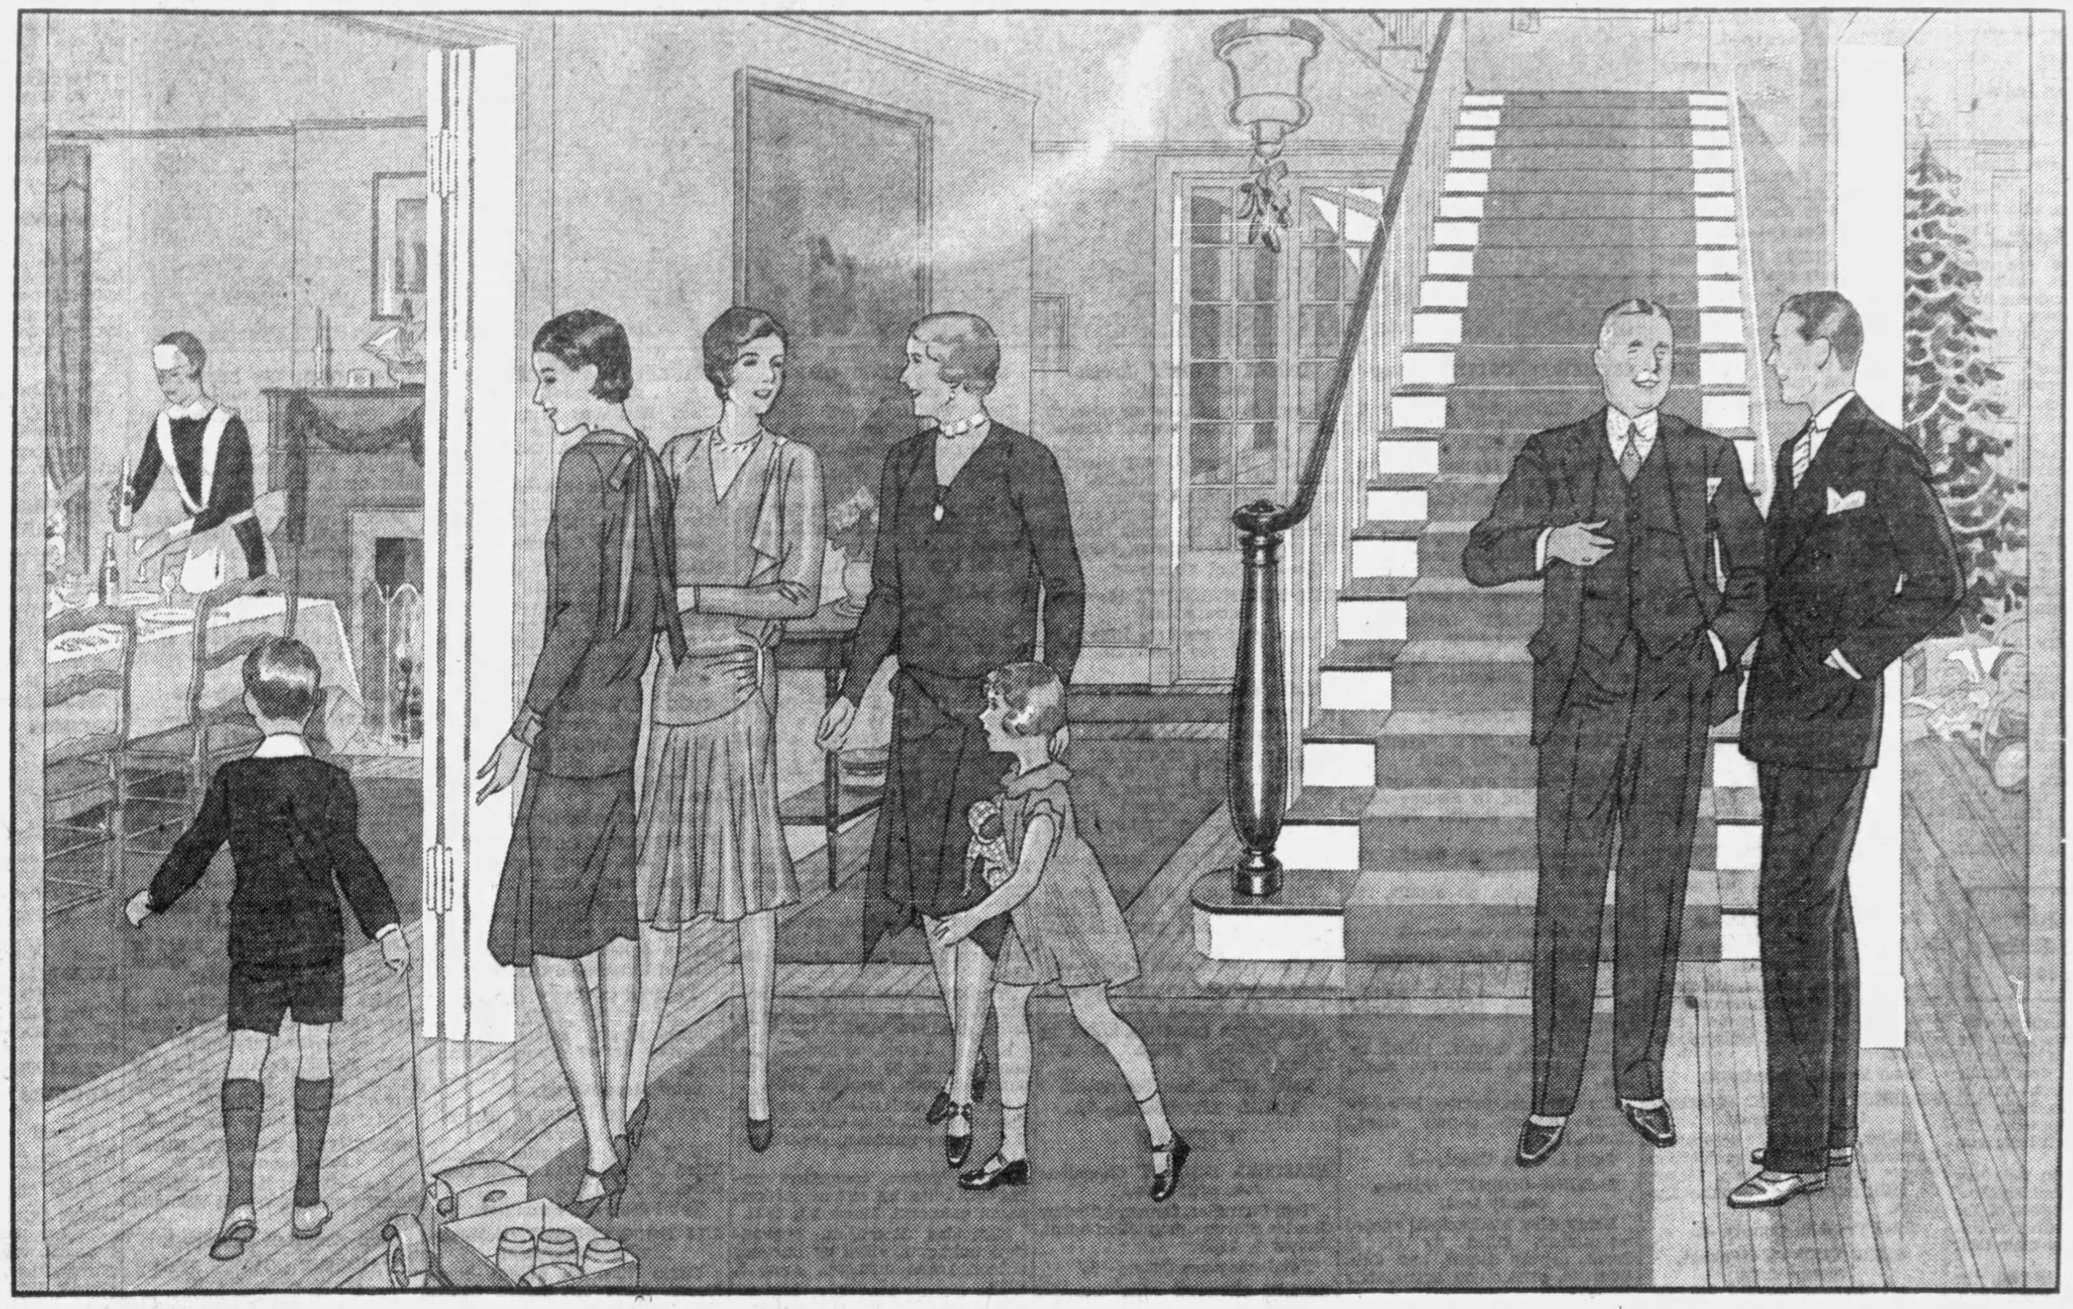
SUN-TELEGRAPH

O glorious day of Feasting and Good Cheer!



HALF-PAST ONE, ANYWHERE, CHRISTMAS DAY

CHRISTMAS beneath a winter's sky . . . Christmas where beats a tropic sun . . . on land . . . at sea . . . any place in this world so wide . . . any place, but always Christmas! And in countless homes throughout this country and Canada . . . with the turkey . . . or afterwards as healths are given . . . you'll find "Canada Dry," the Champagne of Ginger Ales.

When "Canada Dry" lends its marvelous flavor to the day—

Refreshing as a brisk sleigh ride over the snowy hills . . . keen as the winter wind whipping across your face . . . mellow as the greetings of old friends . . . such is the quality of this fine old ginger ale. Because of its wonderful flavor "Canada Dry" has won the approving nod of connoisseurs. Because of its high quality it is served from one end of this country to the other . . . in famous hotels and clubs . . . on transatlantic liners . . . in the Houses of Parliament at Ottawa.

Purest ingredients contribute to its distinction and prestige

But all these things are so for just one reason—basic excellence. Only the purest ingredients, only the highest quality of Jamaica ginger, are used in this fine old beverage. An exact process of blending and balancing helps produce its distinction. Hourly check-ups prevent variation from carefully determined standards. Daily tests under laboratory methods assure purity. Its delightful and delicate sparkle is achieved by a secret process and enables it to keep its sparkle long after the bottle is opened. So pure is it that leading hospitals serve it and leading physicians prescribe it.

This is "Canada Dry," a better, purer, finer ginger ale; having a marvelous flavor; "dry" as a rare old wine. And this is Christmas, a friendly time, a happy season. The two just go together!

Penalties Are Not Exacted in Prohibition Killings

20 WOMEN, FOUR CHILDREN INCLUDED AMONG VICTIMS

Twenty-Four Boys Under 21 Years of Age Also Dead as Result of 'Shotgun Prohibition'—Only Rarely Is Anyone Punished.

(Copyright, 1929, The Washington Herald)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—Despite the wave of civilized disapproval, the shotguns of prohibition enforcement never have been allowed to cool. Barbarically they have taken their toll of dead—even though death is not the penalty for violating the Eighteenth amendment.

The total now stands—1,360 men, women and children dead as the result of prohibition enforcement.

Final List
Facts Submitted as Indisputable Evidence

Today the Washington Herald is releasing through the Hearst newspapers the fourth and final list in this astonishing roll. The names, the dates and the places of prohibition killings are submitted as indisputable evidence. Its extensive survey reaching into every state, county, hamlet and backwoods still, it has included only the authenticated killings. The survey takes no note of the countless victims of racketeering operations, high-jacking, drink-crazed citizens and drunken drivers. The cases shown are those in which sworn officers of the law or their agents have participated.

The reader, looking over this list, will be astounded to find that dry slayers have failed to respect non-combatants. Twenty women and four little children and 24 boys under 21 years of age are among the 1,360 victims. The bootlegger takes his chance. The non-combatant never had a chance. Yet these dry slayings continue.

Instances in which anyone pays a penalty for these killings are rare. And the close observer, who has been following this list, will be forced to remark over the lack or incompleteness, in many cases, of official record of these killings. Those who made this survey reported back that they were thwarted at every turn in getting a complete record by this lack.

South Leads
Texas With 114 Killings Leads States

A check of the complete casualty list also discloses that the quick-trigger odds have been seven to three in favor of the legally armed officers of the law—that of every 10 persons who have met death in encounters between officers and civilians, seven have been civilians.

And it is amazing to note how many were killed "accidentally."

The names of ministers of the Gospel will also be found on this list—holding hot guns over their fallen victims.

Today's list reports on the states of Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Vermont, Virginia, West Virginia, Washington, Wisconsin and Wyoming.

A survey of the total killings in all the states of the union shows the south more lawless than any other part of the country. Texas, the largest state, leads with 114 killings, but Georgia, far smaller, has had 105. Kentucky and Virginia are not far behind.

The appalling score of these killings cannot be told by totals, alone, however. The ordinary items in the list of the 1,360 victims must be studied.

The official reports and records from which the list has been compiled are on file in the offices of The Washington Herald and are open to the inspection of any interested organization or persons who may wish to verify their authenticity and accuracy.

The fourth instalment of names of prohibition victims follows:

PENNA. SCHOOL GROUP TO MEET AT NEW CASTLE

Dr. W. M. Davidson, Pittsburgh, to Make Address At Educational Convention

Many Pittsburgh teachers are preparing to attend the annual convention of the Pennsylvania State Educational Association at New Castle, Thursday and Friday.

At the convention, they anticipate hearing Dr. William M. Davidson, Pittsburgh superintendent of schools, tell of his study in European educational centers last summer. Dr. Davidson's talk will be on the "New Educational Renaissance in Europe."

He will include a report of the International Educational Conference, which met at Geneva during the summer, and a discussion of his contact with schools in England, France and Germany during the early fall, of various summer school sessions which he visited.

Dr. Davidson's talk will probably be the closing address of the meeting, Friday afternoon. He says that he will attempt to formulate the new educational spirit which is felt throughout Europe.

Other speakers on the program are: C. R. Foster, president of the association and of the State Teachers' College, Indiana; Frances Harvey Green, headmaster, Pennington School for Boys, Pennington, N. J.; Charles H. Judd, director, School of Education, University of Chicago; L. A. Pechstein, dean of the College of Education, University of Cincinnati; Dr. John A. H. Keith, superintendent of public instruction, Harrisburg, and Louis Alexander Mercier, of Harvard University.

Delegates to the convention will discuss a number of association policies. Modification of the constitution is regarded as important on the program. Group insurance, the Lloyd Mifflin Memorial Home for Teachers, and an allowance to teachers unable to benefit from the state retirement act will be considered.

Ohio Students, Co-Eds' Curfew Hour Now 1 A.M.

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 21. MEN will be allowed to call upon co-eds living in houses and dormitories under university supervision until 1 a. m. on Friday and Saturday nights, as the result of recent action by the women's self-government association at Ohio State University.

With the adoption of this new provision, the university now has, in the opinion of Dean Esther Allen Gaw, one of the most liberal sets of rules governing women students of any college or university in the United States.

OHIO AIDS MANY TO FIND JOBS

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 21.—(AP)—More than 5,000 men applied to the 13 state-city employment offices in Ohio cities asking for farm work during the first 11 months of this year, George F. Miles, chief of the state division of labor statistics, announced today.

A total of 203,239 persons were placed during that period by the agencies, of which number 73,586 were women, Miles says. As usual, the number of applicants far exceeded the number placed. Applicants for work numbered 691,683, including 211,987 women.

A total of 12,915 were placed in jobs during November, the records show. This is a slight decrease from a year ago when 14,699 were given work. It also is a decrease from October, when 18,281 were placed, Miles states.

Institute of Art To Be Dedicated

DAYTON, O., Dec. 21.—(AP.)—Plans are about complete for the dedication January 7 of the new Dayton Art Institute Building. Mr. Taft is the creator of some of the finest groups of statuary in America, among them "The Fountain of Time," at the western end of the Chicago Midway.

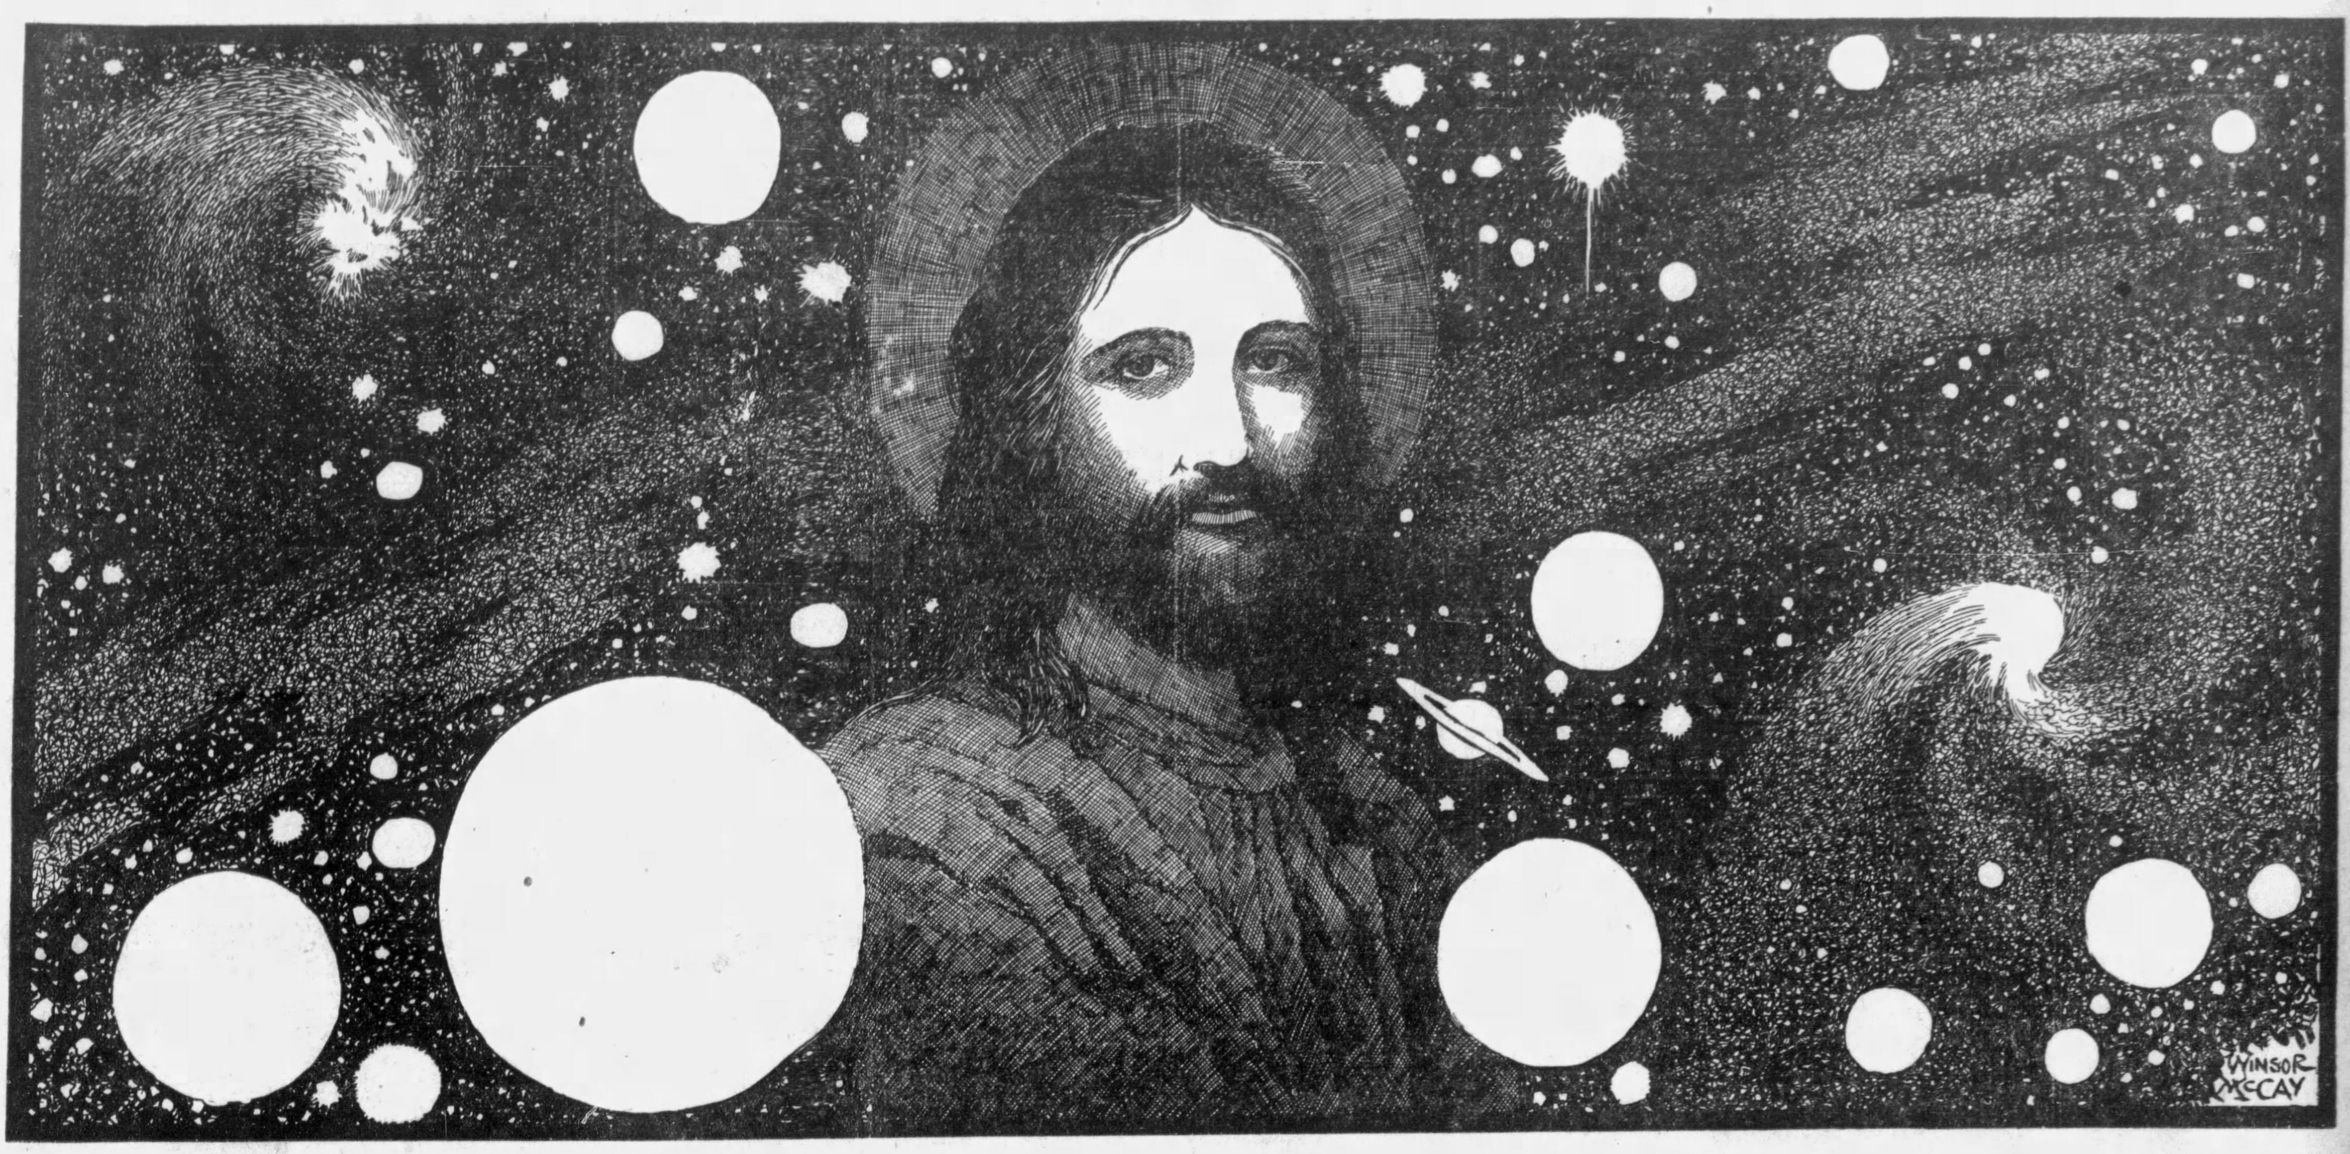
THE BEAUTIFUL FACE OF CHRIST

(Copyright, 1929)



"For I know that my redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand the latter day upon the earth;

"And though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God;

"Whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold, and not another; though my reins be consumed within me; Job 19: 25:26:27."

Christ's face, most beautiful in all the history of men and of angels, shines for all eternity through infinite space. It lights the path of the weary and the discouraged.

Divine mercy in that face gives comfort to the broken-hearted, protection to the weak and poor, and TO ALL HUMANITY.

Suns and planets roll in their courses. The centuries go by, as the thousands and millions of centuries will go by.

Nineteen hundred years have passed since the divine smile of Jesus was last seen upon this earth.

But it will never fade.

It is the inspiration of human goodness, the comfort of the unfortunate, and especially of the women and children.

Christmas is a holy day reminding us of that birth long ago, the greatest good fortune of the human race.

THIS is a day of happiness for the young, a day of deep gratitude and thanksgiving for those that are older.

Christ supplies the light of hope to the human race, to the lowly and the ignorant, and to the wisest man.

For whatever may be the ultimate truths back of this universe, and the final destination of men, we know that there is one truth, one Power, KINDNESS, and that power is made real for us in the life, teachings and character of Jesus Christ.

As men through their telescopes look farther and farther into space, MILLIONS of light years, beyond our corner of the universe, awe and fear overcome them.

Our earth is a grain of dust floating in space around the sun. And that sun, a million times as big as our earth, is but a pin prick, a dot of light in the sky, one sun among millions.

There are other universes beyond this, so far away that it would take the power of light, traveling 186,000 miles a second, millions of years to come to us from those distant.

In infinite space our earth is only a small part of one atom, and that atom the solar system.

But kindness, justice and mercy rule throughout eternity of time and the infinity of space.

The beautiful smile, the promises that Christ left to the world comfort millions of men that without those promises, without that inspiration would feel lost, hopeless and afraid in the overwhelming vastness of creation.

A map of the sky reveals millions of suns, endless millions of planets, and "island universes" beyond our universe of 100,000,000 suns.

Men frightened by teachings of science that their feeble minds can hardly grasp, ask "Whither shall we go, what will become of us?"

Christ answers: "In My Father's house are many mansions; if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you."

"And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you into myself, that where I am, there ye may be also.

"And whither I go ye know, and the way ye know."

This life is fearfully complicated for us feeble creatures, torn between duty and desire, ever uncertain as to the paths that we should follow.

The words of Christ leave no doubt.

"This is my commandment. That ye love one another, as I have loved you. Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends."

That which Christ commanded, He Himself obeyed.

The poorest, the most unfortunate, were his brothers.

The woman, taken in sin, about to be stoned by savage men, aroused His deepest compassion. He calmed the sinful mob with words that will shine forever: "He that is without sin among you, let him first cast a stone at her."

"Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends."

Christ laid down HIS life for his friends, for suffering, sinful humanity, considering the weakest, the poorest, the most sinful His brothers and His friends.

Children should know only happiness today. Their fathers and mothers should look beyond the birthday to another day, so soon to follow, when the Holy Child, grown to manhood, walked to His slow, dreadful death on the bare hill called Golgotha, "the skull." Willingly he suffered and died, forgiving those that mocked Him, knowing their weakness, forgiving their cruelty.

This is the celebration of a Holy birthday. It should inspire every man with an intense desire to do his duty, to do as well as he can in the face of imperfections and shortcomings, that which Christ would have him do.

His wishes are not left in doubt, they were plain.

What is man's duty? It is put simply.

Micah, 6:8: "He hath shewed thee, Oh man, what is good; and what doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?"

* * *

It must be remembered that those upon whom Christ looked with the deepest compassion were the poor children and their mothers. Most beautifully he preached to the multitude, holding a little child in His arms as He talked. In all world history there is no more beautiful picture than that.

And solemnly He warned those that might treat children unkindly.

"And whoso shall receive such little child in My name receiveth Me.

"But whoso shall offend one of these little ones which believe in ME, it were better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck, and that he were drowned in the depth of the seas."

This is a day to remember and obey the Divine command, to be kind to children, to help their mothers, sympathize with the unfortunate.

And sympathy should not be merely Mental.

It should be real work, real doing, REAL GIVING.

Men's conception of the universe has changed, as the centuries have passed, and science and the telescope have compelled us to realize our littleness.

In ancient days men believed that the earth stood still, while the sun and all the stars in space whirled around it. Heaven was supposed to be just above our heads, and hell just below our feet.

Man was the only important thing in the universe. This little earth was the center of everything. The sun, moon, and all the stars were made to give us light.

That old theory has changed, and with it man's opinion of his own importance. It has become known that the earth is one little grain of sand, turning on its axis, flying around the sun once every year.

Our sun is one among hundreds of millions. Distances are so great that no imagination can grapple with them. A million "light years," the frightful distance that light can go in a million years, seems to make Heaven far away.

But through all the distance and all space, justice rules.

We are not as important as we thought we were once.

But justice, kindness, through the Divine law, works everywhere in the universe so admirably managed.

We live safe on this little earth, safe, and protected.

How can we doubt His infinite goodness, how on this sacred birthday be anything but deeply and humbly grateful to the Power that guides and protects us?

Gratitude is made real only BY WORK.

The sincerity of our gratitude is judged as it should be BY WHAT WE DO, what we do to help the poor, to encourage those that are discouraged, and share our abundance with those that lack.

'Hoover Runs Out of Men to Confer With'—Will

WELL all I know is just what I read in the papers. Football had no more than dropped out till Congress took up playing to a packed galery.

Mr. Hoover has just about finished with his Conferences. He run out of men to confer with, that is men that had anything. He wanted men that he could get in there and make em sign the pledge that they would go back home and spend something, that is if they ever intended to spend anything "to spend it now." And it looks like it is having mighty benefitial results. Its really astonishing the amount of things that are going to be done in the way of improvements and public works. Never did things look brighter for the working man. But none of us want to work.

If Mr. Hoover could have persuaded these big men to divide up, why I believe it would have been a better idea. But if we got to work for the money we are just as bad of as if there was no prosperity.

HENRY FORD raised everybodys salary and tried to shame some of the others into doing the same, but some of those old babies are pretty hard to shame. They offered to help prosperity but they dident want to hardly go to that means to do it.

But anyhow I believe its going to be a good year. It just shows how two men can get at the same results by directly opposite methods. Here was Mr. Coolidge that never delivered a message that he didn't always add a postscript, "Save your money, don't spend, be economical." And here comes Mr. Hoover with, "What's the big idea of having money in the bank? Get it out, blow it in, lets get some action around here, the more you spend the more it gives everybody else to spend thereby crating an active market for everything." And he may be right, and so was Mr. Coolidge right.

You see it was only through Mr. Coolidge having them save some, that they was able to spend some during this time. So that makes a splendid arrangement, have everybody save during one administration, and spend during the next.

SO it looks like Wall Street might have done everybody a favor after all. Course some of them got pretty hard hit. But they would have only spent it in going to Europe anyhow, so this will keep 'em at home and let 'em see California and Florida and OKLAHOMA. You know the Politicians, when Mr. Hoover got to calling in all the business men of the Country to ask them something about the country instead of calling in Politicians, why that was such a radical move that it had never been heard of before.

The idea that a President would call in Henry Ford, Owen D. Young and John D., Jr., instead of calling in Senator Jasbo and Congressman Whiffletree had never before been done. It was all new, and looked mighty radical. But this fellow Hoover is a kind of a queer Duck that way. He can take a bunch of business men and talk to 'em a little while and before he gets through they are eating out of his hand and purring and rubbing all around his legs.

Now, of course, the politician feels hurt that he wasent called in, for while he couldent have given the country any practical relief, he could have passed a bill in Congress, "Demanding Prosperity."

THEN Mr. Mellon comes in with a mighty welcome suggestion. He says we can cut the taxes $160,000,000. Course that many millions is not much when you are used to dealing in billions, but it's a good trade argument. We deal in Billions in expenditure, and millions in curtailment. But Andy is a mighty fine business man and he will do what he can for us.

Mr. Vare, of Pennsylvania, wanted to get his regular elected seat in the Senate a couple of weeks ago, but he only got to stay in there in his seat until the roll was called on his case. They said he was a splendid man, but too free hearted for that organization. That spending that much money on his election was not against the law, but set a bad precedent, and that as each of them was coming up for re-election in the near future, they didn't feel that they wanted to squander that much money for their seat, as they had been in and knew what it was worth, and he hadent, that naturally he might overestimate the value of it.

HE is going back to Philadelphia and at the next election he will be returned with no expenditure at all. In fact, the people of Pennsylvania will no doubt make up a purse and present it to him, so then it will be amusing to see what happens.

Then to clap the climax, Mr. Grundy was appointed in his place. Well taking out Vare and sending in Grundy is the same as being sorry for a Bull Fighter and taking the bull out, and replacing it with a Mountain Lion. But it's going to be a great year and we will have plenty of Prosperity, and plenty of excitement. Course it may not reach everybody, the Prosperity. But the excitement will, so we will all get a fifty per cent break anyway, so what more can we ask?

Same Results by Opposite Methods

Yes, Turpin Really Has Eye Trouble

MANY delicate readers have asked me if Ben Turpin is just as cross-eyed off the screen as he is on.

The answer is twice.

He lives in three beautiful houses in Beverly Hills and always takes a friend along to show Ben where he lives.

His favorite home is the one in the middle. He uses the other two for signposts.

When you dine with Ben in a cafeteria, you have to order what he likes. After he is through your dinner, it is your turn to whack away at Ben's platter.

Some tourists get indignant when Ben takes a napkin and wipes off their chins.

It led to quite a struggle one evening and it became complicated when we observed that the Judge was also banjo-eyed.

The Judge looked at me, pointed to Ben and said to the jury:

"Did you lather your chin with this man's charlotte russe?"

THE tipstaff, equipped with laughing bifocals, struck a match on the strict attorney's pants, lighted the end of his nose and remarked:

"Not guilty, if possible."

The Judge cracked the policeman over the head with an emergency gavel, and said to an innocent bystander:

"I wasn't talking to you."

Then we went home, put the car in the parlor and strolled into the garage for a piano recital.

Amid the comforts and luxuries of a detour, Ben told us the story of his marriage:

"I was fumbling in the minister's vest pocket for the ring, when he asked the best man if I took the bride for my lawful wedded husband.

"I WAS puzzled as I hadn't taken her away from any lawful wedded husband and the minister blushed when I put the ring on his finger instead of a two-dollar fee.

"Finally, when my future mother-in-law yelled, 'I do,' we decided to make the marriage a blindfolded test because there was a better chance of getting the right cigaret.

"The minister then joined us in awful wedlock and we started on our honeymoon in opposite directions."

It is very exciting to go hunting with Ben and his gutta percha rifle. He shoots loose-leaf grapefruit at grizzly bears and the last time he aimed at a moose he knocked his own hat off the rack.

We all wore red coats because patches look better on pants.

Ben saw a big grizzly bear whose eyes were also Mutt and Jeff dots on a bias.

Ben gave him the royal salute of 21 hammerless slugs and tore the raccoon coats off a collegiate huddle.

The bear started to chase Ben who ran away from him into his arms.

FORTUNATELY, the grizz thought it was two other fellows, and we worked out the famous mathematical problem that the shortest distance between two points depends on your legs.

We managed to get home and Ben knocked on his front door and broke a couple of windows.

Ben was all in from winning the frightened marathon and said

"Let's have a drink. I'll pour it."

So we didn't have it.

There was a beautiful tiger skin on the floor where Ben had hung it on the wall.

We said, "Ben, did you shoot that tiger yourself?"

Ben said, "Is that what it is? I thought I was fishing."

"This business of being cross-eyed is embarrassing at times," Ben said. "I was at the baseball game last summer, when the director yelled 'Camera.' I got up for the seventh inning stretch, slipped on a cake of soap and fell out of the bathtub."

Between Us Girls —By LLOYD MAYER

"MY dear, SOME times I start THINKing and I get SIMply TERrified!" remarked Sandie to Duncan Dimwit, who had dropped in for tea one afternoon with a dull thud.

"Yeah?" said Duncan, who had a swell fund of repartee.

"I mean," pursued Sandie, "the LIFE I lead is so kind of EMPty and whatnot—you know the type. HONestly, my dear, it VANquishes me, no less, because I ACtually don't PROVE a THING, do you know what I mean?"

"I get you."

"I think you're one of the FEW people who DOES, my dear, which is why I aDORE to TALK to you, Duncan, because I mean hardly ANYbody ever underSTANDS what you're getting AT when you start trying to TALK to them about LIFE or something—isn't it TRUE?"

"Yeah—you bet!"

Parties Are Now On the Pan

"WELL, my dear, the whole point IS I think EV'rybody's lost their sense of VALues, sort of, because f'r instance I go TEARing MADly round to PARties which BORE me to SOBS, my dear, and yet I'd be SIMply LIVid if I weren't inVIted to them—can you BEAR it? I mean abs'lutely the ONly reason I GO is because I'm afraid I'll MISS something if I don't!"

"Sure!" retorted Duncan, who was a man of few words.

"But it's all so perfectly FUtile, this inANE social STEPping hither and YON all the entire time, my dear!" continued Sandie appealingly. "GOSH, if I could ONLY get aWAY from it all, sort of and REALly DO something worth WHILE, sort of, do you know what I mean?"

"Yeah—you bet," murmured Duncan. "Say, I wonder what's on the radio."

"OH, my DEAR, wait just a SEC before you turn it ON!" Sandie begged him. "I mean I'm so worked UP over this tremendous disCUSsion we're having at this point that I can't COPE with the idea of having anything interRUPT, do you know what I mean?"

"Oh, sure — you bet!" said Duncan politely, returning to his seat on the sofa beside her.

"Of course I'm asSUMing YOU'RE as int'rested as I am in the subject," went on Sandie fluently. "Are you rREALly, Duncan?"

"Oh, yes!" he assured her.

"Well, my dear, you know LOADS of youths would be WHIPT down to a NUB if I brought it up, because I mean they simply WOULDn't underSTAND—you know the type!"

"Oh, sure—you said it!"

"Most youths simply SLAY me, ANYways, they're so DULL and all," said Sandie.

"I mean they never have a THING to SAY for themselves!"

"Yeah—I guess you're right!"

"WELL, my dear, I get SIMPLY LIVID trying VAINLY to enterTAIN youths like that, because I mean there's abs'lutely NOTHing they can TALK about that's got any SENSE to it except just a lot of POISonous GOSsip or something!"

"Yeah—that's a fact, I guess," agreed Duncan. "Darn few fellers have any conversation worth listening to."

"My dear, they talk about GIRLS gossiping, but the average YOUTH nowadays is TWICE as much of a gossip as any GIRL, don't you think?"

"Yeah—I guess that's so all right."

"GOSH, my dear, I get so BORED I could ACtually go mad when some PIPsqueak like that barges round to CALL on me and just sits HEAVily exuding GOSsip from every PORE—you know the type."

* * *

"I MEAN there's simply no POINT in trying to carry on an inTELligent converSAtion like WE're having, with anybody like THAT, my dear, because they simply haven't the BRAIN to COPE with it, do you know what I mean?"

"Yeah—you said it. Say, are you going to Natika Frivvel's brawl?"

"My dear, of COURSE — I wouuldn't miss it for ANYthing What made you ASK?"

"Oh, I just thought maybe you weren't on account of what you said about being sort of fed up on parties."

"YOU'RE going, aren't you?" inquired Sandie.

"Oh, I dunno. I'm getting sort of bored with the social racket!"

"DUNcan, my dear, you aMAZE me, no less! I couldn't BEAR it if you missed the best party of the YEAR, my dear"

"Well, I'm not so keen on going."

* * *

"MY DEAR, I've never HEARD of anything so riDIC! It's going to be an ABs'lute WOW!"

"Well, I guess MY staying away won't interfere," observed Duncan morosely.

"My dear, you've simply GOT to go or my evening will be comPLETEly RUIned!" Sandie urged him.

"But you said yourself," objected Duncan, "that there wasn't anything in this social racket. It's just a waste of time, like you said."

"Do you REALly feel that way, Duncan? GOSH, my dear, I think that's SIMPly SWISS, because it's exACTly the way I feel mySELF only I think awfully FEW people DO realize how terribly futile all this frantic SOcial whirling ACtually IS!"

"Yeah, they've lost their sense of values, I guess."

"SAY, why don't we both stay away from the Frivvel's party?" suggested Duncan audaciously.

"What on earth FOR, my dear? It's ALways the duck's QUACK, that party."

"Yeah, but you said yourself we both feel the same way about parties—they don't mean a thing."

"Of COURSE, my dear," retorted Sandie blithely, "but the POINT is as long as we REALize they don't mean anything we might JUST as well go and enJOY ourselves."

The Evergreen Jewel Case

Sleuth Obtains The Dope on Black Eye

THE great Evergreen jewel case never got all the attention it deserved from the newspapers, and, in fact, it got none whatever, but it was one of my notable cases with the Eagle Orb Agency.

Old Eagle Orb himself, chief of the agency, sent me to an address on Park avenue one day to interview a Mrs. Joshua Cleghorn, who had telephoned the agency that she had a case of the greatest importance, and to send a most trustworthy man, a description I fill to a T.

Mrs. Cleghorn lived in a large, fine apartment house and proved to be a slightly stout lady of perhaps 250 pounds net, and with a number of chins, and she impressed me as a woman of great firmness. She proceeded to a statement of her case without loss of time.

It appeared from what Mrs. Cleghorn said that her husband, Mr. Joshua Cleghorn, was the well-known Wall street broker of that name, and the case concerned Mr. Cleghorn. As I gathered from Mrs. Cleghorn's recital her husband had come home a few nights before with a big shiner, or black eye, and he had stated to Mrs. Cleghorn that he had sustained this black eye in a collision with an open door.

"And I do not believe it," said Mrs. Cleghorn to me.

"YOU mean you think your husband's statement a misrepresentation of facts?" I asked.

"I mean I think it is a doggone lie," replied Mrs. Cleghorn briefly.

Now, then, Mrs. Cleghorn wished me to investigate thoroughly and ascertain where and how her husband got the black eye and also why, because she feared he was being beset by sinister enemies who might do him further violence and that he was withholding the truth from her to save her worry. However, Mrs. Cleghorn could not think of more than about a hundred of her husband's enemies, off hand, but promised to send me a complete list on the morrow, when she could get a list of his customers from his office.

In beginning my investigation, of course, I paid no attention to Mr. Cleghorn's story of the open door. I have made a long series of experiments on doors, and I am convinced that there is no portion of a door that can get in the human eye, especially an open door.

So, disregarding the door, I waited until midnight and then proceeded to the night club, known as the Beautiful Owl, on Broadway, near Forty-ninth street, where I found Mr. Cleghorn supping with Miss Eunice Evergreen, of Mr. George White's Scandals. I knew Mr. Cleghorn would be there with Miss Evergreen, because I had seen Mr. Cleghorn there with Miss Evergreen every night for months.

MR. CLEGHORN proved to be a short, stout man, with a bald head and a rosy countenance, and I will not attempt to describe Miss Evergreen, because she really baffles description. Suffice to say she was blonde, a head taller than Mr. Cleghorn and as cool looking as a cold chisel.

I secured the table next to the couple, and when they went out on the floor to dance. I quickly investigated a handbag that Miss Evergreen left behind her on the table, and found that it contained, as I suspected, a solid gold vanity case, a metal lip stick container, several dollars in dimes, quarters and half dollars, and a lot of other odds and ends, all contributing to a gross weight of perhaps a pound.

While no one was observing me, I took this hand bag with its contents wadded up inside, and fitted it to my eye, finding that it exactly filled the cavity of the face containing the human orb. I replaced the hand bag on the table before Mr. Cleghorn and Miss Evergreen returned. As they resumed their seats, I stepped out to the entrance and had Albert, the head waiter, call Miss Evergreen out and whisper to her that Mr. Bandolin was on the telephone, because I knew that this was the name of Miss Evergreen's boy friend, and that she would answer a call from him any time, and make it very snappy.

AS Miss Evergreen hurried out to the 'phone booth in great agitation I stepped forward and confronted her, demanding:

"Miss Evergreen, why did you strike Mr. Cleghorn in the eye with your handbag loaded with deadly missiles?"

"How do you know it was my hand bag I hit him with?" she inquired, curiously. "There was no one there but us."

"Because it fits my eye," I replied, "although I see no necessity for going into details as regards to the methods of detective work. Why did you strike him, Miss Evergreen? Come, come, now!"

"Well," she said, "if a man gave you a lot of jewelry which he said was worth $50,000, and you got hooked in the stock market and went to hock the jewelry to protect your margin, and found the jewelry was phoney, and you got wiped out in the market, what would you do?"

"Now, now! Miss Evergreen," I said, "Do not ask me to commit myself, but send that old reprobate out here. I wish to interview him."

WHEN Mr. Cleghorn appeared she had evidently advised him of what was afoot, and he was so abject looking that I felt sorry for him.

"I am Operative T-99, of the Eagle Orb Agency," I told him, "and I have been engaged by your wife to find out how you got that black eye. For shame, Mr. Cleghorn, telling your helpmeet that you got it from an open door. For shame! A man like you ought to be able to think up a better story with one hand tied behind him."

"I was desperate," quavered Mr. Cleghorn.

"But now she will know the truth," I said severely.

"You saw my wife in person?" he asked. "In the flesh?"

"In the flesh," I said.

"And you are going to tell her just the same?' he whimpered. "After seeing her? Put yourself in my place, sir."

Well, after all I am not a bloodthirsty man, and so in the end I merely reported to Mrs. Cleghorn that her husband's story of the open door was true, and that the door happened to have an exceptionally high knob, and I sent the true details of the Evergreen jewel case to old Chief Eagle Orb for his files.

"WHY," writes the president of a mid-west bank, "do New York writers try eternally to glorify Broadway? It has nothing to offer that may not be found on any second-class street in any first-class city. It is cheap, shoddy and at all times vulgar. New York has so many pleasant and marvelous streets and avenues that are actually overshadowed in print by the myth of Broadway."

I have frequently expressed a similar opinion, sir.

WE hope there is no significance in the fact 500 new benches have been ordered for the public parks in New York.

THE only act that will drew me to vaudeville these days is that of the Weaver Brothers and Elviry. Vaudeville seems in an almost hopeless state of constant repetition.

THERE is, for instance, one act that I have been seeing for the past 20 years. There is not a single change in lines, business or costume. The marvel to most of us is how the players themselves stand the monotony.

THE Hoboken debacle continues. Even Saturday night crowds are thinning. The Yorkville beer gardens have also met a like fate. The needled beer was too much for the most courageous drinkers.

NEW YORK'S standards of fashions are so often judged by the people in cafes, theaters and at supper clubs. As a matter of fact the most aristocratic looking folk and certainl the best dressed will be seen on Sunday morning on their way to church which would be a surprise to Broadway, if it ever got up that early.

DOG lovers will like this letter, so I pass it on: "I am one of the pathetic lambs, shorn in Wall street. When my life savings evaporated with a turn of the clock I found that the only living thing whose attitude and loyalty toward me had not changed was my dog. For three days, as though sensing my grief, he would not leave my side, day or night."

THE BOOK SHELF by GEORGE SEIBEL

Authors of Nowadays Still Writing Essays

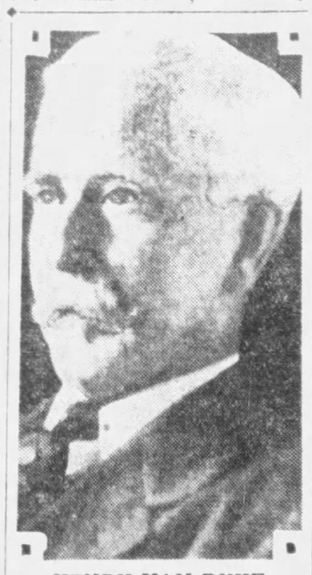
THE essay is a form of literature that has had many followers and a peculiar charm. Men as diverse as Bacon and Lamb, Montaigne and Addison, have put their best wine into this bottle. In our age it has poured forth the sparkle and fire of Holmes and Stevenson, Lucas and Crothers.

Two beautiful volumes by a Pittsburgh writer have just come from the Roycroft shops at East Aurora. The writer is George W. Gerwig, and his larger volume deals with "Shakespeare's Ideals of Womanhood." It is a subject that Heine and Mrs. Jameson have dealt with, but one that cannot easily be drained dry. Dr. Gerwig introduces us anew to Juliet and Rosalind, Cordelia and Viola, Beatrice and Portia, Ophelia and Lady Macbeth, Cleopatra and Hermione, Desdemona and Imogen, and the Roman mother, Volumnia.

It is a pleasure to spend a few hours in such gracious company. And it is pleasant to hear that Shakespeare discovered the American girl 300 years before she discovered herself. Dr. Gerwig wades through no deep waters of criticism or psychoanalysis, but he makes us feel that Shakespeare's women are "well worth knowing."

Dr. Gerwig's other volume, "Templed Hills," deals with educational topics. The Teacher is the Priestess in this Temple. There is sentiment and thought in all these brief papers, making them worth while, especially to those who know the man behind the book.

That happens to be the title of another volume, by Henry Van Dyke, whose essays have delighted thousands of readers since "Fisherman's Luck" appeared. "The Man Behind the Book" (published by Scribner) deals with literary personalities, George Meredith, Thomas Hardy, Thornton Wilder, Willa Cather—Shelley, Carlyle, Byron—Poe and Whitman are among those Van Dyke writes about in happy and informative style. He has taken for his guidance the question of Philip to the Ethiopian, "Understandest thou what thou readest?" and his readers will understand better what they may read after his comment.



HENRY VAN DYKE
Author of "The Man Behind the Book."

Another type of essay is found in Meredith Nicholson's "Old Familiar Faces" (published by Bobbs-Merrill), which deals with such questions as the eternal conflict between age and youth, the secret of happiness, the virtues of citizenship and the essence of Americanism. Occasionally a note of defeatism creeps in—"Man is not the master of his fate, but in a very large degree the victim or beneficiary of circumstances over which he has precious little control." Is this Calvinism or Omar Khayyam?

Even more intensely personal is the note of Lady Bell's "Landmarks" (published by Liveright), from which we learn that 22 years ago they called a program a "progger" and an agnostic a "gnogger" in England. Lady Bell laments that whereas "women used to read while their hair was being brushed, they now have no hair to brush." The best thing in the volume is a chapter of Coquelin reminiscences.

Agnes J. Larkcom, who has written "Loneliness and Other Essays" (published by Duckworth), tells us that it is generally believed the word "lonely" was first used by Shakespeare. She sees atavism in modern works of art, a top hat to her is a ponderous absurdity, and she believes 'tis better to tilt at windmills than wallow in enervating comfort. We cry Amen!

Little volumes like William Lyon Phelps' "Memory" and Kathleen Norris' "Mother and Son" (published by Dutton), each treating of some single subject, are like the flotsam upon the tide that fills such reservoirs as "Harper Essays" (published by Harper), in which Henry Seidel Canby has collected some of the best things that have appeared in Harper's Magazine in the past. Howells, James, Burroughs, Twain, Arnold Bennett, Margaret Deland and John Galsworthy are among the names of the essayists in this garner, which shows that the art of Hazlitt and Stevenson is not dead—though it lives and thrives chiefly in the pages of our less popular magazines.

We're All Royal!

David Starr Jordan's "Your Family Tree" (published by Appleton), gives us the comforting assurance that most prominent Americans are descendants of Alfred the Great, or Charlemagne. The development of the individual man depends on two distinct but co-operating factors, Nature and Nurture. Difference of opinion will always exist as to which is more important. "At birth," said Emerson, "the gate of gates is closed." "Heredity carries potentiality, not completed results of education and environment," says Dr. Jordan. Nurture builds on Nature, but cannot create it. An ideal democrat is neither master nor slave, while the autocrat is a sort of social barometer, which rises as the people fall. The conditions most favorable to civilization will foster the survival of the most moral, courageous and virtuous.

The second part of the book takes up the genealogies of kings, presidents, and other noted people. Coming down to America we observe that Abraham Lincoln and George Washington had a common ancestry, descending from Henry I, King of France, and Anne of Russia; Nathaniel Hawthorne belongs to this line also. Calvin Coolidge and William Shakespeare had Charlemagne and Lady Hildegarde as ancestors. The line of Robert Bruce includes James Buchanan, James Monroe, James Polk, and many other men of note. All of which proves that Eugenics is much like Universalism.

Man Behind the Dime

"John D," by John K. Winkler (published by Vanguard), has a dime imbedded in the cover. The last name of the subject is therefore unnecessary. John D. always had an eye for profits; the first dollar he ever earned came from the cultivation of turkeys, and he keeps a flock to remind him of that early business venture.

He kept an accurate journal of his expenditures. He wrote in 1855: "I note but one piece of extravagance—a pair of fur gloves for $2.50. I ought to have bought mittens."

When the Civil War came, John was 22. He never considered enlisting; his mind was bent on making money and getting his financial feet firmly planted. About this time oil was struck in Pennsylvania, and John was clever enough to realize this as his opportunity. By 1862 he and his partner had cleared a profit of $17,000 each from their commission business. They invested part of this sum in a small refinery.

Then Henry M. Flagler comes on the scene. The story of how control of oil was obtained, how railroads were induced to give rebates, and all the interesting things made up the life of a "man of figures" reads like a fairy tale. Then the book turns to his gift—the "benevolent trust," and tells how he has ladled out the billions.

As John D., Jr., is so closely connected with his father, the book gives interesting data about him also. He is about the only individual billionaire on earth. He seems to have more than a good share of common sense, and his children have been brought up in ignorance of their wealth.

Morrow's Almanack

Thayer Hobson has compiled "Morrow's Almanack and Every-Day Book" (published by Morrow,) with such contributors as James Branch Cabell, Rupert Hughes, Eddie Cantor, Milt Gross and two-score others. There are forecasts, epigrams, and all kinds of delicious nonsense. The General Prophecies for 1930 include events "which might happen as well as those that will happen." Lindbergh will turn down the Evening Graphic's offer for a diary of his first year of married life, and Peggy Joyce's life will at last be touched and brightened by romance. The humor of the volume is well sustained and racy.

THE evidence of Christmas permeates even the seclusion of the reference room at the Carnegie Library where a quietly festive air prevails in the exhibition of the Arundel prints. The reference room annually exhibits these prints which illustrate the Christmastide pageantry from the early Siennese Madonnas culminating in the Feast of the Three Kings which depicts the glory of Lorenzo the Magnificent and his brilliant court as Gozzoli, the great painter, saw them.

In the Du Puy collection of the Carnegie Museum may be found a Sicilian crib with figures carved from wood, but elegantly attired, to represent the Madonna and Child, St. Joseph, and the three kings bearing gifts. In the same collection, an Eighteenth Century figure of the "Christ Child" is ensconed in a baroque crib designed as a golden sea shell, not unlike that upon which Aphrodite customarily appears in paintings.

Penelope Redd.

The International Exhibition of water colors arrived at the Carnegie Institute too late for a review in this column. Peeping at them as they were being unwrapped, one can say with certainty that it will be a likable exhibition. The graceful zest with which the majority of painters approach the medium of water color, makes for a gaiety of technic and usually a corresponding gaiety of subject.

Lee Hankey's Paintings

LEE HANKEY'S work in the graphic arts in no way prepares one for his paintings now on view at the Wunderly Gallery. We have so accustomed ourselves to accepting his genre studies of old men, women and of young peasant mothers with their children.

Distinguished for the past 17 years as a graver-printer in color, and as an etcher, his metier deepened and strengthened during the war to embrace a human concern that augmented his undisputed technical ability.

Now we see him as a painter of the backgrounds from which he has detached his subjects for his prints. Cornwall and Normandy are his chief themes.

It is necessary to adjust oneself to his high-keyed painted color, since there is so much of somber color suggested in his prints. In his "Marshes at Etaples" we see the sky and marshes and distant houses seemingly always to have been. Gentle without being weak, it stimulates the mind to associate the painted setting with the ways of life of the people in his prints.

Not Overstressed

IN "The Feudal Castle" strongly, blondly rising as if rooted in the earth, the peasants' houses are huddled at its foot for protection. In his "St. Ives, Cornwall," it is the land of Tristram's tragedy so does he demodernize the union of earth and sea. The green of the earth ventures to the sea's edge. Like "Etaples," "The Feudal Castle," and the "St. Ives," it states a reconciled nature awaiting man's presence.

Hankey brings people into his church scenes in the same way that the houses are related to the landscapes. He does not overstress the dramatically historical character of his churches, but seems to reaffirm the reason for architecture. He renders architecture indigeneous to the earth as are the trees in the landscape. There is the same union with the people as there is between earth and sea in the St. Ives canvas.

Hankey's art will not interest those who want a modern, striking decoration. It will only appeal to those who either have memories of the places painted, or to those who are interested in a stimulus removed from the vociferous.

Hankey is one of the few painters who make one feel the imminent presence of people in landscape without obtruding human drama upon the eye of the spectator.

ART COMMENT by PENELOPE REDD

Chelsea Ware

The Gillespie gallery exhibits a large collection of Chelsea sculptured figures and Staffordshire cottage pieces destined to beguile layman and collector. Imari and Lowestoft bowls, probably of Oriental origin about the mid-eighteenth century, have also been assembled. The Gillespie gallery has any number of the familiar Chelsea items, but before discussing them it is well to recall the origin of Chelsea. Figures were not made in Europe until the first quarter of the eighteenth century when the hard paste porcelain process was discovered at Meissen near Dresden. The figures first made at Meissen representing harlequin and other actors from the Italian comedy, the four seasons, Apollo and the Muses and cupid or "love in disguise," also became the models for both French and English potters.

The Chelsea factory, founded about 1745, was influenced successively by the Oriental, Meissen and Sevres types. The Chelsea figures were used for elaborate table decorations and were made up into sets including candle sticks, salt cellars, sweet meat trays, beverage equipages and other accessories.

The "bocage," characteristic of the finest Chelsea ware, is seen in a dozen pieces at the Gillespie gallery. The figures are posed against "boskies of May flowers and greeneries. There are other well-known subjects such as the "Harlequin," a baby Apollo, with all the symbols of the muses about him; various figures for the seasons such as Bacchus in a tri-corne hat, the hair dresser and the shoe fitter, the cobbler and the cobbler's wife and others capriciously amusing.

One can well fancy Dr. Johnson when he visited the Chelsea-Derby works in 1777, remarking that he "could have vessels of silver, of the same size, as cheap as what were here made of porcelain."

Cottage Pieces

THE Staffordshire pottery differs from the Chelsea ware in that the factories were devoted to producing decorative objects from humbler homes. The Staffordshire goes on over to Victoria's era and "Uncle Tom's Cabin" days. There are two portraits of Franklin, who was the most frequent portrait subject in porcelain. The Rockingham portrait of Franklin is marked "Washington" in error.

The Staffordshire animals are many. The zebra is exotically modern in appearance. Of course, there is every sort of dog to add to a quaint kennel's collection.

Pewter

THE Kaufmann gallery has on view, a collection of old and modern pewter, the Cinderella of the decorative metal. The small but extensive collection includes old pewter from England and the continent; and modern pewter from the Scandinavian lands.

Pewter lore, like heraldry, is a labyrinth of nomenclature. The drinking vessels and measuring cups are known as tankards, flagons, tappit-hens, chopins, mutchkins and noggins. They are placed not only by the "touches" or pewterer's marks, but by the "thumb piece," the device used in lifting the lid. Thumb pieces are of many types, notably acorns, love-birds, flower buds and shells. The form of decoration is either the old chased, wriggle-work, or reeded edges sometimes carried around the edge of a plate divided into lobes like the indentations on flower-petals.

Pewter, on the continent, as well as in England, reached the apex of its glory about the middle of the seventeenth century; the eighteenth witnessed its decline and during the nineteenth it disappeared even from the chop houses.

Cast in Moulds

PEWTER makers were described as sad-ware men who made heavy articles; hollow-ware men who made flagons and tankards; and triflers, who made spoons, forks, buttons and toys.

"Garnish" described a complete set of a dozen platters, "by good folks bespoken chargers." Porringers or "eared cups," are inevitably associated with pewter. Modern adaptations are numerous for ash trays and incidental receptacles. The modern pewter is both cast in moulds and hammered from a prepared sheet.

In the Kaufmann collection there is a satin finished Swedish drinking cup made from an old model that has a texture more appealing than silver. A fantastic nest of tables from Sweden engraved in traditional wriggle-work tells the story of the Ark. It is an engaging bit of drollery with its snake running down the Ark's ladder, the missing links romping about, and the guppy-like fish swimming in the scalloped sea.

One object in the collection points to the probability of new forms for pewter in a modern pitcher by Hoffmann of Vienna. It projects the modern scale and molds the pewter in such fashion that the pitcher becomes a miniature monument.

The variety of color in pewter from the deepest luminous gray tone to one that suggests moonlight will lend an animated note to any interior.

Italian Furniture

TODAY the independent spirit may rove the world for objects expressive of any period fancied. This idea was well illustrated while browsing about the Colonial Art Furniture the other day, when we discovered a group of about 100 pieces of late Italian Renaissance furniture cheek by jowl with old English and last week's American.

The majority of the examples were secured by Frank Weberman during the past summer from the collection of Baron de Steibel in Florence. The pieces date from 1680 through 1720. Many of them were made in Siena which maintained a lead over Florence in this field.

The very name of certain items, "mobilinios" suggests the way the chests, holding garments, arms and other objects, were carried about, and used as seats also. A cassone, made about 1700, of excellent architechtural quality, was decorated only with the natural geometrical pattern derived from the construction of the chest. It is like one in the Medici Palace in Florence.

A Seventeenth Century Siennese chest has grotesque heads as knobs, while primitive inlay panels the drawer-fronts. The carving of this chest seems to be but slightly adapted in design from the natural growth of the wood.

Generally speaking the wood used is oak or walnut. Occasionally a fruit wood appears as in a deep, golden console table of olive wood. The earlier oak tables show the deriviation of English furniture design.

A late writing desk about 1740 from Northern Italy with a design of urns bearing flowering pomegranates epitomizes the end of the opulent virility of the Renaissance in Italy.

Rich Harvest of Holiday Fiction for Old and Young

Sincerity

John Erskine has gone modern. Gone also is the witty facetiousness of his historical reconstructions. Admitted that they had begun to pall, still they were and still are delicious. "Sincerity" (published by Bobbs-Merrill) is a story of modern, very modern marriage.

When the husband and wife begin being sincere with each other, happiness goes on the rocks. The wife escapes to her career, and her best friend assumes the vacant post amid the smug domestic felicities of the deserted husband's household gods. Ten years pass, the erring one returns, and the substitute gracefully abdicates, by that time quite ready herself for her chance at a career.

Erskine looks at life with a roguish smile, and his drama has infinite capacity for sophisticated relish. "Sincerity" is not a great novel, but it is a distinctly amusing one.

Hudson River Bracketed

Edith Wharton, of course, is always Edith Wharton; but her last few novels, though they have not appreciably detracted from her laurel crown, have added no fresh leaves. "Hudson River Bracketed" (published by Appleton) is undeniably a good book, but we expect something more than merely that from the pen of a writer who much earlier in her career could give us an "Ethan Frome." There are comparatively unknown writers who may lack her skillful technique, yet are giving us novels as good as and often better than "Hudson River Bracketed."

It will settle much argument and conjecture to give the definition of the puzzling title:

"A. J. Downing, the American landscape architect, in his book on Landscape Gardening (published in 1842), divides the architectural styles into the Grecian, Chinese, Gothic, the Tuscan, or Italian villa style, and the Hudson River Bracketed."

The story tells of young Vance Weston, scion of a middle-class Illinois family, who has yearnings to express himself in literature. He visits a backward community a few hours from New York, and is introduced into the library of a closed-up house of the period referred to in the title.

It is his first introduction to real literature. The house and its precious contents make a permanent impression on his later life. It is also in this house that he meets Halo Tarrant, whom he loves, and it is also the inability to understand this house and all it signifies which loses to Laura Lou the love of her husband.

Young Vance's struggles, both financial and mental, in his literary career, are told with the callous realism of one who knows the writing game as a profession from the inside, but the happy ending doesn't seem to fit.

There is a theatrical term one thinks of in pondering Mrs. Wharton's latest novel. It is very "box-office."

In the French Manner

Francis de Miomandre writes what is usually called the typical French novel, a tale of passion with a finale of cynical sophistication. "Orientale" (published by Brentano) is the story of a woman married to a dull and mediocre professor; appalled by the sordid futility of her life, she falls in love with a Chinaman. The almond-eyed prince returns to China, and she drifts into an affair with another Chinaman, only to discover too late that she has been deliberately tricked out of her chance for happiness.

In "Written on Water" (published by Brentano) Miomandre has put forth another novel of serious literary proportions, the story of an adolescent's love for an older and considerably more experienced woman. The young man's inarticulate struggle to attain his desire and his premature disillusionment are told with delicate satirical artistry.

Stories such as Miomandre's are meant for the discriminating, those who find Remy de Gourmont more palatable than Ethel M. Dell.

Gold

Kenneth Perkins treats the gold rush of '49 from a new angle—its effect on the lives of a New England whaling captain and his young daughter—in his new book "Gold" (published by Stokes). The story starts off with a rush, as all good adventure stories should, and from the first page to the last of this glowing yarn of gold and the sea there isn't a dull minute.

The Mississippi Hawk

Oscar J. Friend in "The Mississippi Hawk" (published by McClurg) writes a stirring tale of adventure in 1850 along the Mississippi and Arkansas rivers. A young gentleman of Vicksburg gets into trouble through a reckless and daredevil escapade. He masquerades as the Mississippi Hawk, a gentleman gambler and professional duelist, and finds himself involved in nefarious businesses of the other. Guns roar and knives glisten, the hero is accused of murder, and pursued by the amorous intentions of the murderously jealous Polly Foster, mistress of the real Hawk. But all the villains are brought to justice and true love conquers in the end.

Blair's Attic

Joseph C. Lincoln, aided by his son, Freeman Lincoln, has abandoned the Cape Cod of his earlier novels and gone mystery. "Blair's Attic" (published by Coward-McCann) proves that the new venture has been successful. A treasure-hunt which revolves around the relics of several generations, stored in the attic of the Blair homestead, provides many pages of suspense. The Lincoln characters are particularly human and make the story more substantial than the average thriller.

Mrs. Pilate Writes

Catherine van Dyke's "Letter from Pontius Pilate's Wife" (published by Bobbs-Merrill) is written by Claudia Procula to her friend Fulvia, from an old traditional manuscript found in a monastery at Bruges. Claudia is torn between her affection for Pilate and for the Christ who had healed her son Pilo and made him walk. Pilate chose the path of ambition. Deposed by Herod's cousin and accused before the Roman Senate by false witnesses, he loses his honor, his library, his friends, and dies in sorrow.

Molinoff

A delicately deligl ful love story with the sparkle of rare old sh y is "Molinoff," or "The Count in the Kitchen" (published by Viking). Translated from the French of Maurice Bedel, it is a tidbit for the connoisseur. A Russian nobleman of exquisite manners, refugee in France, finds himself reduced to taking a position as chef in the chateau of a noveau-riche South American. While his master is away Molinoff masquerades as a guest of the chateau, and becomes a social success among the old French aristocrat families. But his master returns, and Molinoff's romance is over. Molinoff is pathetic and lovable, and the story one of infinite charm.

Books for Young People

Rachel Field has assembled a fine collection of "American Folk and Fairy Tales" (published by Scribner)—in which Indian and Negro stories are diversified by such colonial legends as Irving's "Rip Van Winkle" and Hawthorne's "Great Stone Face." The tales are interesting to young folks, but no less interesting to adults who wish to know something of our American mythology. Paul Bunyan and Br'er Rabbit are as essential to the American mentality as Hercules and Diana were to the classical mind. The book, beautifully made, is illustrated by Margaret Freeman.

Eleanor Farjeon uses the interest of children in animals for her story, "The Perfect Zoo" (published by McKay.) The hall is "a perfect zoo" because Betty and Peter and Pat left all their toys—dogs, ducks, rabbits, Teddy Bears, and Nimbo, their blue clown. The adventures of these amiable beasts, told with zest, are made more real by Kate Kruse's alluring color drawings.

Beatrix Potter, author of the "Peter Rabbit" books, now tells in "The Fairy Caravan" (published by McKay) about the town of Marmalade, in Green Ginger Land, where two kinds of guinea-pigs have all sorts of entertaining adventures.

Fifty rhymes in code by George W. Wilson, called "Cryptogram Limericks" (published by Sully), will furnish entertainment for a limerick party on a rainy evening. They look hard, but they're much fun.

"Number Seven Joy Street" (published by Appleton), contains prose and verse by Mabel Marlowe, Eleanor Farjeon, Laurence Housman, Lord Dunsany and other story-tellers. "Princess Dimple" is the story of a king's daughter who is always getting lost. Roy Meldrum tells about Zed, the Royal Cat, and Madeline Nightingale recites the story of the Goblins of St. Paul's. Children who watch for the "Joy Street" books will be delighted with the stories and pictures in this volume.

'1929—A MEMORABLE YEAR'—LLOYD GEORGE

Captain Eaker

'WHO CAN FLY?' FAMOUS PILOT OF 'QUESTION MARK' ANSWERS PUZZLING QUERY

Record-Breaking Army Aviator Outlines the Qualities of Normalcy, Self-Control, Confidence and Quick, Accurate Judgment Needed for Success in Handling a Plane.

By CAPT. IRA C. EAKER,
U. S. Army Air Corps

Pilot of the "Question Mark" on Its Historic Endurance Flight, and of the "Shuttle" on Its Attempt to Set a Cross-Country Endurance Record.

ONE morning last summer my telephone rang. A Washington attorney, whom I will call Smith, wanted to see me. I told him to come along. I was then on a three months' accumulated leave from the Army, and—like many other Air Corps officers—spent my vacation in commercial aviation. Thus I happened to be in charge of a flying field near Washington when Mr. Smith telephoned.

Mr. Smith was nearly six feet tall, well proportioned and about 45 years old. I had never met Mr. Smith, though often heard of him, as he is one of the country's leading patent lawyers. He stated his errand briefly:

"My wife is away for two weeks and I want to learn to fly before she returns."

I had heard of the I-want-to-be-a-pilot-while-I-wait type, but I had never met one of the species before. Mr. Smith evidently guessed my thoughts, because he hastened to explain that he wanted just an elementary knowledge of aviation to be used in connection with his practice.

Moreover, the reason for his hurry was that Mrs. Smith was not air-minded enough to believe that her husband could master the laws of gravity as competently as he had those enacted by Congress.

Steps to Flying
Examination and Licensing Precede Air Lessons

I mention Mr. Smith because his attitude is shared by tens of thousands of men and women—young and not so young—who desire to fly. Some, like Mr. Smith, have an intelligent understanding of the problem, but the vast majority labor under the misconception that all they need to become pilots is a plane, an instructor, a little money and whatever time they can spare.

But let us follow Mr. Smith for just one moment more, because in him is found a large portion of the answer to the question: "Who Can Fly?"

"Have you a student pilot's license?" I inquired.

Mr. Smith did not know what it meant. I informed him that it is a certificate issued by the Department of Commerce through one of its regular medical examiners following tests showing that the applicant has proper heart and lung action, sight, hearing, co-ordination, general good health and average intelligence—is, in short, a normal human being.

A cloud of uncertainty passed over Mr. Smith's face. He wanted to fly, but could he? He believed himself in good health and looked it, but 45 years take their toll.

He was somewhat startled on learning that the first gate on the road to aviation is guarded by a physician, and that one should not take a course in flying as one takes lessons in golf—merely by making an appointment with the Pro.

Early that afternoon Mr. Smith returned, and, with the pride of an ambassador extending his credentials, handed me a student's certificate. The physician had given his O. K. Now it was up to the instructor.

Mr. Smith proved an exceptional pupil—alert, attentive and quick of perception. Ten days later he completed his first solo flight.

The example set by Mr. Smith might easily create the highly erroneous impression that any normal person can learn to fly in two weeks. While he had grasped the first rudiments of how to take a plane off the ground, how to handle it in the air and how to land it, Mr. Smith was far from a pilot, a subject on which he entertained no illusions.

No Such Thing!
There Cannot Be Any 'Pretty Good' Pilots

He had no cross-country training, no ground instruction and no knowledge of the safety valve that lies in acrobatics—for instance, getting a ship out of a spin.

It takes more than two weeks—three months, in fact, to make an ordinary pilot. By "ordinary pilot" I mean not the commercial or military

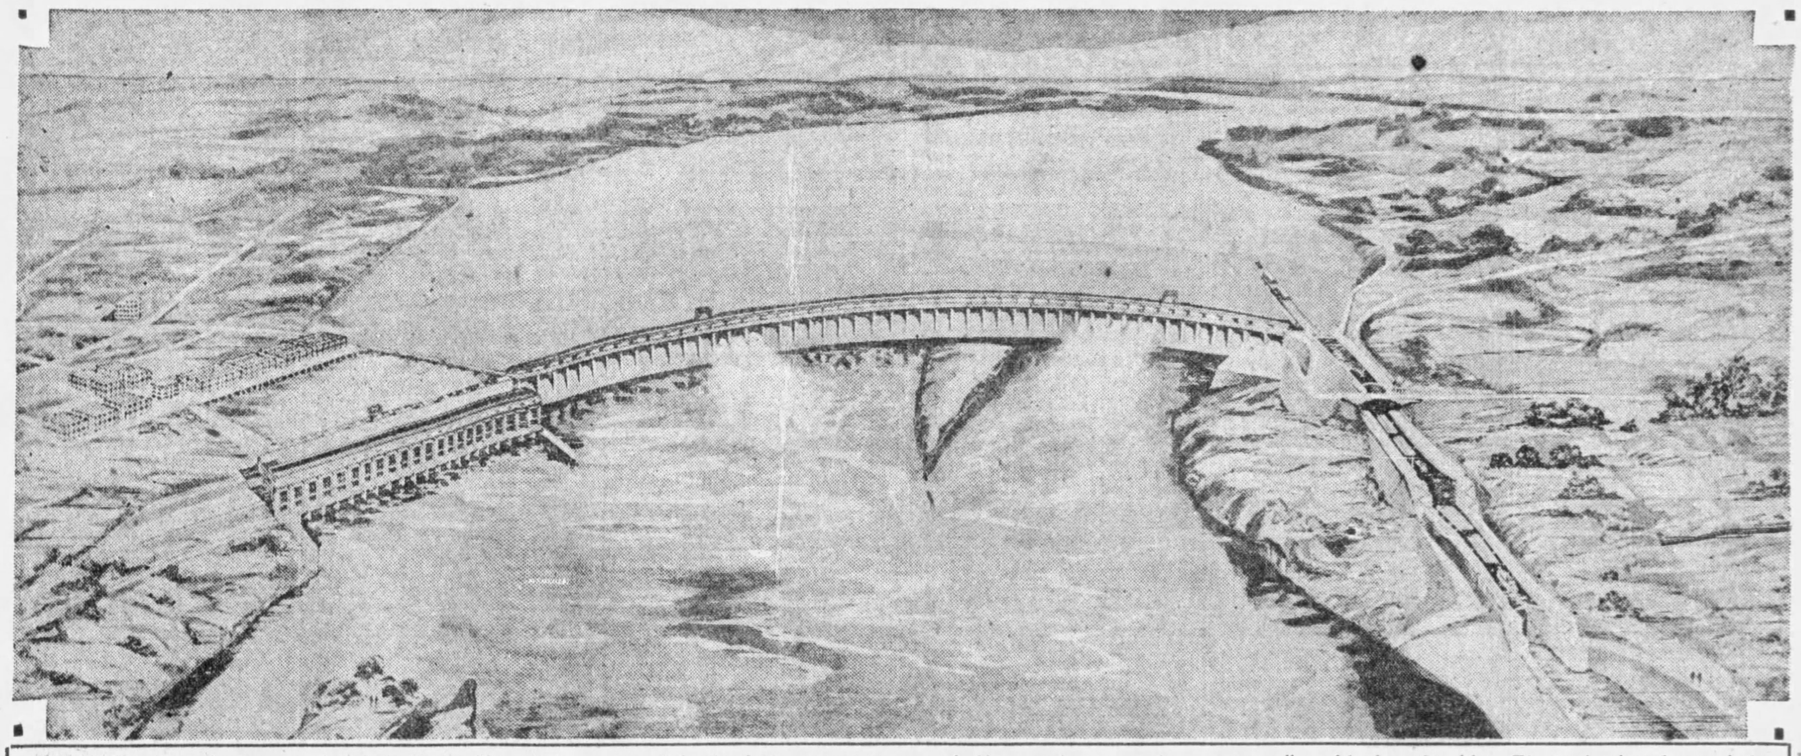
'How Russia's 5-Year Economic Plan Is Working Out'—Prof. A. A. Johnson

EXECUTIVE—M. Kalinin, president of the Central Executive Committee of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, and powerful figure in the Soviet Government.

DICTATOR—A new portrait of Joseph Stalin, the dominant figure in the Soviet Government, under which the 5-year economic program is being worked out.



COLOSSAL—An engineer's perspective of the Dneiper River Hydro-Electric and Navigation project, being built and to be operated by the Soviet Government at Kichkas in the Republic of the Ukraine. The overall length of the masonry structure of this great dam across the Dneiper is 5,000 feet. Its ultimate hydro-electric development will be 750,000 horsepower, supplying a super-power system embracing 70,000 square miles with cheap electricity. The total estimated cost of the project, scheduled to be completed in 1934, is $110,000,000. Hugh L. Cooper, who built Muscle Shoals, is the consulting engineer.

By PROF. ALBERT A. JOHNSON,
Eminent Educator and Agricultural Economist, Lately Returned from Russia.

TO ITS General Staff which directs the strangest economic battle yet waged by any people, Soviet Russia said:

"Prepare an estimate of the nation's wealth. Add to that an estimate of our technical, industrial and economic needs for five years."

These things were done. Then the directors of the Soviet added to the total their aspirations for advancement. This summary of wealth, needs and hopes was returned to the economic General Staff—the State Planning Commission—with another order:

"Prepare a detailed, workable plan for realizing these ambitions."

This also was done. The result is what is known as the Soviet Union "Five-Year Plan." It was put into operation October 1, 1928.

The world was skeptical. This was a colossal thing—task, or dream. Even if this new government could command the vision, the enthusiasm, the manpower, could it hope to achieve the objectives set?

In broad outline these objectives were:

1—The lifting of the rural population—82% of the whole—from a backward condition—in some cases almost medieval — toward modern levels of productivity and comfort.

2—The industrialization of this agricultural nation and the striking of a closer balance in 1933 as between the two activities. In that year it is estimated that industry will produce more, by a margin of 1½ billions in pre-war ruble values, than agriculture; while in basic wealth, agriculture will outrank industry by a margin of about 8½ billions in 1933, as against a difference in values of 18 billions pre-war rubles last year.

As early as last spring, industrial and political leaders alike assured me that the beginning indicated the successful accomplishment of the first year program. During the autumn months there was jubilation as the returns came in, division by division.

The progress made considerably exceeded the goal set, both in agriculture and in industry.

An example: It was planned to organize 780,000 hectares of land under what is known as collective control, and actually 4,000,000 hectares were so organized. (A hectare is 2.471 acres).

In the major industries, controlled by the Supreme Economic Council, the pro-

This, however, may with confidence be foretold that when the history of the first decade of the post-war period comes to be written, the events of 1929 will demand an important chapter. But how important in comparison with its immediate predecessors? The decision to evacuate the Rhineland and the adhesion of the United States of America to the International Court will alone give this year a prominent place on the great record.

(Adhesion to the League Court has not yet been submitted to the Senate for ratification, so that it is too early to assume that the United States will adhere to the Court.—Editor's Note.)

There are other events which might well inaugurate departures which will eventually influence the course of mankind. For instance, one would like to foresee what will become of M. Briand's project of a European Union. It is an old French ideal. Napoleon in his demonic effort to establish a European fraternity of nations over-ran Europe and killed millions of Europeans.

M. Briand has revived the proposal, but being essentially a persuader, he seeks to prosecute it by more pacific means than those adopted by his terrible predecessors. Will the golden tongue succeed where the raucous cannon failed? If this scheme materializes, great things will ensue as a consequence—the establishment of peace in the most turbulent of all continents—the abolition of customs barriers in an area populated by hundreds of millions of men and women belonging to some of the most energetic, intelligent and resourceful races in the world—the raising of the economic level of workers throughout the vast area—these would be some of the results of a genuine confederation.

Greed Is Seen
'High Tariffs Will Keep Nations Apart'

There might be other consequences of a less beneficent and more sinister character which one does not care to discuss. The European is the most combative animal in the world. He must needs be always fighting something or somebody. If his racial wars are taken from him, he will turn his thoughts and his claws on to something else.

A periodic presidential election might satisfy him. But nothing will come of M. Briand's proposal—just yet. The greed rather than the need of tariffs will alone keep nations apart.

The fear of American influence will perhaps give momentum to the discussion. It is no use trying to conceal the fact that the growing anxiety concerning the rapidly increasing power of America in world affairs has something to do with popularizing the notion of a European Federation.

Europe is becoming apprehensive of the stranglehold of American finance. It cannot do without it. But that makes Europeans dread it all the more. They see their continent is a pawn to Amer-

'RHINELAND EVACUATION AND VATICAN PACT ARE TWO SIGNIFICANT EVENTS'

"True Eminence of This Year in History Depends Upon Real Significance of President Hoover's Utterances on Gigantic Increase Of World's Armies," Says Statesman.

By DAVID LLOYD GEORGE,
Former Premier of Great Britain.

LONDON, Dec. 21.

WHEN the story of 1929 comes to be told, how will it stand amongst its fellows? When a man is on his deathbed his friends and acquaintances forget all about the trivialities and common places of his life, and recall his outstanding characteristics, achievements and mistakes. As the life of 1929 is drawing to a close, in the public and in the press there will be a similar process. We shall be reminded of its most striking incidents and episodes. What are they? I shall deal only with those which concern international affairs.

DAVID LLOYD GEORGE

At least a generation must elapse before even the most discerning can point with confidence to the importance which a given year will ultimately attain on the scroll of time and for even longer than a generation the comparative significance of events which have happened in any given year cannot be rightly assessed.

Incidents which may now pass without notice may in the course of years turn out to be full of moment, whilst events which have stirred the public mind and filled columns in the press may turn out to be of no account in their influence on nations and on mankind.

RAIDING with the KRONPRINZ WILHELM by COUNT ALFRED VON NIEZYCHOWSKI

'Two More Ships Taken, Then Our Crew Was Stricken by Beri-beri'

Prisoners of War Sent Ashore; Women and Children Wept At Leaving Raider, Where All Had Made Friends'

IN previous installments Count Niezchowski has described how the Kronprinz Wilhelm captured and sank 11 Allied merchantmen after her conversion on the high seas from a palatial German passenger liner into an auxiliary cruiser at the outbreak of the World War. He now resumes his narrative:

By COUNT ALFRED VON NIEZCHOWSKI

Lieutenant and Watch Officer Aboard the Kronprinz Wilhelm During Her Sensational Career as a Sea Raider.

A BIG day now dawned. Monday, the eighth of February, was Capt. Grahn's birthday, and all hands anticipated a holiday.

The first event was the raffling off of 454 presents among 454 men, so that each got something.

Then followed a moving picture show.

Count Niezychowski.

On the Highland Brae our men had come upon some motion picture war films. There was no picture machine on board, but our crew straightway set to work to construct one.

Some of the machinists made a metal box into which our electricians fitted are lights. Bicycle sprockets and wheels captured from the Bellevue were then put to use, and in short time a motion picture apparatus was in working condition.

When the pictures began to run, all of one accord rose from their seats and shouted the valorous "hurrah!" Verily, for the moment the men thought themselves back in their home cities.

Next day, Tuesday, February 9, when the birthday excitement had died down and we were steaming toward a point at which we would rejoin the German steamer Holger, the commander announced that all men over 39 years of age could receive honorable discharges, go aboard the Holger and be transported to safety.

A great self-questioning at once took place among the older men. Some thought it their duty to stay on the Kronprinz; others had dependents at home and thought it best to leave. They talked the matter over with each other, arguing back and forth.

On Wednesday we reached the Holger. The sea had grown rougher; the sky was lowering. On Thursday weather and sea were worse, so it was impossible to take the Holger alongside.

Beg to Stay
Prisoners Want to Join in Fun of Raiding

On this day some boys, our prisoners of war, begged to be allowed to stay aboard after the other prisoners had gone. They wanted to join us and take part in the "fun" of capturing vessels.

Commander Thierfelder told them it would be treason on their part to fight against their own countries.

On Friday the sea had become smooth enough to allow the Holger to come on our port. The transfer of the prisoners of war—252 in all, collected from the steamers Hemisphere, Highland Brae and Potaro, and the sailing vessels Wilfred M. and Semantha—was now begun.

Most of them had made friends with our crew and consequently looked upon their leaving as almost a calamity.

Especially had this been the case with respect to the captured children. These tots had worked themselves into the hearts of our men, many of whom were themselves fathers with children of similar ages at home. The men, on their part, had done all in their power to be amusing. Some had performed acrobatic feats for them; others had made toys, such as jumping jacks and tops, and showed the children how to play new games.

The Kronprinz, furthermore, officially presented the captured children with ice cream and cake twice a week—on Thursdays and Saturdays. This treat was always awaited with anxiety lest it fail to come and hailed with ecstasy when it arrived.

When the prisoners got together their effects to leave, the children set up a chorus of lamentation. They did not want to leave the ship which gave them so much fun and such good treats. Not until they had been assured that they would be given ice cream and cake aboard the Holger just as with us were they quieted.

Most of them said goodby with tears in their eyes, and, as on such occasions the softer emotions are contagious, the women used their handkerchiefs freely.

Before Parting
Men Wanted to Get Farewells Over Quickly

Those of our crew who had decided to leave our vessel were now called on deck. Seventy-three in all—among them our former merchant commander, Capt. Grahn—came forward. They had their belongings packed and were nervous to have the parting over.

Before they left the ship, however, the commander addressed them, thanking them for their faithful work, reassuring them that they were not unpatriotic in leaving him, as his ship was well supplied with men, and he wanted to put no unnecessary burden upon those whose age deserved a rest. Thus cheered with handshakes, parting greetings and requests to be remembered at home, the contingent went down our ladders.

It was the twelfth of February that we parted from the Holger. During the next 10 days our life was one of continuous drill and routine. We steamed slowly along in a northeasterly direction, painting ship, mending machinery and caulking leaks, ever mindful of our broken propeller shaft well.

On Monday, the twenty-second of February, George Washington's Birthday, our lookout at 2 p. m. sighted the smoke of a steamer on the horizon. "Clear for action!" sounded and we at once steered toward the vessel, reaching her at 2:30.

The steamer refused either to stop or show her flag, so we fired a blank shot with each of our bow guns, whereupon she ran up the British flag and came to a halt. It was the single-funnelled steamer Chasehill, of London.

Chasehill Saved
Only Prize of Raider Not Sent to Bottom

The Chasehill proved to be the only prize which the Kronprinz did not sink. For the Chasehill was later sent to shore, manned by her own crew, with all our prisoners of war.

She had left London for La Plata with 3,000 tons of coal, having in addition 1,500 tons still in her bunkers. Her officers and crew of 43 men were then ordered over to us, and a part of our crew was sent over to man the vessel.

On Tuesday, February 23, which was Commander Thierfelder's thirty-first birthday, all hands expected a holiday. But shortly after dawn a large steamer with two smokestacks appeared on the northern horizon. "Clear for action!" sounded, all hands came to station and we steamed rapidly down on the enemy.

So large was the distant ship and so bold were her actions that we began to think we were at last to fight a man-of-war. For a time the suspense was intense, and everyone made ready for a fight to a finish. As we came nearer, however, we saw that she was not a war vessel after all. We fired a shot across her bows, whereupon she slowed down and ran up the French flag.

She was a large, beautiful freight and passenger vessel, the Guadeloupe, of Havre. Above her graceful black hull her long white cabin space lay comfortable and roomy. Even her two red smokestacks, banded with black at the tops, had a contented appearance. When the Kronprinz had come near enough to ascertain the splendid proportions of the prize, our officers of one accord came up to congratulate Commander Thierfelder. It was indeed the finest birthday present the commander could have wished.

As our prize boat was rowing over several sailors had run out of one of her cabins carrying three black leathern trunks, weighted with iron, which they cast into the sea. Two at once went to the bottom; the third, however, was fished up by the two boats which immediately put out from our side.

On opening this trunk we found valuable documents and writings addressed to the French minister of war. In addition, there were millions of dollars' worth of checks and drafts payable at Parisian banks, and though this paper was naturally of no use to us our men at least enjoyed the feeling of having captured something valuable.

Big Spectacle
Crew Makes Effort to Speak to the Girls

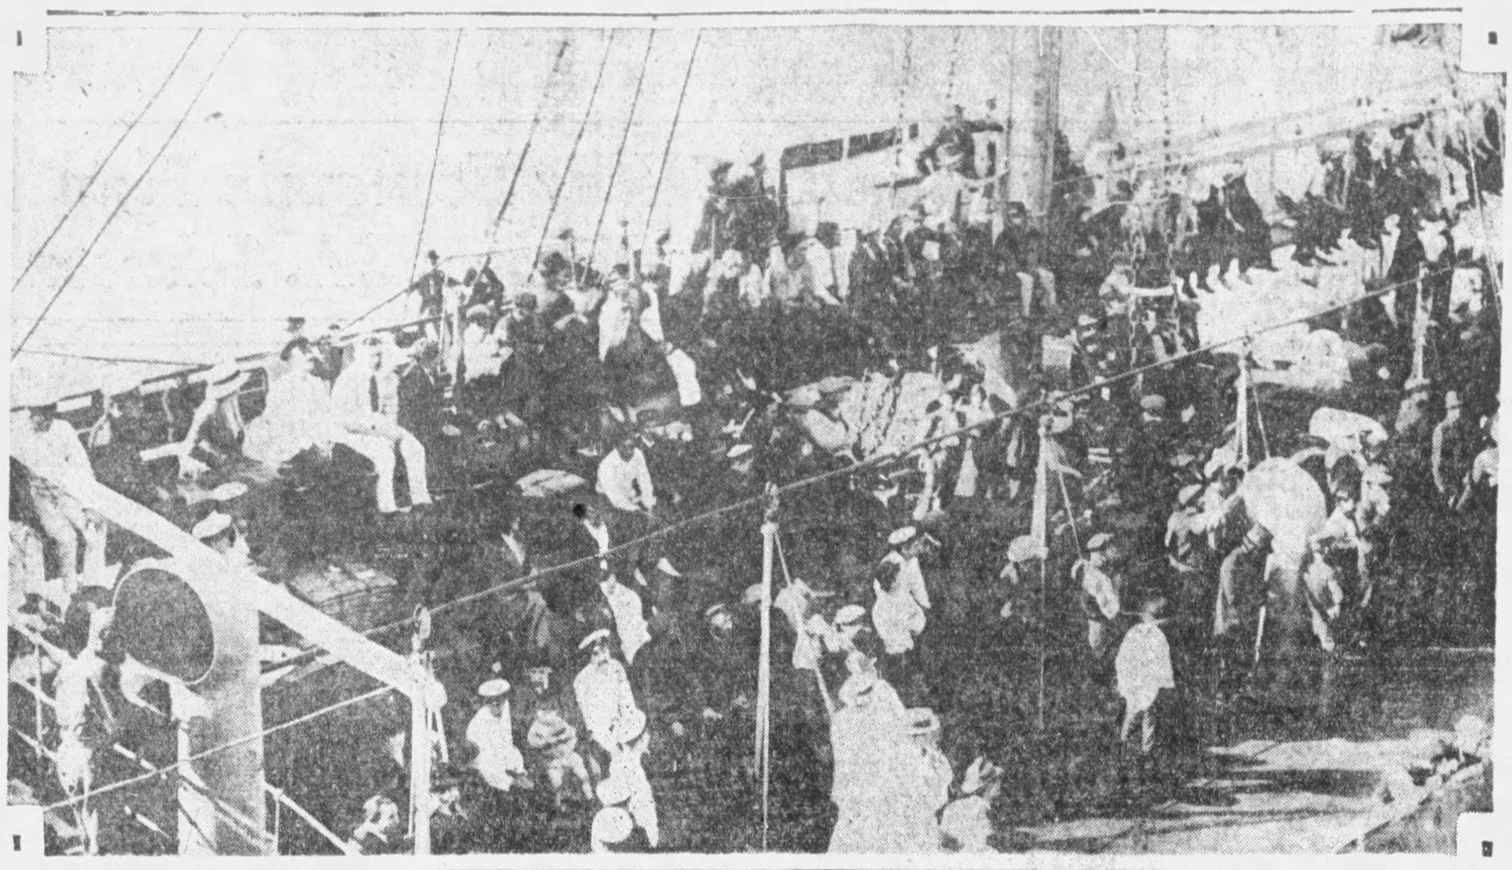
This transfer of passengers proved quite a spectacle. As stated, there were 294 persons on the vessel, including many women and a few children. Among the women were some pretty French girls, all about 16 years old and dressed in the most chic styles. Our crew stared at these goddesses from a respectful distance until the fair ones were corraled out of sight. Then our men made it their business to besiege the prisoners' quarters to get on speaking terms with the girls.

We now began taking over all the baggage of the Guadeloupe—a tedious process, as the vessel seemed to be stuffed with luggage from stem to stern.

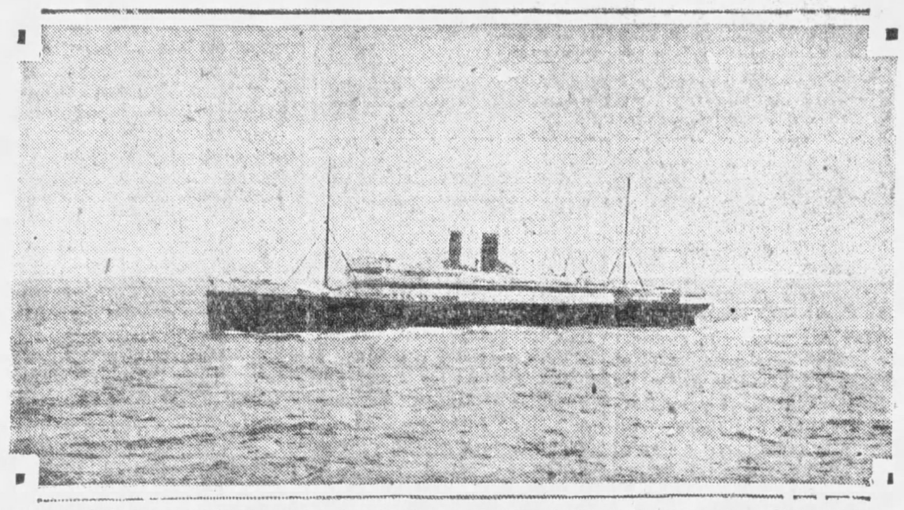
At 6 o'clock next morning all hands were up and work was begun. Once more we brought the Guadeloupe on our port, taking on fresh water, provisions, articles of clothing, tobacco, cigarets, beer and meat.

The unloading proceeded rapidly. At 5 in the afternoon the ship was empty, whereupon we let go and made everything ready for the sinking. At 6:20 the work of opening the seacocks was finished and the last man over the vessel's sides.

The Guadeloupe surprised us by the rapidity with which she went down. By 7:20 she was half submerged, when a violent explosion occurred in her hold, the debris flying high into the air. Then the ship, enveloped in dense clouds of steam, settled from sight in a boiling sea. Thus the richest as well as the most beautiful of all our prizes went to the bottom.



"ALL ASHORE THAT'S GOING ASHORE"—This photograph by Count Niezychowski, one of the most remarkable pictures ever taken of prisoners of war at sea, shows some of the Kronprinz Wilhelm's 252 captives after they had been put aboard the German steamer, Holger, for transportation to a neutral port and subsequent release. Many of the women and children wept at leaving the raider.



GREATEST PRIZE OF ALL—The steamer Guadeloupe of Harve, France, which was captured on Commander Thierfelder's birthday, February 23, and proved the richest prize of the raider's cruise. Two hundred and ninety-four persons were taken off this liner before she was sent to the bottom.

Count Captive
Nobleman Is Taken Prisoner on Honeymoon

Among the first-class passengers of the Guadeloupe was the Portuguese nobleman, Count Vasco de Orey, who had just married a cousin of King Manuel of Portugal, and was on his honeymoon.

I introduced myself, asking the count if he would not on his return to land write my mother concerning my safety. When the count later reached home he kept his word chivalrously, writing a long, cheerful letter to my mother, telling of the varied travels of the Kronprinz and of her continued success and safety.

When this letter reached my family there was great rejoicing. They had not heard from me since I left Hoboken in August, 1914, and did not know whether I was alive or dead.

Every effort was made to make the count and countess feel at home. At my suggestion Commander Thierfelder gave them a first-class stateroom opening on the starboard promenade deck, and they remained the guests of the officers for the rest of their stay on board.

The week that followed was a busy one, coaling from the Chasehill taking place daily.

On Saturday, the sixth of March, our second division was sent aboard the vessel to clean her for the accommodation of the prisoners. On Tuesday they were transferred to the prize. When they sailed away, the same scene took place which had occurred at the departue of the Holger.

Next day, at 5 p. m., we sighted a good-sized steamer, and reached the vessel by 6 o'clock. As she failed to stop or show her flag, we fired a shot across her bows, whereupon the Belgian flag was run up and the vessel halted.

Kronprinz Sails For American Port

Going to U. S.
Commander Decided to Make for America

Our prize crew ascertained the vessel to be the Anvers of Antwerp, carrying a cargo of flour, corn and loam for Rotterdam. At 8 o'clock we let the vessel go her way.

It was only a short time after this meeting with the Anvers, as we cruised northward, that Commander Thierfelder ordered all available men to begin painting the sides of our ship. Considering the latitude we were in, I held this to be an important sign.

"Heinz," I said to Hoffmann, "I think our cruise will soon be over. Thierfelder's going to run into a North American port."

"That's what I've been thinking," my friend agreed. "Then there are the sick men—"

"Six more today," I added. "I've just met Fix and he says three beriberies reported at noon inspection."

Hoffmann shook his head. "It can't last long," was his verdict.

'Growing Fear of U. S. Power Aids Idea of European Union'—Lloyd George ica without hope of redemption.

Love thy neighbor as thyself is a hard doctrine for the average Christian to digest. But love thy creditor as thyself is completely beyond his assimilative powers. The deepening and tightening of the bondage of Europe to the dollars is an element in all this talk about the brotherhood of Europe. Who can predict the result of so momentous an idea?

Brian Tires
'Energetic Persistance of Ideals Not Present'

The famous French orator possesses a fertile imagination and these pictures spring luxuriantly from his rhetorical soul. But he gets easily tired—not only physically but ethically. Energetic perseverance in his tasks has never been his strong point.

If he flags in his purpose to establish a pan-European union, this ambitious plan will come to nought and will be buried amongst the myriad schemes for settling the world which have during the past 10 years been suggested and discussed by busy minds. In that case, the Briand project will add nothing to the fame of 1929.

Again, what about the reconciliation of the Holy See with the Italian monarchy, which is one of the triumphs—major or minor—of 1929? Truly it is a striking episode which must find its niche, not only in Italian history, but in any revised and enlarged edition of the lives of the Popes.

As to its influence on the life of the Italian people or on their international policy, it will be regarded as a pleasant ending to a quarrel. The removal of this feud from the capital of Italy is a tribute to the common sense and courage of both the Pope and Il Duce. Also it serves to prove once more that Mussolini has gifts of statesmanship of a high order.

The death of Herr Stresemann is one of the tragedies of the year. Will his removal from the direction of the foreign affairs of Germany have any ultimate effect upon the policy of that great country? He was essentially a reconciler.

There were people in his own country who exhibited a pronounced distrust and detestation of his line of action. Will these extremists gradually obtain any real sway over German opinion? If Herr Stresemann's work turns out to be thoroughly established, then nothing can overthrow it. But if it is not, what will Germany do in the absence of the wise and strong guidance of her dead leader? Is there any other political leader who could hold his own against aggressive German nationalism?

The venerable President of the German Republic may for some time exercise his restraining authority, but he is advanced in years and he cannot hope to remain in office much longer. Who is there to resist the forces that are operating to destroy the policy of pacification? The best hope of the future lies in the common sense of the German people themselves.

Germans Active
Minds Are Centered on Economic Condition

Their minds and energies are concentrated on the economic restoration of their country, and they may refuse to be diverted from that task by the lurid appeals of ultra-patriotic agitators. One would feel more confident about the future if Herr Stresemann were still there to guard his own policy.

What is happening in China? We are too apt to overlook the possibilities of that mysterious and gigantic country. It has a population of 400,000,000 of intelligent, industrious and fearless human beings. They are learning the arts of war by fighting each other. The devastation of years of civil war is driving them to despair.

Early this year the conflicting elements appeared to have reached an accommodation on the basis of a Federal Republic. Peace and unity seemed to have been restored. Then came another outbreak of hostilities. New forces and new leaders challenged the nationalist combination. As all the news came from national quarters, the rebellion was not treated seriously by foreign observers.

The Nationalists claimed that they had suppressed the insurrection. Now it is clear that so far from having done so, on the contrary the rebels are gaining ground and the government is impotent to deal with them. Who are the new leaders? 1929 cannot answer the question. But they must be formidable. We must wait until we know more about them. There may be amongst them a man who will alter the whole history of the East. If there should be, 1929 will have left its mark deep on the world.

In Russia, there has been no vital change. Bolshevism has not collapsed. It seems to be as firmly established as ever. The future will depend largely on the success or failure of its five-year economic program. The conception is bold and sagacious. The execution, as might be expected, is ruthless. Time alone will show whether it is effective.

'Reds' Condition
Making Heroic Effort to Restore Industry

The Bolshevik dictatorship is making a heroic effort to reorganize agriculture and the industries of Russia. With the limited resources at its command, it is purchasing abroad the most modern machinery. If it succeeds then Russia will become a most important factor in the trade, commerce and finance of the world. This year Stalin has pressed on his great scheme with all the relentless energy of his predecessor, Peter the Great.

But the real eminence of 1929 as a year can only be determined when one knows what significance can be attached to some of the passages in President Hoover's recent speeches. As to naval disarmament, it can be taken for granted that he will do all in his power to effect a reduction. That in itself will ensure success for the Five-Power Conference.

That in itself will not carry world disarmament very far on its way. In 1921, Secretary Hughes and Lord Balfour between them achieved the first real success ever attained in any conference on international disarmament. Most of them end in unctious but futile declarations.

The Washington Conference cut down navies by 1,800,000 tons in the aggregate. The Five-Power Conference engineered by President Hoover and Premier MacDonald cannot expect to reach anything like these remarkable figures. At best, this conference will be a continuation of the Hughes-Balfour triumphs.

President Hoover's observations on military disarmament are in a different category. When he called attention to the increase of 10,000,000 men in world armies, did he intend to initiate a new policy or was it simply so much padding in a speech on the advantages of peace?

On the answer to that question depends the place of 1929 in history. If he means to abandon ex-President Coolidge's attitude of indifference towards the gigantic war reserves of nations, then 1929 will indeed be a memorable year.

The Life of Pope Pius XI

By His Eminence, Cardinal Cerretti

Pontiff Was Priest at 50 When First Ecclesiastical Honor Came to Him

He Was Made a Monsignor By Pius X After Long And Fruitful Service At Milan

IN the previous instalment of his biography of Pope Pius XI, which appeared last Sunday, Cardinal Cerretti told of the Pontiff's deep interest in mountaineering and his admiration for healthy sport and exercise. In today's instalment, Cardinal Cerretti presents a study of the Pontiff's service in the priesthood, particularly during his earlier years.

By HIS EMINENCE, BONAVENTURA CARDINAL CERRETTI,

Member of the Sacred College and for many years a close associate of Pope Pius XI.

CHAPTER VI.

THE fundamental talent in the character of Pius XI and the most outstanding side of his personality was contained in his work as a Catholic priest.

Cardinal Cerretti

Nor could it be otherwise, for duty alone compels it in whoever becomes invested with the ecclesiastical office. It is easy, then, to understand how this character became much accentuated in Achille Ratti, a man who fulfilled all his duties with profound conviction.

The methodical nature of Achille Ratti's work in every field gave also to his priestly life a constant and uniform trend. Ordained priest in Rome in 1879, he returned to his native province in 1882, after having completed his studies with praiseworthy success. He placed himself at the disposal of his superiors to accept whatever office should be offered him.

The fame of the special intellectual gifts of the priest, Achille Ratti, however, made it develop that his superiors, instead of sending him to a parish which would have absorbed all his activities, preferred to entrust him with special religious duties, which left him free to follow completely those studies for which he showed capacity and inclination.

Thus, from the end of 1882 until 1913, for more than 30 years, he was chaplain of a monastic institution established in Milan, which during this period enjoyed its most fruitful development. This was the convent of Our Lady of the Cenacle, the spiritual direction of which was given to the youthful priest as soon as it was opened in a humble building in Milan in 1882.

Four years later the religious institute was transferred to its present extensive and handsome home to provide a worthy seat for the splendid progress of its work.

The sisters of the Cenacle have always considered the fact that Achille Ratti was assigned to them as chaplain as one of the most eloquent proofs of Divine favor towards the growing institution.

Real Influence
Cardinal Was Inspiration Of Spiritual Works

Their chaplain was the inspiring influence of a number of spiritual works which grew out of the development of the convent. He began with the "preparatory catechism" for little boys and girls about to make their first communion, and continued with the "Perseverance Catholic Women Teachers."

He gave regular sermons during the month of May which, of course, is dedicated to the Blessed Virgin. In June, the month of the Sacred Heart, he also delivered special addresses as well as during the novena of Pentecost, the Lenten retreats and on occasions when various meetings of associations founded by the institute took place.

One of the most characteristic works which came into being at the convent through his initiative was a small congregation established for the chimney-sweeps composed of boys who came to Milan during the winter from the mountains to clean the smoky chimneys of the city.

One of these lads chanced to be present on one occasion during a catechism instruction intended for working-class children. Achille Ratti took the opportunity of inviting the boy to return, and bring with him some of his companions.

Thus a fair-sized group gradually came into being and a special organization was formed, which proved most useful, both spiritually and materially. For the poor children, perhaps more abandoned than most others of their class, had really need of the good nuns who acted as mothers to them, while their youthful chaplain loved them like a father.

The memory of this small congregation is one of those which has made the greatest impression on the heart of Pope Pius XI and once, while a Milan pilgrimage passed before him, the eagerness with which he recognized a man of the people who had helped him in recruiting the chimney-sweeps was generally noticed.

PROFILE—An interesting portrait study of Pope Pius XI, whose earlier service in the priesthood is the subject of today's instalment of Cardinal Cerretti's biographical study.

Achille Ratti called the man to him and asked him for the fullest information on the conditions of the institution that was so dear to him.

Agreeable as were all these humble functions of his sacerdotal ministry, his intellectual power at the same time made a great impression on all the persons who frequented that center of good works.

Men and women of the highest culture had recourse to him, not only for ordinary religious instruction, but in order to find a solution of the difficulties and doubts which arose in their minds during the course of their studies and occupations.

Among these persons were many men and women teachers of elementary schools and professors and teachers in the institutions of higher education. As it happened fairly often that the House of the Cenacle was frequented by persons troubled by religious crises, who wished to enter the Catholic Church after having abandoned other forms of worship which they had judged unsatisfactory, the preparation of these souls for their reception into the true faith, naturally a delicate and difficult matter, was always entrusted to Achille Ratti.

In this way, the religious assistance given at the convent of the Cenacle afforded the young priest as full exercise of his pastoral functions as if he had been parish priest in any other church.

In the morning, after having said mass, he was at the disposal of anyone who wished to ask him questions or consult him on spiritual matters. Then he would enter the confessional box, and listen to confessions for a considerable time.

Preached Often
365 Sermons Found Delivered in Single Year

As to his activity as a preacher, to which we have already referred, he gave a great number of sermons, and from a notebook of his we learn that in one year he gave 365 sermons—an average of one a day. Often enough he was called upon for sermons of a special character, as for example, the panegyric on St. Charles Borromeo in the cathedral of Milan.

REUNION—An interesting view of Cardinal Ratti, now Pope Pius XI (in the center), surrounded by members of the clergy at Desio, the town in Italy where he was born, where he spent his boyhood, and to which he often returned, even after he had attained high ecclesiastical honors.

he made the panegyric for this saint again during the last year of his residence in the Lombard metropolis, taking as the theme of his sermon the phrase, "Libro in mano e cuore al cielo" ("Book in hand and heart on heaven"), depicting the saintly Archbishop of Milan as a man of science and faith.

An interesting collection of his sermons taken down by his listeners themselves was that long series extending from May, 1885, to 1912, which he delivered without interruption to the ladies and women teachers of the congregations of the convent of the Cenacle.

Not Monotonous
No Easy Task to Keep Sermons Interesting

It was not easy to give the same kind of sermon for more than 25 years to a congregation which was only slowly renewed without falling into monotony and self-repetition.

Achille Ratti, however, treated his themes in so lofty a manner that he always aroused the deepest interest in his listeners, and the collection of sermons was prepared from notes which his audience of women took down immediately after having heard his utterances.

To have an idea of the high sense of culture and profound piety with which he spoke of the Blessed Virgin in these May sermons, we have the convent's records, which tell us that his first sermons treated of an illustration and comment on Mary's words in the Gospel.

Varied Subjects
Reference Is Made to the Subject of Sermons

In the second series of sermons, Achille Ratti dealt with the words of the Virgin and the Angel, and in later sermons, on the same subject, he referred to the various prayers offered to the Virgin, the litanies, figures and symbolic reterences to her in the Bible, the Psalms, and canticles made in her praise, and the writings of the great Milanese Archibishop, St. Ambrose, about her.

He concluded with a description of the famous shrines and celebrated works of art dedicated to the Virgin Mary.

Achille Ratti was always entrusted by his superiors with tasks suited to his special cultural qualities. He was made a member of the faculty of theology, professor of Hebrew and penitentiary for foreign languages in the Milan cathedral.

Given Missions
Was Entrusted With Many Difficult Tasks

On certain occasions he was charged with especially difficult and delicate missions. In 1895, Cardinal Archbishop Ferrari entrusted him with the work of organizing the religious education in the municipal schools. He made a great success of this work and recruited more than 100 priests for religious teaching. This, at the time, was considered a remarkable feat, as religious teaching was then widely combatted in Italy, especially in Milan.

In 1898, a violent popular rising occurred in Milan, which was suppressed by force. Among the various incidents connected with the rising was one induced by a strange error of the military authorities.

Some of the rioters, having taken refuge in a Capuchin monastery, were arrested there by the military, who at the same time, carried off to the police station all the friars who were living in the monastery.

A commission of citizens visited the general in command of the troops to obtain the liberation of these unjustly arrested monks. Among these citizens was the then Prof. Achille Ratti. Through his persuasive qualities and convincing discourse the commission obtained full satisfaction of its demands.

Honored Late
Did Not Reach High Church Office Early

In the matter of ecclesiastical honors, it was only in 1907, when he was already 50 years old, that Achille Ratti was nominated Domestic Prelate of His Holiness, Pope Pius X, and thus gained the title of Monsignor. He did not reach the highest church dignities until after a call to Rome.

In general, the ecclesiastical career of Pius XI was not remarkable for attracting public notice until the time when, almost unexpectedly and suddenly, he found himself called to the highest position in the Church. The reason for this silence with which he surrounded his priestly activity was principally his modesty and seriousness of purpose, which urged him to aim raera thitt cX him to aim rather at its effective utility than at public attention.

'How Russia's 5-Year Economic Plan Is Working Out'—Prof. Johnson

duction figure set for the year was reached in 10 months.

As a result the figures for the second year of the Five-year Program are being revised upward.

For a better understanding of the vast potentialities of Russia it is well to consider what a Soviet survey shows regarding the nation's natural resources. On this foundation the leaders build dreams and begin to hammer them into realities.

Undeveloped water power totals 62,380,000 horsepower, of which nearly two-thirds is in Asiatic territory.

The coal reserve is estimated at 474,673 million metric tons, of which one-eighth is anthracite. Peat, now used extensively, has an estimated reserve of 265 billion metric tons. The oil reserve, in European and Asiatic territories, has been computed as 2,883,800,000 metric tons. Of the fields, the largest—at Baku and Groznoi—already are joined to ocean transport by pipe lines.

Timber Forests
Two Billion Acres of Uncut Wood Remains

Timber forests cover approximately two billion acres, including immense areas of high-grade fir, cedar, oak, spruce and pine.

Recent discoveries add a quarter of a billion tons to the potash total, now estimated at 1,725,000,000 tons. This is important strategically. The deposits are more accessible than those of French Alsace and Germany.

The surveyed iron deposits aggregate 2,782,000,000 metric tons, while newly discovered iron deposits in the Kursk region are said to total between 20 and 30 billion metric tons.

Before the war the Urals gave Russia almost a monopoly in platinum production. Operations there now are being resumed. Gold reserves, where operations continue, chiefly in Siberia, are estimated at 9,900,000 pounds avoirdupois.

Crimean sulphur deposits total 500,000 metric tons, while beds containing several million tons have been found, but at distance from rail transport.

The bauxite reserve, from which aluminum is manufactured, is estimated at 8,000,000 metric tons. There are also large deposits of silver and lead ores, graphite, phosphate roc, chromic ores, salt, asphalt, asbestos, mica and zinc; and uraninite, from which radium is secured, recently has been discovered.

Held as Pawns
Gigantic Game Being Played by Soviet Union

All these things are as pawns in the gigantic game being played; and the goal, a Soviet Union which will take rank as one of the world's leading producers.

Generally speaking, the Soviet people, in their various activities, had reached or passed the pre-war rate of productivity when the five-year plan was put into operation. In broadcast summary, the story is this:

Total national productivity was 14,000,000,000 rubles in 1913. It was 15,300,000,000 pre-war rubles in 1928; and should be 29,800,000,000—in pre-war ruble values—in 1933.

Tables and charts which I compiled for my statistical book, "The Soviet Union at Work," tell a graphic story of what is happening. The Soviet not only strives to increase production totals and output per worker, but basic wealth as well.

Basic wealth is that reserve of buildings, machinery, materials, animals and other useful things on which continued human welfare depends.

An increase of nearly 70 per cent in "transportation and communication" property and equipment is the five-year goal.

For industry as a whole it is hoped to increase basic plant investment by 200 per cent; while the center of this economic offensive is indicated by the fact that tangible properties with which the major industries work will, it is hoped, be quadrupled.

The industrial production curve can be indicated by a table showing annual gross output of these major industries, in millions of pre-war rubles, together with percentages of increases, as follows:

	1913.	1928.	Approximate Per Cent Increase.	1933.	Approximate Per Cent Increase Over 1928.
Textile	1,494	1,829	22	4,260	133
Food	1,506	1,750	16	4,120	135
Metal and Engineering	628	834	33	2,598	211
Mining	1,004	1,464	46	6,884	370
Other Industries	989	2,298	132	3,700	61
Totals	5,621	8,175	45	21,562	164

The economy of a whole people is difficult to encompass in such space as is at my disposal. Any study of this kind must necessarily be one of cross sections, I summarize, therefore, briefly:

The activity in the five major groups—industry, trade, transportation, building and agriculture—will be increased almost 125 per cent, whereas it is estimated that the growth in private production will be but 21 per cent. As among major divisions, greatest increases are carded for building, 250 per cent; industry, 140 per cent; and trade, 100 per cent.

The basic man-power trend is indicated by the fact that the death rate is 5.2 per 1,000 below 1913 and the birth rate 5 per 1,000 down, a gain in births over deaths which means a population increase of almost 3,500,000 annually.

More workers are to be used in industry, and these made more efficient through better training and by use of more modedn equipment.

The production per worker in 1913, under the Czarist regime, was 2,600 rubles; in 1928 the figure stood at 3,000 pre-war rubles and the 1933 goal is annual individual productivity of 5,900 pre-war rubles.

Here again great strides will be made in those industries most vital to the life of the nation. For instance, in the metal industries an increase of output per worker of 230 per cent is sought by 1933.

Coincident with this there is to be a 35-minute reduction in working hours per day, and doubling of wages is charted.

In the Soviet scheme electricity takes an important place among the forces with which national economy is being rebuilt. During 1928 industry used 62 kilowatt hours of electricity per worker-hour. This, it is expected, will be trebled, to 2.02 killowatt hour in 1933. Transportation contemplates a 50 per cent increase in electrical power per worker in a similar period.

The electrification of Russia is well under way, and is not merely a thing charted as of the future. In 1913 electrical power production was 1,945,000,000 kilowatt hour; the 1929 production was 6,600,000,000 and the 1933 electrical budget calls for 22,000,000,000 kilowatt hours—more than an elevenfold increase over pre-war total.

Another significant phase is this: Two-thirds of the pre-war power was for mills and factories only, whereas 70 per cent of the 1933 total will come from smaller, widely scattered plants built for public and industrial uses. That is to say, electricity for the comfort and welfare of the greatest number.

Other figures are available to show that the Five-Year Plan builds forward not on theory but on a firm foundation of things already achieved.

Coal production already is at a rate beyond the wartime peak achieved under the spur of necessity in 1916, and will, it is planned, be doubled, to 75,000,000 tons by 1933.

During 1929 the production of pig iron and steel passed the 1913 production level; and they are to be increased 2½ times, to 10,000,000 and 10,400,000 tons, respectively, in 1933.

Oil production reached a 1916 peak of 9,700,000 metric tons, fell to 3,800,000 tons in 1920, was 11,700,000 tons in 1928, and 1933 production is set at 21,700,000 tons—indicating a five-year advance of about 90 per cent. Already the cost of production has been whittled down to about 40 per cent of the 1913 unit figure.

A sound measurement of national activity is freight haulage. Here the curve crossed the 1913 level in 1926. During 1929 freight hauled is 48 per cent above pre-war, at 97,000,000,000 ton kilometers. And there is full confidence that the 1933 total will be 162,000,000,000 kilometers.

Many phases of this change, and in many districts of Russia, I have witnessed with my own eyes. Having examined the intelligent preparation of this famous Five Year plan, studied the natural resources which lie behind it, observed the increasingly enlightened activity of Russia's great man power, noted the enthusiasm of her leaders, and checked the record of the first year, I am thoroughly convinced that the Soviet Union will reach the ambitious objectives set by her economic general staff.

RADIO NEWS and PROGRAMS

We Now Present

By DARRELL V. MARTIN
Sun-Telegraph Radio Editor

Merry Christmas!

IN wishing everyone glad tidings we are particularly appreciative of the wonderful co-operation from Pittsburgh stations and artists during the past year. And to our readers for their helpful letters of criticism. We wish you joy on Christmas Day!

Little Birdie Says

KDKA will have four floors in a new building to be constructed on Seventh avenue and Grant street, opposite the massive Koppers Building. The four floors will be utilized for studios, business offices and provisions will be made for television. Work will start in a year. There is a faint hint, too, that several NBC activities will originate in Pittsburgh hereafter.

Pay of Announcers

LISTENERS frequently wish to know how much radio announcers are paid. On the New York networks they are paid quite handsomely, as high as $10,000 a year. But in other cities they do not fare so well. Pittsburgh, Cleveland and Chicago stations have the highest paid announcers, salaries ranging from $2,400 to $4,000 per annum. Boys going to school and announcing part time receive from $30 to $50 a week, according to their ability. Sponsors of paid programs frequently contribute an extra $5 or $10 bill to a preferred announcer. A local announcer picks up $30 extra change every week this way.

Voices Hard to Find

Radio voices are scarce. But one in 50,000 has a voice particularly suited to the radio, says Jim Hughes at WJAS. Out of all Pittsburgh then we might get 10 or 11 good announcers.

More Money Here

THE field for bigger and better returns is that of continuity writing. There are few good continuity writers and they receive a proportionately higher income. Good continuity writers, like good announcers, are so scarce that program sponsors often pay them extra to handle their "radio copy." The best continuity writer downtown finds from $150 to $400 in his pay envelope every Saturday—believe it or not! He has several special accounts.

Prize 'Elevens'

Of some 170 letters sent us commenting on Edwin J. Wuerthele's "All-America Radio Eleven" in this column last Sunday, we have selected those of J. Law Stirling, 240 Dunseith street, and James A. Flinn, 206 South Pacific avenue, as those most representative of the majority. Most persons seemed agreed that Dr. Cadman's program does the most good, although Mr. Flinn believes positively that the KDKA broadcasts to Byrd, the Far North, Australia, etc., do infinitely more for civilization. Mr. Wuerthele didn't get to first base with Real Folks, most people rating Seth Parker first and Real Folks second. Outside of that and the fact that he said there is no good sport announcer, people were pretty much agreed that he knows how to pick 'em. The letter of Mr. Flinn took first prize for length—2,500 words—while that of Ruth Shuster, Homestead, was the shortest, merely the message, "Touchdown!"

Don't Want Much

DEAR SANTA CLAUS:

We have all been very good boys and girls at KQV for a whole year and we are writing to tell you about it. Being good isn't so much fun, you know, only at Christmas time, then it is awfully nice to tell Santa about it and tell him what we would like to have for Christmas.

We will start telling you what we want by asking for a new smock for Cal. She's wearing a pink one and we think a green one would be much nicer for her. Cal also hopes the boss will employ a good looking announcer or salesman who likes to bowl and eat Spanish dinners. I don't know whether you can do anything about it or not, Santa, but I know you will try. And please, Santa, bring the boss a beautiful meerschaum pipe, several boxes of cigars and about four cartons of cigarets, so he will start to smoke them and then the rest of us can drop ashes on the rugs and not be scolded. Don't forget to bring Paul a new saxaphone, because the way he is blowing the one he now has, around the studio, it will be worn out by Christmas. Santa, please bring the operators, Floyd and Jack, some special soft bricks to throw at the announcers—just soft bricks that will not hurt very much. The announcers, Ted and Ford, want you to bring the operators something to keep them awake. You will know better what you can send. Jack and George, the business men of KQV, want fountain pens that will work when they ask business men to sign on the dotted line. Jack and Tony would like you to see what you can do about adding one more Sunday to each week of the new year so that they can get some sleep.

By the way, Santa, we don't want you to forget that we moved on September 1 and our new address is Investment Building, Fourth avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Your good little boys and girls,

CAL.	FORD.
WALT.	JACK B.
JACK M.	TONY.
PAUL.	TED.
FLOYD.	JACK B.
GEORGE.

Radio, represented by the section described as "the industry" is full of confidence for the future.

In expressing its opinion about the outlook, the industry has joined the movement initiated by President Hoover to stimulate business.

Decision to do its part was made at a conference sponsored by the Radio Manufacturers' Association, at which encouraging reports were heard.

CHICK SALES AS "LEM PUTT"

CHICK SALES, famous comedian, will give two sketches of his famous character impersonation, "Lem Putt," on the Sunshine Hour, WCAE Thursday at 8 p. m.

IN ADDITION to portraying the role of "Zuweida," a Romany gypsy, Yolande Langworthy will sing several native gypsy airs in tonight's "Arabesque" over WJAS.

Pitt Game on Coast to Come Over Network

McNamee to Paint Word Picture of Championship Clash New Year's Afternoon.

A word picture of the post-season intersectional football game between the University of Pittsburgh and the University of Southern California, climax of the annual Tournament of Roses at Pasadena, Cal., will be radio's contribution to New Year's Day celebrations, it was announced Saturday by the National Broadcasting Company. WCAE will be the Pittsburgh station.

To eastern residents, sitting in the twilight of 1930's first day, Graham McNamee, from a field box in the famous Rose Bowl, will describe the happenings of early and mid-afternoon on the California gridiron. Although the broadcast is not scheduled to begin until 4:30 o'clock, Eastern standard time, it will be 1:30 o'clock in the Pacific coast time zone. The entire program is expected to last three hours, and will be heard through the NBC system.

In addition to describing the actual football battle, McNamee is expected to relate highlights of the finish of the famous Parade of Roses and the Battle of Flowers, which precede each New Year's Day game in the California city.

The NBC announcer plans to reach Pasadena in time to watch the final practice sessions of the two teams and to familiarize himself with the personnel of each.

Present arrangements are that the New Year's Day program from California will be picked up through the facilities of KFI, Los Angeles, under NBC supervision, and placed on a coast-to-coast network.

Pursue Time New Year Eve

A musical pursuit of time across the continent, with the quarry captured on four occasions, is the New Year celebration planned for radio listeners by the National Broadcasting Company.

Beginning in New York at 11:55 o'clock, Eastern Standard Time (December 31), the microphone will chase the old year to the Pacific Ocean, overhauling him with dance music in Chicago, Denver and San Francisco.

Sixteen of the nation's crack dance bands will be heard during the four-hour broadcast, which begins in Manhattan a few minutes before midnight (Eastern Standard Time) and ends at the Golden Gate just as the first flush of dawn tints the East over Gotham roof tops at 4 a. m. (Eastern Standard Time), New Near's Day. At that hour California listeners will be sounding their greetings to 1930.

Such towers in the temple of popular music as Rudy Valee, Abe Lyman, Ben Bernie, Johnnie Hamp, Ralph Bennett and Jesse Stafford will be heard in the dance across the country.

Intermingled with the final hour of the nation-wide New Year celebration will be street noises, whistles and shouts as residents of San Francisco bid goodby to 1929 and welcome to 1930. These sounds will be picked up through microphones located at one of the busiest corners of San Francisco and distributed to the NBC network, together with music by a popular dance orchestra located in the NBC Pacific coast studios.

A coast-to-coast network of stations associated with the NBC System, including WJZ, New York, will broadcast this New Year program.

MEAN OLD SCROOGE IN "CAROL"

JACK SOANES, English actor and director, will portray old Scrooge when Dickens' "Christmas Carol" is broadcast over WJAS Christmas eve at 11 p. m.

A PROGRAM of music in the Christmas spirit will feature Mme. Merle Alcock, former Metropolitan Opera contralto, with the Family Party over WCAE Monday.

Foster Songs From WJAS

In keeping with the one holiday when all the world goes home, the Kolster Radio Hour to be broadcast over WJAS at 10 o'clock Wednesday evening, features at its opening and at its close, two medleys of songs associated with the home fires.

The program opens with a special medley arranged by Edward Plumb, and including "Jingle Bells," "Over the River" and "The Winter Song," the latter a Dartmouth College number.

The homely melodies of the beloved American composer, Stephen Foster, will be played at the conclusion of the program. To be heard in this group are "Old Black Joe," "Oh Susanna," "Massa's in the Cold, Cold Ground" and "Old Folks at Home."

Quakers' Quartet Sings Omar's Verses

"The Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam" inspired the songs "Come Fill the Cup" and "Alas, That Spring Should Vanish With the Rose" set to music by Liza Lehmann, which the Armstrong Quakers will broadcast over KDKA Friday at 10 p. m.

Woodforde-Finden's "Kashmiri Love Song" from "Four Indian Love Lyrics" will be heard as a trumpet solo. Lois Bennett, soprano; Mary Hopple, contralto, and an orchestra directed by Victor Arden assist the quartet.

Carols From KDKA On Christmas Eve

Opening with "Joy to the World" and continuing for half an hour with some of the brightest Christmas carols, the Sacred Song program over KDKA Tuesday night at 7:30 o'clock will put radio listeners in the right spirit to fully enjoy Christ's birthday. Soloists will be Martha Eaton Brickman, soprano; Anne Woestehoff, contralto; Will Rhodes, tenor; Max Kroen, bass; W. A. Reger, pianist. The Manchester Chorus will be an added feature.

Popular Ballads By Raybestos Twins

Popular ballads, blended into a pattern of wit and humor by the Raybestos Twins, Al Bernard and Billy Beard, will be offered over WCAE Friday evening at 6:30 o'clock. Lannie Ross, tenor, sings "One Alone."

Novelty 'Rag Doll' On Serenaders Duo

Phil Ohman and Victor Arden, piano duo, playing Brown's novelty number, "Rag Doll" and Rubinstein's "Melody in F," feature the Lehn and Fink Serenade which will be heard over KDKA Thursday night at 8 o'clock.

Minstrels Recall The Days of Old

"In Dear Old Georgia," "You Must Think I'm Santa Claus" and "All In, Down and Out," blackface favorites of the old days, will be heard when the Dutch Masters Minstrels broadcast over KDKA Saturday night at 9:30 o'clock.

Chains Up for Review In Senate Investigation

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—(AP.)—Every phase of radio operation and regulation is to be investigated by the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce, which has resumed hearings on the Couzens bill for creation of a commission on communications.

Radio telegraph problems, program broadcasting, manufacturing, the relationship of wireless to wire communications and the general question of monopoly are included in an outline of the subjects prepared for the committee by William C. Green, its special counsel.

One of the principal questions to be determined is whether program broadcasting stations should be classed as common carriers and required to serve the public on demand in the same manner as point to point communications systems. In that connection it will be decided whether chain systems be compelled to furnish service upon demand.

The committee will tackle three problems which have been the subject of considerable controversy. It will decide whether Congress shall regulate cleared channels, shall fix the limits of power of broadcasting stations and restrict the operation of chain stations.

The advisability of continuing, modifying or abolishing the zone system of radio administration will be considered. President Hoover's message to Congress advocated discontinuing the selection of commissioners from specified zones. Other questions of particular concern to broadcasters are the requiring of license fees for stations and the granting of larger powers of censorship to the commission.

Relay Horne Chorus To London Store

Employes and customers of two department stores, one in London, England, and the other in Pittsburgh, will listen simultaneously to a special Christmas concert Monday morning at 9 o'clock. The concert will come direct from the balcony in the Joseph Horne store, featuring the Horne chorus of 100 voices, and will be short-waved to Europe over KDKA. A. H. Burchfield, president of the Joseph Horne Company, will open the program with a short message of greeting to members of the foreign offices.

Duet Offered by Soprano and Tenor

Bernice Taylor, soprano, and Fred Waldner, tenor, blend their voices in "Cross Your Heart" and "When the Real Thing Comes Along" as highlights of the Launderland Lyrics to be broadcast over WCAE Saturday night at 8:30 o'clock.

'Tango Opals' on Gulbransen Hour

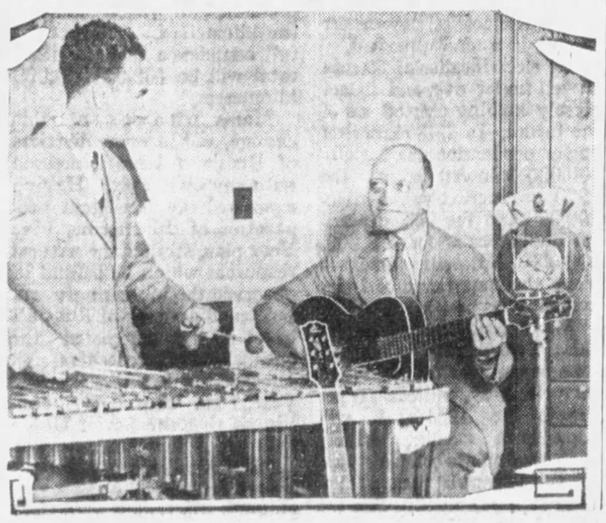
Dr. Henry Hadley will present during the Gulbransen Hour to be broadcast over WJAS at 9:30 o'clock Saturday night a new composition of his own, never before played, "Tango Opals."

Also to be played by the orchestra under Dr. Hadley's direction during this period is a symphonic paraphrase by Dr. Hadley on "Gershwinia," a medley of George Gershwin compositions. The overture to "Tannhauser," the adagietto from Mahler's "Symphony No. 5," and Tschaikowsky's "March Slav" are also to be heard at this time.

Monkeys Entertain Dorothy and Dick

While the monkeys entertain Dorothy and Dick with their funny antics, and the baboons leer and chatter at them through the bars of their cages, Bob Sherwood will tell them stories of monkeys, babboons, orangoutangs and gorillas in the Dixie Circus program to be broadcast over KDKA Friday at 7:30 p. m.

TONY LOMBARDO and Jack Banky, popular instrumentalists at KQV, will depart tomorrow for New York to make a number of records. They have been requested to appear at NBC for an audition.



Gus and Louie to Make Resolutions

No more fighting, and no more mixups with women are the New Year's resolutions that Gus and Louie, the Schradertown garage partners, make during the broadcast over WCAE Friday night, at 9:30 o'clock.

After several months' entanglements with the Widow Biddle and the mysterious Mme. Zabo, the two garage partners decide that it is time to call all bets off and get down to earth once more. But as a Scotch poet once observed, the plans of mice and men frequently do not materialize—particularly when they fail to consult the members of the opposite sex.

Popular Classics On Gold Spot Hour

Popular classics, including Von Suppe's "Jolly Robbers," Adams' "Bells of St. Mary's" and Foster's "My Old Kentucky Home," will be heard when the Gold Spot Pals, directed by Hans Barth, broadcast over KDKA Saturday evening at 6:30 o'clock.

Spanish Themes In Weber Overture

The overture to "Preciosa" by Carl Maria von Weber, which is built on a Spanish dance motive, the bolero, will be heard over KDKA during Slumber Music Friday night at 11 o'clock.

New Distributor For Sparton Set

Superior Auto Accessories Company, 5117 Baum boulevard, has been appointed distributor for Sparton radio. The firm now is the Pittsburgh agency for Sparton, Kolster and Brandes.

Baird Soon to Try Television in America

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.—(AP.)—Television slowly is breaking down the barriers that continue to keep it in the laboratory stage.

Such is the impression obtained at the Baird Television Laboratories which have been established in New York as a step toward making possible home reception of pictures by radio. How soon the object will be an accomplished fact can be determined only by the future.

In the local development rooms, part of which resembles a studio, various types of television "cameras" and receivers have been set up and tests are being made by the use of wires connecting the two units. In all of the tests both voice and picture of the speaker are fed into the receiver over separate channels.

The work is in charge of an English staff sent from the John L. Baird laboratories in London, and is headed by Capt. William J. Jarrard.

Synchronization of transmitter and receiver, so that the scanning disk of the latter will maintain the same speed as the transmitter, has been one of the serious obstacles to reliable television. Various methods have been proposed, including the use of special motors..

Baird, who gave his first television demonstration before members of the Royal Institution in London early in 1926, tackled the problem by developing a device to control the speed of the motor with a signal taken out of the received picture.

It consists of a small iron wheel containing as many sprockets as there are holes in the scanning disk. At each side of the wheel is an electro magnet, which makes contact with the sprockets and which accelerates or slows down the motor. The speed correcting signal, which actually is a part of the picture, is fed directly to the magnets.

The Baird scanning disk consists of very thin metal having 30 holes running in a spiral around the outer edge. This disk turns in front of the neon lamp, which fluctuates in step with the received current, and builds what the eye accepts as a moving picture. The disk is no thicker than cardboard.

An all-electric television receiver powered from the AC lines, is part of the equipment. It also contains the automatic synchronizer.

Laboratories were established on this side of the Atlantic, Capt. Jarrard indicated, to make possible the broadcasting of radio pictures for home reception in America. Ultimately it is hoped to use the broadcast channels, which at present are restricted to television between the hours of 1 and 6 a. m.

Television broadcasts are now being made in Germany by Baird, and negotiations have been completed with the British Broadcasting Company for such transmissions in England.

'Hymn to the Sun' On Melody Moments

Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Hymn to the Sun" will be played as a violin solo by Eugene Ormandy, director, during Jack Frost's Melody Moments to be heard over WCAE Thursday night at 9:30 o'clock.

One of the orchestral novelties in a diversified program will be Waldteufel's "Skaters' Waltz," given both in waltz and fox-trot tempo. Oliver Smith will be the tenor soloist.

Sea Drama Tells Of Whale Hunt

The whale hunt, another of Cap'n Jimmy Norton's exciting adventures after sperm whale, the attack of the man-fighting walrus and the strange discovery of a lost balloon, will be recounted in dramatic form as the Harbor Lights story of an old sea captain to be heard over WCAE Friday night at 9 o'clock. Edwin M. Whitney portrays Cap'n Jimmy Norton.

A. ATWATER KENT presenting checks to the 1929 National Radio Audition winners—Genevieve Rowe, of Wooster, Ohio, and Edwards Kane, of Atlanta, Ga.

'Christmas Tree Suite'

The Christmas Tree Suite of Rebikov will be featured in the Christmas night program of the General Electric concert orchestra, from WGY, at 10:30 o'clock. This suite depicts the lively March of the Gnomes, Silent Night, the Dance of the Chinese Dolls and the Dance of the Clowns. Vladimer Ivanovitch Rebikov writes in the modern manner. He is an eccentric Russian composer pushing the use of formlessness and discord to extremes to express emotion.

The concert orchestra, which will be under the direction of Leo Kliwen, will also play "Light of the World by Gray, "God Wills It" by Gounod and "Lift Up Your Heads," from Handel's Messiah.

Philco Continues 'Babes in Toyland'

Scene two of act one of "Babes in Toyland," Victor Herbert's operetta with libretto by Glen MacDonough, will be broadcast as Philco's Theater Memories over KDKA Friday night at 9:30 o'clock. Jessica Dragonette, soprano, and Robert Simmons, tenor, will sing the leading roles.

This scene is the Widow Piper's garden wall. Barnaby disputes the claim of the two ruffians, Gonzorgo and Rodrigo, who are willing to try to earn the money again by destroying Alan and Jane in the dreadful Forest of the Spiders. The young people are persuaded to accompany the ruffians through the forest to the home of their uncle to receive their share of their fortune. Here they get lost and hear the "Fairies' Lullaby."

'A Day in May' Suite By Planters Pickers

Rudolph Friml's "A Day in May" suite introduces soft melodies which the Planters Pickers will broadcast over WCAE Friday night at 10 o'clock.

The Songsters, a Negro quartet, suggest plantation scenes with a group of their folk songs. Billy Artz directs the orchestra.

Schubert's 'Erl King' In Slumber Music

Franz Schubert's "Erl King," written when the composer was but 18, will be heard in the program of slumber music which Ludwig Laurier and a string ensemble will broadcast over KDKA Thursday at 11 p. m.

'Kiss Me Again' By Seiberlings

Victor Herbert's eloquent melody, "Kiss Me Again," will be offered by the Singing Violins and the male quartet will feature "At the Brook" in the Seiberling program to be broadcast over WCAE Thursday night at 9 o'clock.

Vocal Novelties By Smith Brothers

Sentimental ballads and popular love songs will be sung by Billy Hillpot and Scrappy Lambert in the Smith Brothers' program to be heard over KDKA Thursday at 9 p. m.

Alexander the Great.

A radio drama based on the confidence which Alexander the Great placed in his aides will be presented.
At one time Alexander the Great, who wept because there were no more worlds to conquer, became very ill. The physicians were afraid to administer medicines for fear he would die and they would be accused of poisoning him. The young conqueror had received a mysterious letter alleging that the physicians had been bribed with a large sum of money to poison him. But Alexander ignored the communication, took the medicine and recovered.
Dana Merriman will direct a program of incidental music appropriate to the story. Burke Boyce is the author of the drama.

'Tis a little journey soon gone by;
Let's be friends together 'ere we die."

Christmas Treat.

A pretentious Christmas treat, presenting Engelbert Humperdinck's operatic fantasy "Hansel and Gretel" and a symphony program with Willem Van Hoogstraten, of the Portland, Ore., Symphony Orchestra, as guest conductor.
"Hansel and Gretel" is a fairy opera in three acts. The first act opens with a scene in the hut of a broom-maker; Hansel, the boy, works at the brooms, while Gretel, his sister, knits. When the mother, Gertrude, returns home and finds them idling she attempts to strike the children who flee to the woods. The husband, Peter, returns as drunk as usual. But he has enjoyed good luck and brings food. He is horrified at the absence of the children and both parents rush out on a search.
In the second act the children pick berries in the woods and finally drop off to sleep. Morning comes in the third act. The children are caught by a witch who takes them to her house and casts a spell over them. But Gretel breaks the spell, pushes the witch into the oven and liberates Hansel and the other children. The parents appear in time to aid the young ones to drag the witch from the oven in the form of a giant honey cake which they all devour.
Willem Van Hoogstraten recently became an American citizen and now makes his residence in this country. He was born in Utrecht, Holland, and studied violin at the Conservatory of Cologne. Conducting his own concerts in Hamburg he won almost immediate recognition. The young musician was first introduced to this country as a guest conductor of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra in two concerts at Carnegie Hall in the spring of 1922.

Close Listening Ruins Experts Love for Soup

GERARD CHATFIELD doesn't care for soup any more—and he used to be fond of it.

Chatfield was assigned to the special Chicago Civic Opera programs. Chatfield, program supervisor for the National Broadcasting Company, was charged with seeing that every note came through clearly and distinctly.

All of which required much intent listening.

Now he can't confine his listening to music. The faintest rattle of a window in a hotel room sets his teeth on edge, while the faintest of snores from a neighboring Pullman berth will spoil his entire night.

Between Wavelengths

H. B. RICHMOND, of Cambridge, Mass., president of the association, summed up the situation thus:

"As long as the nation's purchasing power is unimpaired, ther is no need of fear in the radio industry. Its condition is improving, although there was a recession both practical and psychological resulting from the stock market decline.

"The present general situation is unique in that overproduction, which means unpaid-for merchandise, is in the hands of the consumer. We have both unpaid-for merchandise in the hands of the consumer and in our distributors or our own warehouses as well. We also have a potential production much larger than current demand, causing part-time operation of plants.

"Conditions now are much improved and the industry can look forward with confidence to the business of 1930."

Trio to Give Negro Songs

A group of authentic American Negro spirituals will be heard over WCAE in a half-hour recital from 8:30 to 9, New Years' night when Robert G. Simms-St. Martini, baritone, assisted by Nando Kozell, violinist, and Grace Blenko Martin, accompanist, present the first Artist Bureau recital under the direction of Miss Gertrude Mohr.

Mr. St. Martini makes his first appearance over the air after a period of absence of more than four years, when he was connected in the Middle West with a number of stations. He is an authority on early American music and folklore and especially Negro spirituals.

Nandor Kozell has recently returned from study in Prague, Czecho-Slovakia. He is a young Pittsburgh violinist and his group of selections will include several numbers rarely heard outside New York recital halls.

Mr. St. Martini will sing "Nobody Knows De Trouble I've Seen," "Bye an' Bye," "Wade in De Water" and "Water Boy." Grace Blenko Martin will accompany Mr. St. Martini. Her work is well-known in Pittsburgh.

Yale Glee Club Sings For Foamers' Christmas

The Yale University Glee Club, one of the finest musical organizations of its kind in the world, of which Malcolm Hay, of Pittsburgh, is a member, will sing to an audience of unseen millions Christmas night, when the organization will present several numbers as featured artists of the Yeast Foamers program, to be broadcast from the Chicago studios of the NBC over a wide network of stations, between the hours of 8 and 8:30 o'clock, Eastern Standard Time. The network includes KDKA.

KEITH M'LEOD, composer of "Slumber On," the signature music for the Slumber Hour, will be featured with the Armchair Quartet at 11:45 tonight, KDKA.

The Yale musical organization is one of the oldest, if not the oldest, college musical groups in existence. It was founded 116 years ago in 1813, and is now composed of 44 members, drawn from almost every state in the Union. Last year it made a triumphant tour of Europe, and this winter will make its sixty-third trip during the Christmas holidays, appearing in the principal cities of the country.

Included in the repertoire of this group of youthful singers is enough versatility to appeal to every type of listener. The offerings of the club range from the best known works of great composers to light comedy selections, and include a wide diversity of popular melodies, Negro folk songs, old ballads and college songs, especially those of their alma mater.

As the group steps before the microphone Christmas night, it will be directed by Marshall Bartholomew, himself a Yale alumnus, who has held the directorship of the glee club for the past eight years. In addition to this post, Mr. Bartholomew is director of the Seymour School of Musical Education in New York City, director of foreign affiliations of the Intercollegiate Glee Club Council and conductor of the University Glee Club of New York. He is also an author and editor of note.

COLONIAL DISTRIBUTOR

KEYSTONE RADIO CORPORATION, 640 Grant street, has been appointed Pittsburgh distributor for the new Colonial Radio. Left to right, J. P. Miller, W. S. Baer and Max Fishman, president.

Organist to Visit Toyland

Jesse Crawford, "Royal's poet of the organ," is to broadcast a special Christmas Eve program over WJAS at 10:30 o'clock Tuesday evening, under the sponsorship of the Royal Typewriter Company. Basing his program on a visit to toyland, Mr. Crawford has displayed as much enthusiasm in arranging his program as the happiest youngster shows in greeting the arrival of the holiday.

The program opens with "Parade of the Wooden Soldiers," following which the two well-known Christmas hymns, "Silent Night" and "Adeste Fidelis" will be played, and then, especially for the children, Poldini's "Dolly Waltz."

For the older folk, Paul Small, tenor, will sing "Junior," an appealing sentiment surrounding everyone's youngster, and then, with a violin solo interpolation Mr. Crawford is to play the "Lullaby" from Godard's "Jocelyn."

Popular Music on Fashion Program

Freddie Rich and his orchestra, together with a vocal soloist yet to be selected, will broadcast a half hour of popular music and song over WJAS at 7:30 o'clock Friday evening during the Howard Fashion Plates program.

Orchestral selections to be heard at this time include "Look What You've Done to Me," "Sympathy" and "Only the Girl," from "The Painted Angel," to which vocal choruses will be sung. Also "Little By Little," "Lady Luck," from "Show of Shows," and "Congratulations.

Works of Lehar Reviewed by Rapee

Recollections of Franz Lehar, a review of that composer's best pieces, will be offered by James Melton, tenor, and the orchestra as a feature of Erno Rapee's Mobiloil concert to be heard over WCAE Wednesday night at 8 o'clock. Melton also sings Oscar Fox's "Hills of Home." Rapee will direct the orchestra in an interpretation of his own composition, "Monkey Hop."

Variety Concert On Maxwell Hour

From musical comedy selections to Dvorak's "Slavonic Dance" range the Maxwell House Melodies which David Mendoza and his orchestra will play over KDKA Thursday night. Two plantation songs, "Head Low" and "Ready for the River," arranged by Ken Christie, will be sung by a male quartet.

El Tango Recalls Sunny Spain

Songs of sunny Spain and South America will be sung and played by Dolores Cassinelli, soprano, and Frank Vagnoni and his orchestra when El Tango Romantico is Broadcast over KDKA Wednesday at 9 p. m.

Marco Tells Tale of Hun

To the Franklin chief, Balbric, who, despite the pleas of his wife, threatens to kill his son for permitting the prisoners of a siege to escape, Marco, the legendary hero of the Silver Flute, tells a tale of Attila, the Hun, in the episode to be broadcast over KDKA Saturday night at 8:30 o'clock.

In the story, Attila, sweeping over Europe, comes upon a town in which the inhabitants have taken refuge in a castle. An old priest and the pagan daughter of the castle owner defy Attila's warriors. By a subterfuge, she misleads the warriors into believing that she will give them the key of the castle. While the warriors are pre-occupied by her descent from the ramparts, the people escape through a secret tunnel into the forest.

Soprano and Tenor In Opera Concert

Nino Martini, one of radio's leading tenor soloists, and Adele Vasa, soprano, who needs no introduction to American radio listeners, will again be the outstanding artists in the grand opera concert which will be broadcast from the New York studio over WJAS, beginning at 8 o'clock Wednesday evening.

Of especial interest should be the renditions of John Barclay, Helen Oelheim and the Columbia Grand Opera Orchestra, also contributors in several groups of operatic renditions, to the presentation.

Old Songs of Noel On Libby Concert

From the sunny shores of Italy to Lapland's icy wastes come new and old world songs of Noel which the Around the World With Libby concert orchestra will broadcast over KDKA Tuesday at 8:30 p. m. Favorite Yultide melodies of Italy, France, Spain, Poland, Lapland, Czecho-Slovakia, Russia, Germany and Haiti will be sung by a quartet composed of Margaret Speaks, Helen Oelheim, Willard Amison and Alois Havrilla. Many of the selections are heard for the first time on the air.

Lew White on Lucky Strike Hour

Lew White, whose organ interpretations of popular dance tunes have made him a favorite of radio listeners from coast to coast, will be guest artist of B. A. Rolfe and his Lucky Strike orchestra during the broadcast over WCAE Saturday night at 10 o'clock.

Buck and Wing Sing 'Collegiate'

Phil Cook and Vic Fleming sing "Don't Get Collegiate" and "I'm Living with Memories" in the novelty vaudeville program, Buck and Wing, which will be heard over KDKA Wednesday night at 9:30 o'clock.

FOR the first time the two canaries in "Cheerio," morning feature over WCAE, come out of seclusion to wish everybody a "Merry Christmas!"

Capt. Eaker Tells Who Will Make Successful Flyer

flier, but the aviation counterpart of the pleasure car driver. A pilot must have experience as well as skill.

There is no such thing as a "pretty good" pilot. The aerial margin between existence and extinction is so narrow that it leaves no room for desultory amateurs.

Of course, flying becomes safer every day through airworthy planes, reliable motors and dependable instruments, but the foolproof ship has not yet been designed, and even when it is I anticipate a large number of casualties caused by human error. About 90 per cent of present-day air accidents come from that source.

Let me use the automobile as a parallel. Engineering skill has produced a virtually foolproof vehicle, and yet thousands of people are killed or injured year after year in auto mishaps.

Therefore, the limitation upon safety in flight is the human limitation, and only for those who possess the gift for flight should be permitted to fly.

What are those gifts and what are the qualities they develop? I have pointed out that a person must be normal, but normalcy alone is not sufficient. He must have those extra qualities which we call "flying sense," which is partly visual, partly auditory and partly a matter of equilibrium (mental and nervous as well as physical).

A pilot should have the "feel" of his plane as a horseman becomes part of his mount. Above all, he should be able to keep a cool head in a hot corner.

It does not take long for the instructor to tell whether or not his pupil is of the flying type. He takes into account his intelligence, confidence, speedy response and general bearing. The experienced flier develops an uncanny instinct that promptly places the student in his proper classification.

Avoid Risk
Student Should Not Take Any Chance

If at the end of the dual control period the pupil entertains any doubts is his own mind, or if the instructor questions his flying ability, the wise move is to stop then and there. Why take expensive chances?

Mediocre automobile drivers may escape with smashed fenders, but inferior fliers eventually fall heirs to broken necks. I repeat—there is no such thing as a "pretty good" pilot.

The Air Corps has had numerous said experiences with border-line cases—men who were dismissed because they could not quite make the grade. The record shows a large mortality rate among those who continued to fly in civil life after experts had told them that they would always be dangerous pilots.

The average air-minded person is inclined to engage in a self-analytical study on the question, "Who Can Fly?" Following the first inquiry, "Am I Normal?" comes a little introspective probing as to self-control, self-confidence, judgment, endurance, ability to measure distances, and quickness of perception.

Human nature plays strange tricks once it gets into the air. I have seen men who are bulldogs on the ground turn into timid kittens in a plane, and men who on land bear the load of a terrific inferiority complex drop their customary humility and change into veritable falcons.

I know fliers who are nervous and fidgety on terra firma and cool as the proverbial cucumber in a ship, and also men with quiet manners and steady nerves on the ground who become utterly unreliable and erratic at the controls of a plane.

Faith Needed
Courage Overestimated Factor, He Says

Non-fliers often speculate on the degree of courage demanded of airmen and some exceedingly exaggerated ideas enjoy popular favor. My own opinion is that the courage fetish is a remnant of the mantle of romance that cloaked aviation during the war.

Courage, in peace-time aviation, is mainly a synonym for confidence. A pilot must have faith in himself and in his ship. Having that, he is almost certain to escape damaging fear and is able to cause his brain, his senses and his muscles to function normally even under unusual stress. By "damaging fear," I mean the form of temporary paralysis which stays his arm, clouds his brain, and stuns his senses. Airmen call it "freezing."

The menace in "freezing" is that pilots frequently must think and act with lightning speed. Any reaction to danger which delays or interferes with instantaneous response is bound to result in disaster.

The well-equipped flier must be able to survey a situation, index all the related facts, reach a decision and put it into execution, and he must do so in seconds. Also, his conclusion must be right the first time.

Must Act
Cannot Hesitate in 'Making Up Mind'

When the motorist loses his his way, encounters bad weather, runs out of gas or discovers motor trouble, he pulls up along the side of the road to think matters over. In the air all of these things may happen, but the flier cannot stop and ponder. He must solve his problem in the air—and at once.

Because there is so much more instinct in aviation, and because mind plays a much greater role than matter, I believe the day is not distant when the specialist whose business it is to diagnose the inner man—the fellow who lives in our brains and nerves—will be the governing factor in answering the question: "Who Can Fly?"

This newest science to determine vocational aptitude is making rapid strides. In a decade it has advanced from guessing to a series of extremely accurate tests which eliminate inferior pilots before they find opportunity to do damage to themselves and others. The sooner these tests, now used almost solely in the military air service, are made compulsory for all, the better it will be.

Their exacting standards have proven their worth time and again in the Army Air Corps, where 50 per cent of the cadets are eliminated and sent home before they end their primary training. They are rejected because they are too nervous or overphlegmatic, or too self-confident, too timid, too slow, too hasty or because of other defects which, under stress, would grow from molehills into mountains. Some of these disqualifying traits reveal themselves before the cadets even leave the ground others; crop out in flight.

Safety Urged
Should Attend Only Responsible Schools

Some of the reasons which may scatter a cadet's aviation dreams seem insignificant to the layman, but are important in the eyes of the scientist.

My attitude toward the ability of the average person to meet the requirements of flight may seem somewhat pessimistic. To be absolutely candid, it is. I make this admission with deep regret, and I hope it serves a definite purpose—namely, that it leads air-minded men and women who want to fly to avail themselves of every possible precaution and the best existing facilities before they set out to play a personal part in the conquest of the air.

No laws compel students to get Department of Commerce medical certificates, or demand that they take instruction at recognized and well-established training schools. At hundreds of airports are found operators who are willing to give instruction at low cost, in short time and—at great risk.

My advice to all would-be pilots is to attend one of the many responsible schools found in all sections of the country, institutions that comply with the rules and regulations promulgated by the government with respect to flight instruction.

There is in America today a wide and constructive interest in aviation. The airplane has won public confidence, but I feel that much of that confidence would be undermined if extensive private flying should produce a large number of fatal accidents.

Be Certain
Aviation a Field in Which No Risk Should Be Run

Aviation is a field to which there should be little haste and no uncertainty.

Mere ability to purchase a plane, to spend some spare hours on instruction or even to pass the medical examination does not fill the bill.

Bear in mind that last year 558 cadets were admitted to the Army's two primary training schools. They had everything in their favor—youth, enthusiasm, health, intelligence and excellent instructors—still, out of that 558, only 270 demonstrated sufficient flying ability to be sent to advanced training school. More than 50 per cent fell by the wayside.

Take then the ranks of the average man—older, softer, slower—and it is obvious that they, on the basis of the foregoing figures, will contribute an even smaller percentage of potential pilots.

There is only one way for one to learn if he belongs to the flying type, and that is to put his ambition to the acid test of flight.

I hope that every normal person who feels the slightest itch to take to the air will attempt to satisfy his desire. I even urge those who do not feel it, to try—they may change their minds.

George Bass With Armour

George Bass, Chicago violinist and concert master of the Armour concert orchestra, will be the guest artist of the Armour program to be broadcast over KDKA Friday at 10:30 p. m.

Mr. Bass, whose radio concerts have endeared him to thousands of listeners and whose concert work in Chicago and the Middle West have won him a recognized place among the foremost musicians of the country, will play two selections, "Melody," composed by the former Vice President, Gen. Charles G. Dawes, and "Humoresque." Fred Waldner, tenor, an orchestra directed by Josef Koestner and a mixed chorus of 18 voices will assist Mr. Bass in presentation of the program.

Russian Soloist Starred Thursday

Mlle. Eliena Kazenova, Russian violinist and soloist, will be starred in the all-Russian program under the direction of Peter Biljo, to be broadcast over WJAS 9:30 o'clock Thursday evening.

In addition, there will be heard on this program selections by Eli Spivak, baritone; soprano solos by Zinaida Nicolina and Peter Biljo's Balalaika Ensemble.

The continuity and setting will be Russian to a high degree. Russian poems and stories will accompany the presentation of each number on the program.

Alley Soloist With Levitow Ensemble

Ben Alley will be the soloist with the Bernard Levitow Ensemble when it broadcasts another concert from the Hotel Commodore, at 7:30 o'clock Thursday evening. The program will be carried over WJAS to millions of listeners throughout the country.

The orchestra will play Wagner's "Prize Song" from "Die Meistersinger," as the request number on this presentation.

Gordon Is Named 'Brother Jenkins'

Taylor Gordon, author of "Born to Be," one of the year's best sellers, will sing Negro spirituals in the program "Dixie Echoes," to be broadcast over WJAS at 8:30 o'clock Saturday night.

The balance of the program will be by the Dixie Echoes group under the direction of Rosamond Johnson. It is interesting to note that Mr. Gordon assumes the name of "Brother Jenkins" in these presentations.

Quartet to Play Christmas Numbers

Bernard Levitow, during his concert from the Commodore Hotel at 7 o'clock Wednesday evening, over WJAS, will introduce a picked string quartet.

Other features will include a novelty which he has termed "Christmas Symphonette," into which many of the well-known Christmas favorites have been interwoven into one number.

McNamee Uses Left Hand for All Activities

ANY number of observers have asserted that two-thirds of the world's celebrities are left-handed. Graham McNamee, star announcer for National Broadcasting Company and the world's best known "mike-man," could be called the "left-handest" of them all.

When McNamee writes he holds the pen in his left hand, using the thumb and each and every one of the fingers. He holds the paper with the top nearest to him, the reverse of conventional practice.

McNamee of course eats with his left hand, combs his hair with the left and always approaches his bed from the left side.

Bank Clearings For Pittsburgh

Should Exceed

$10,000,000,000

TEN BILLION DOLLARS

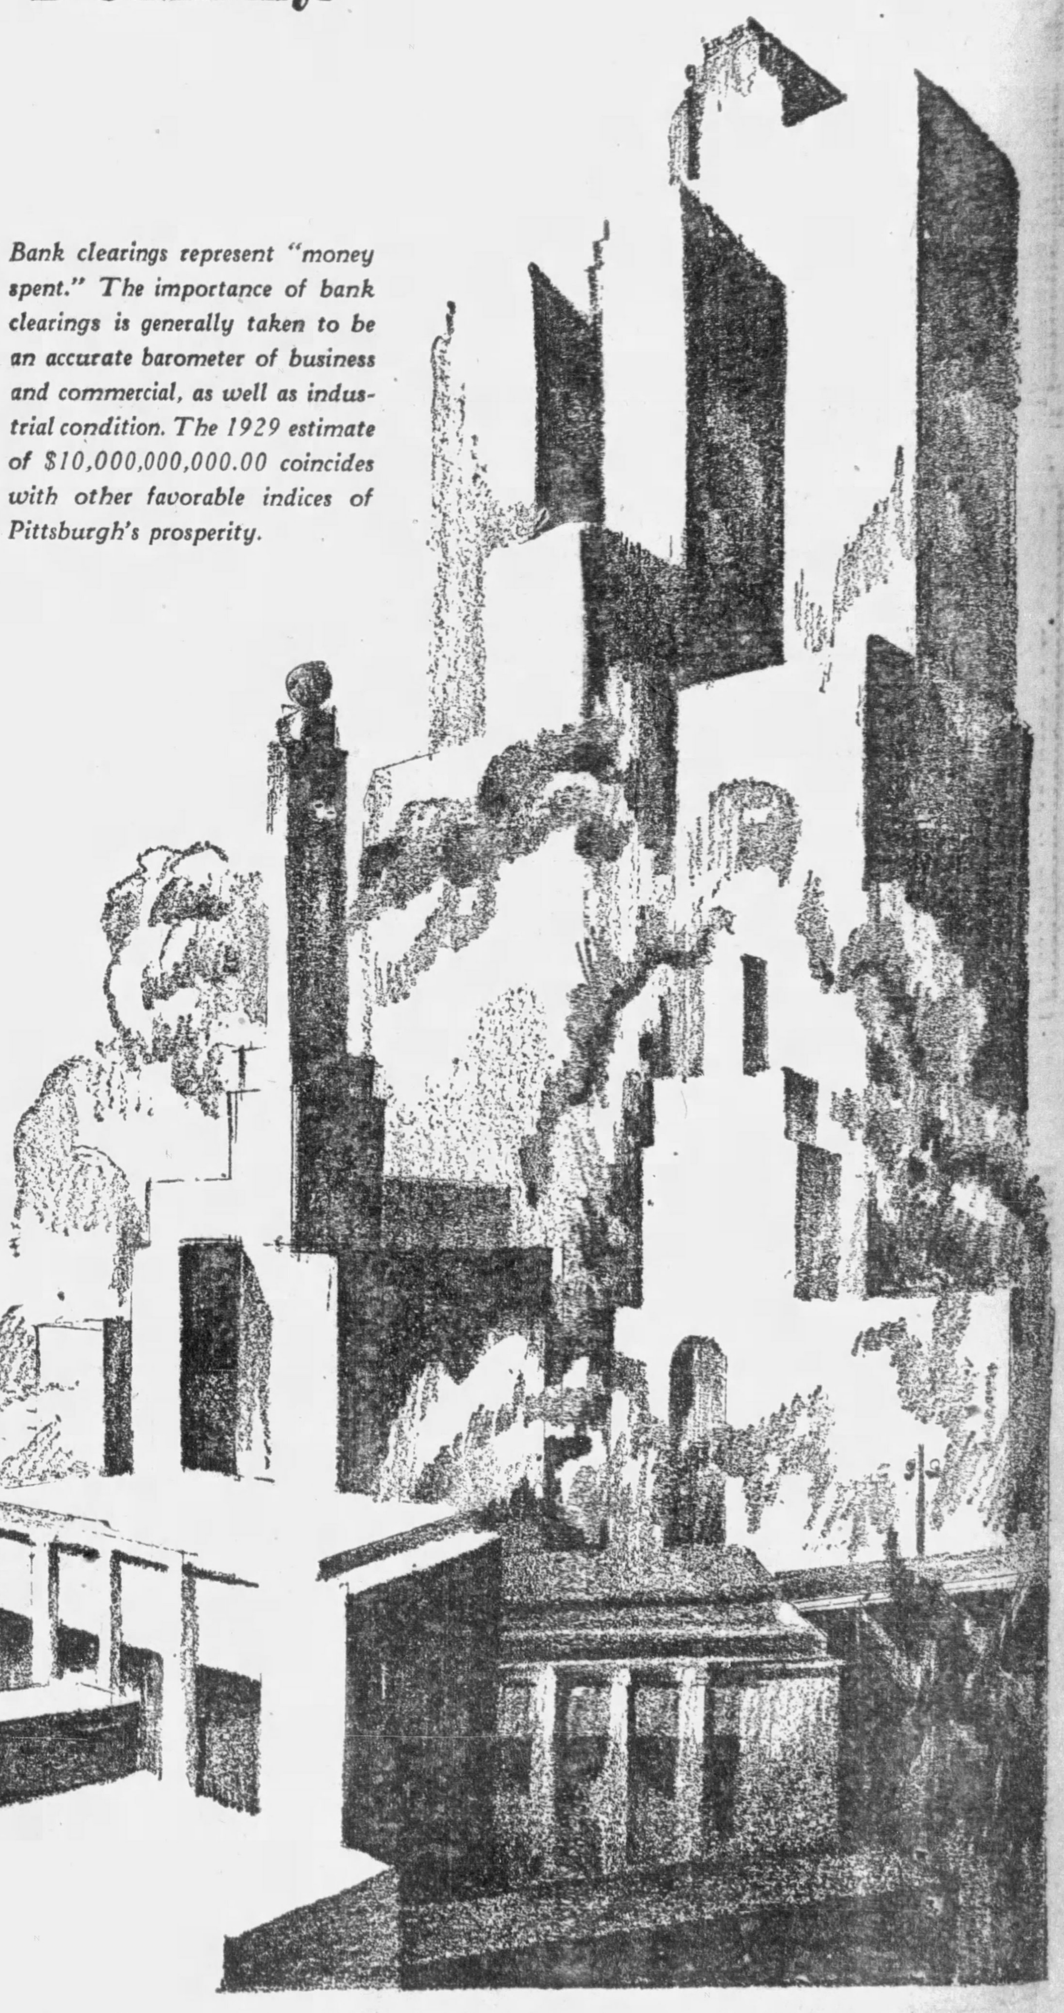
PITTSBURGH is a wealthy corporation in which each merchant is a share holder. Every Pittsburgh merchant participates in the prosperity of this great city, built on the revenue of basic industries. These industries, the foundation of all economic progress, are scaling constantly upward. Employment is close to peak—wages, higher here than anywhere else in the country, are increasing. Car loadings remain high and bank clearings will amount to more than ten billion dollars this year—almost a billion more than 1928. Latest reports on local retail business show an increase of more than 8 per cent over last year.

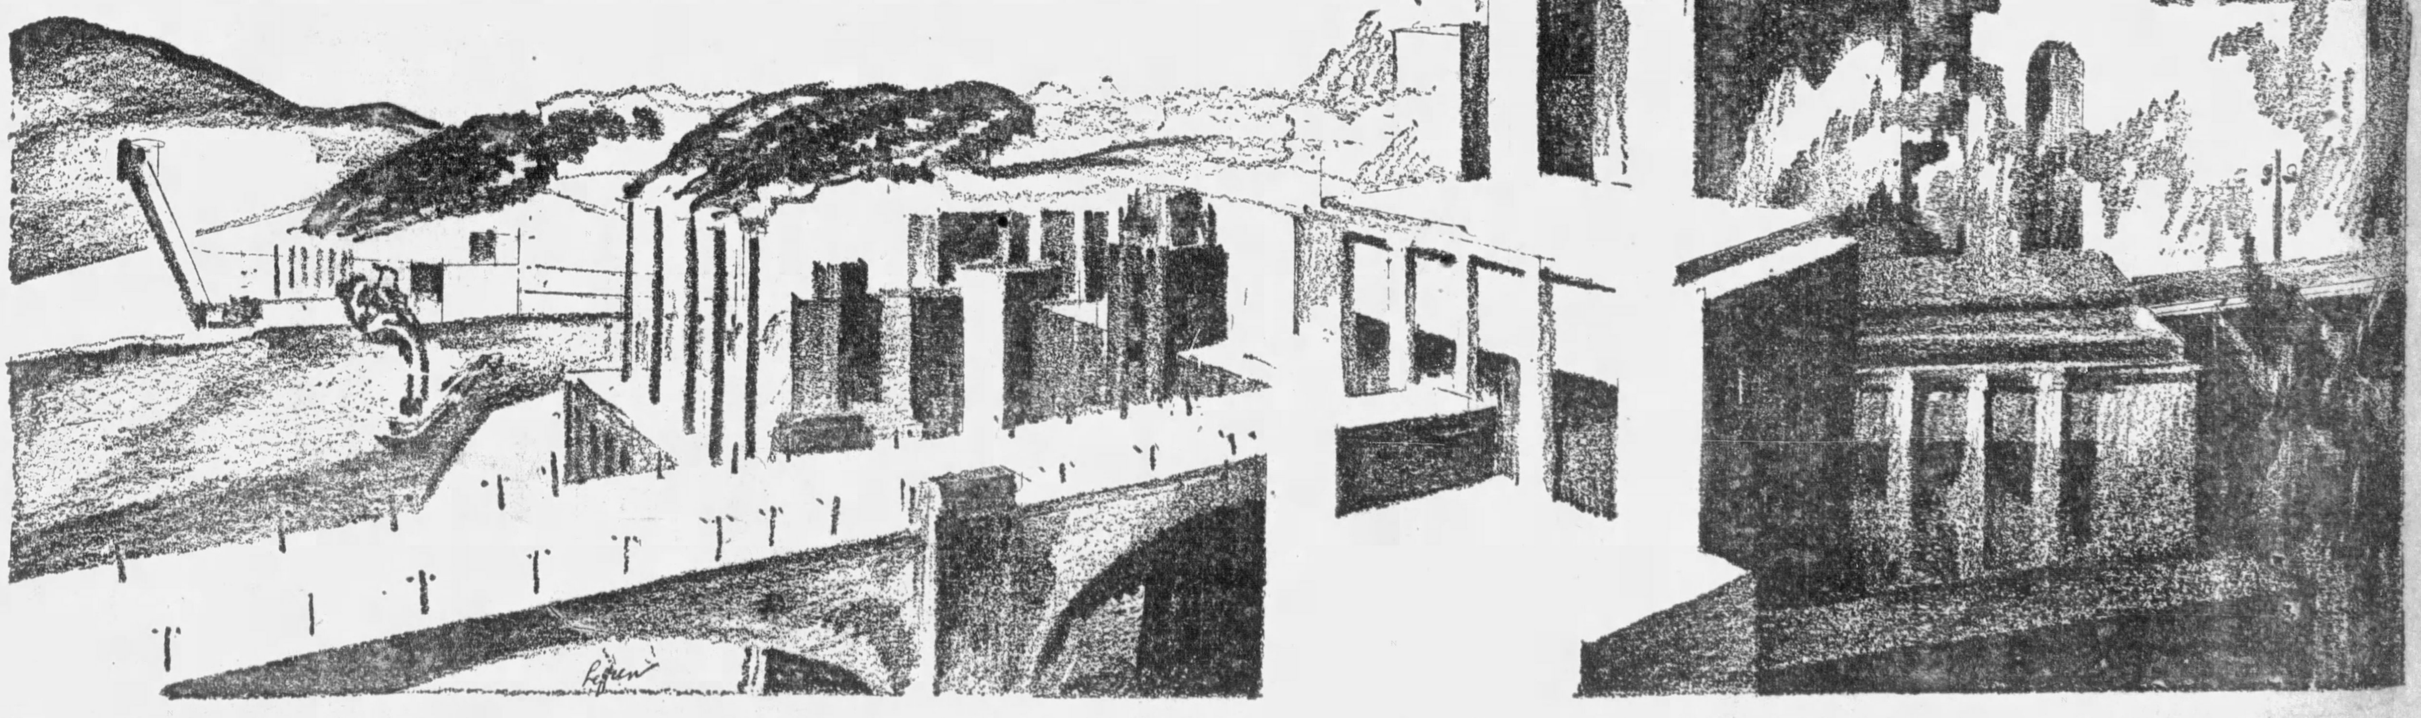
There is more money earned. The logical assumption is that there is more to be spent. Display your wares to the world's most lucrative market through the Sun-Telegraph.

Tell Your Story to Pittsburgh Buyers Through

THE SUN-TELEGRAPH

Bank clearings represent "money spent." The importance of bank clearings is generally taken to be an accurate barometer of business and commercial, as well as industrial condition. The 1929 estimate of $10,000,000,000.00 coincides with other favorable indices of Pittsburgh's prosperity.





AUTOMOBILE NEWS

NEW ERSKINE MAKES DEBUT, ON SHOW HERE

Latest Studebaker Product Has Striking Beauty, Generous Dimensions.

A new Studebaker product, hailed as the "dynamic New Erskine," has arrived in Pittsburgh. Advance showings of the new Erskine model, which is to be officially introduced to the world at the New York automobile show January 4, are being made by the Studebaker Sales Company of Pittsburgh, 4724 Baum boulevard.

The new Erskine is typically Studebaker throughout. It is a car of striking beauty and generous dimensions, high speed and great power, riding ease and low-swung smartness. And according to advance data on the car it combines all the much wanted attributes of a fine automobile. It is priced within the less-than-a-thousand-dollars field.

114-INCH CHASSIS

The car, mounted on a 114-inch wheelbase chassis, is powered with a six-cylinder motor of the removable L-head type. It has a piston displacement of 205 cubic inches and develops 70 horsepower at 3,200 revolutions a minute. The pistons, of cast iron, and the connecting rods, of drop-forged steel, are matched in sets for perfect balance. The heavy drop-forged crankshaft, statically and dynamically balanced with counter-weights, is drilled for passage of oil to the bearings, which are babbitted direct to steel. Valves are chrome nickel steel for intake and silchrome steel for exhaust. The motor is mounted on rubber at four points to minimize transfer of vibration to the body. A Lanchester vubrat/n damper also is used.

Exhaust gases from the motor are carried off through a new Burgess Acoustic muffler, which absorbs sound waves while offering little or no resistance to the passage of burned gases. The new muffler is said to eliminate all back pressure on the motor and to increase the speed and power of the car.

PRESSURE OIL FEED

A full pressure lubrication feed supplies oil to all important points in the motor simultaneously. The employment of an oil filter and a crankcase ventilating system is declared to make changes of oil unnecessary except at 2,500-mile intervals. A semi-automatic choke control also prevents dilution of oil in the crankcase.

An improved single plate dry disc clutch with torsional damper which suppresses vibration makes for smooth clutch engagement in the new car. Transmission, in unit with clutch and motor, is of the selective type, standard shift. The rear axle is semi-floating with chrome molybdenum steel.

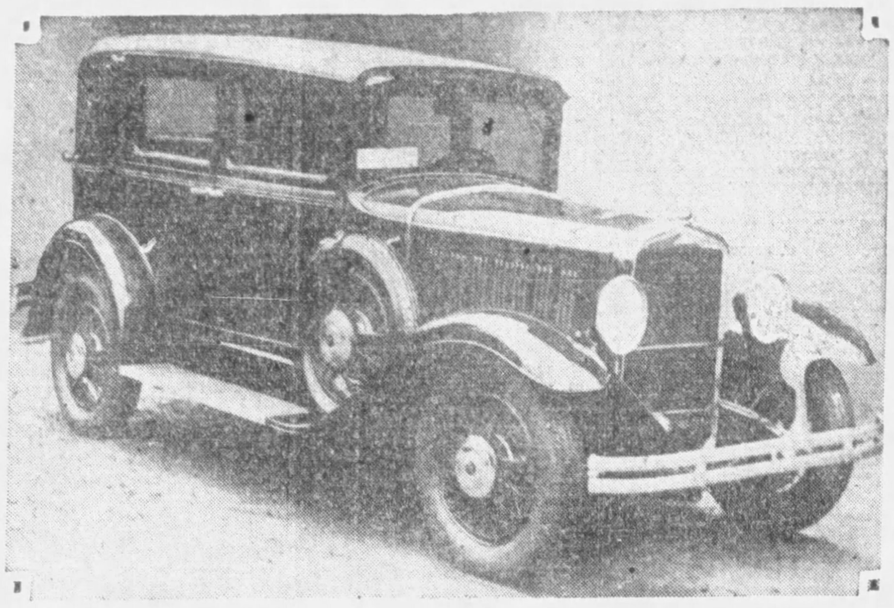
Semi-elliptic springs with self-adjusting shackles, Du-Servo mechanical four-wheel brakes and cam and lever type steering gear are utilized. The frame is of the double drop design, contributing low body lines and safety.

TAPERED BEARINGS

Tapered roller bearings are employed at 12 points throughout the car. These bearings absorb not only radial loads and friction, but thrust loads as well, such as are thrown upon the chassis members by rough roads and turns at high speed.

Mohair, broadcloth and leather are used in the upholstery of the various models and front seats and the steering column are adjustable. Other features of equipment include tilt beam headlights, chromium plating on exterior brightwork, rubber covered brake and clutch pedals, one-turn caps on radiator and gas tank, full ventilating windshield, indirectly illuminated instrument board and electric ignition lock.

NEWEST ERSKINE SHOWN HERE



LANDAU—This landau model of the Dynamic New Erskine is a commodious five-passenger car of smart distinction. Upholstery is of rich mohair or broadcloth over deep cushion springs, with padded arm rests. A robe rail, foot rest, dome light, silken rear curtains, and silvered smoking case conveniently recessed in the back of the front seat add to the luxury of the interior. The front seats are adjustable.

GRAHAM GROUP ENDS CONTEST

Despite the reports of business depression following the recent slump in the stock market, Graham-Paige business in the Pittsburgh district during December has been double that for the same period last year.

The above statement was made by E. S. Carpenter, president of E. S. Carpenter, Inc., Graham-Paige distributor for the Pittsburgh territory, Thursday night at a gathering celebrating the close of a November-December sales contest. More than 100 dealers and their salesmen were guests of the Carpenter organizations.

The contest was conducted by the Carpenter wholesale department, under the direction of G. A. Cain, wholesale manager, and R. T. Lingle and William H. Rose, road travelers. It resulted in 199 used car sales and 76 new car sales.

Mr. Cain officiated as toastmaster and informal talks were given by Mr. Cain, Mr. Carpenter and a number of the guests. Entertainment was provided by an orchestra. A feature of the program was a boxing match of four two-minute rounds between two small brothers, Bill and Pete Klinger. The match was a draw. Refreshments were served.

During the evening a Graham-Paige Legion ring was presented Lou Borella, of the Park Avenue Motor Company, Monongahela, for obtaining the highest number of points in the contest. The ring was presented by the Graham-Paige factory. Other winners in the contest were: John Overheim, G. A. Reich, Jr., George L. Miller, Stanley A. Kenney, R. J. Bauman, David Shick, A. M. Thompson, Lloyd Bowser, William Dickerson, Joseph Yurgelites, Joseph Spartz, Clyde Thomas, Louis Bruckman, Joseph Huber, Jack Rhodes, Bill Steinbeck, Mat Kiefer, J. F. Patterson, Bill Smail, Willard Gleason, Bob Beveridge and A. G. Eiben.

Chevrolet Breaks Production Marks, 1,350,000 for 1929

DETROIT, Dec. 21.—Surpassing by 150,000 cars and trucks its previous record annual achievement, the Chevrolet Motor Company, this year, will manufacture 1,350,000 automobiles, it was announced at the central offices here today. Due to the tremendous popularity of the six-cylinder car, introduced a year ago, 1929 will be by a wide margin the greatest year in Chevrolet history.

Chevrolet officials announce that daily, weekly and monthly production records were broken over and over again during 1929. Perhaps the most significant achievement of Chevrolet this year was the placing of a million cars on the road in less than eight months. Although the first Chevrolet six did not go onto the streets until last January first, there were a million in owner operation early last August.

An all-time monthly production mark was set in May, when the Chevrolet factories built 160,895 cars. A new high monthly record was established in every month except January.

The consistency with which Chevrolet production has gained annually in recent years may be noted from the following annual production figures:

1924	309,000
1925	510,000
1926	728,000
1927	1,001,000
1928	1,200,000
1929	1,350,000

SEGRAVE ENTRY IN BOAT RACES

Maj. Sir Henry O. D. Segrave, conqueror of Commodore Gar Wood's Miss America VII, at Miami Beach and Lido, Italy, and holder of the world's automobile speed record of 231.362 miles an hour, will be a participant in Detroit's fourteenth annual international regatta.

Maj. Segrave will come to Detroit next fall for the regatta, August 29 to September 2, to participated in a new international class and will bring two boats for the affair. Secretary J. Lee Barrett, of the Yachtsmen's Association of America, who has just returned from Europe, reports that he will also bring a boat to compete for the British International Trophy, but to date the famous English speed merchant has not committed himself by officially challenging for the world's championship speed boat trophy.

Whether Maj. Segrave formally challenges for the British International Trophy or not, Detroit is to have the fifteenth running of this famous trophy given in 1902 by the late Lord Northcliffe, as Miss Marion Barbara Carstairs, who raced against Commodore Gar Wood and James Talbot, Jr., of Los Angeles, in 1928 and 29 is building one or two boats in England for the British International Trophy. Should Maj. Segrave also enter, it will be the first time since the Harmsworth Trophy came back to the United States in 1920 that a full English team with three boats has competed against the United States team.

PRESIDED

W. B. Sawyer

J. S. Calhoun

AT CONVENTION—W. B. Sawyer, assistant general sales manager, Oakland Motor Car Company, and J. S. Calhoun, Pittsburgh manager for Oakland, presided at a convention of 250 Oakland-Pontiac dealers here Friday. The auto industry faces the future with increasing optimism, Mr. Sawyer told the dealers in discussing 1930 sales plans.

Old Spark Plugs Reduce Horsepower

Tests show that a motor in which spark plus had been used for more than 12,000 miles developed 31.2 horsepower, when run at an engine speed equivalent to 20 miles an hour. The same motor run at the same speed equipped with a new set of plugs gave a horsepower reading of 38.0, an increase of 6.8 horsepower.

Town Named After Indian Grave Marker

Legend offers many explanations as to how Painted Post, N. Y., on the Susquehanna Trail, got its name. One is that when white pioneers penetrated the wilderness of Western New York state, they found standing a post eight feet high and painted in bright colors, marking the grave of Chief Montour, a great Seneca Indian. But another story is that the post was covered with the blood of white vicitms killed by the red men in a massacre.

Starter Big Help In Hand Cranking

If cranking the engine by hand is necessary, the job can be made easier if the crank operator can get an assisistant to step on the starter at the same time. It splits the drain on the battery and that on the user of the crank. It also means greater speed and quicker starting.

Odor From Heater Easily Removed

If the new heater shows signs of giving off an annoying odor of burning paint, the situation can be remedied quickly. One good run with the heater on full blast and all the windows down will burn off the surplus paint.

Block Auto Wheels When Using Jack

When using a jack on a slippery surface, as many motorists do in winter, it pays to block the other wheels with stones in addition to setting the brakes. It is a double assurance against the car slipping off the jack.

Clean Drip Pan May Prevent Fire

The drip pan under the engine should be kept clean. The absence of old oil and gasoline may prevent a destructive fire should there be a back fire, due to lean mixture of the carburetor.

MYSTERY EIGHT 'LEVELS' STEEP CITY STREETS

V-Type Motor Climbs Negley And Tokio With Ease; Has 'Square' Engine.

By H. W. DIETRICH,
Automobile Editor.

That automotive performance will take on a new significance with the introduction of 1930 cars next month was indicated in the performance of a new eight-cylinder motor car in this city during the last week.

The new eight, which until the present had been one of the most popular of the six-cylinder cars, has a reserve of power that will astonish even the most fastidious operator. This new car will be one of the features of the national automobile show in New York and until that time its name is one of the closely-guarded secrets of the automotive industry.

FROM RIGHT TURN

With the writer and three others as passengers, the new car was driven up the tortuous grade of South Negley avenue in high gear at a speed that left no doubt as to its mechanical ability. The extent of its ability becomes even more amazing when it is understood that the drive up South Negley avenue was made on a right turn from Fifth avenue.

And then, as if to convince the passengers that the Negley avenue grade was just so many feet of roadway, the car was driven up Tokio street, which has a grade of slightly under 20 per cent, at a speed of more than 30 miles an hour. This run also was made with four passengers.

HAS SHORT STROKE

The motor of this mystery car is of the V-type and is unique in that it is of "square design." A square motor, in the parlance of the industry, means that that motor has a stroke that is shorter than the width of the bore. And in this car the stroke is 1-16 of an inch less than the width of the bore. According to reports that come from Detroit the development of the "square" motor, which is said to offer untold possibilities in performance, has been the result of many years of intensive research.

The new eight further differs from its six-cylindered predecessor in that it has a roof line that is lower than in the six. The body also is hung closer to the ground, increasing its roadability. In the run last week, over wet street surfaces, short turns were made to get the car into a skid, but in all attempts the four wheels held firm contact with the street surface. The motor also displayed a quick pickup and get-away in the congested business districts. It has a downdraft carburetor.

Standard Parts Best For All Replacements

It is poor economy to replace broken parts with substitutes that sell at lower prices than the car manufacturers themselves charge for corresponding parts. These copies of the original are in some instances of excellent quality, but in other cases they prove unsatisfactory and have obtained the rather unsavory but expressive name of "bootleg" parts. The imitation too often falls below the genuine part, as to quality of material—which affords reliability and wear resistance — in the treatment and preparation of the material for the particular service required of it and in the accuracy of its dimensions. "Bootleg" replacement parts very often do not fit properly, with correct clearances, and do not give the safe and satisfactory service that do genuine parts that embody the extensive technical experience of the engineers who designed them.

Set New Record In Garage Building

Erection of the steel work of the first unit in a chain of automatic skyscraper garages has just been completed in Chicago in the record time of 43 days by the Starrett Building Company of Chicago. The new 29-story structure, which will have capacity for more than 1,000 cars, will be devoted solely to the parking of automobiles, which will be handled on three double elevators by the Kent Parking Unit System. The National Parking Garages, which was organized by a group of public utility men of New York City, will be the owners of the chain.

Jamming of Wheels Highly Injurious

Care should be taken never to run the car into the curb or against any protruding object that is liable to jar the front wheel sharply, which may bend the tire rod or steering knuckle arm. In the event of such an accident, it will be necessary to either straighten the old parts or replace them with new ones. When such repair has been done, see that the front wheels are lined correctly to give better control and less excess wear on tires.

Close Check on Oil Will Protect Motor

While the pressure gauge on the instrument board will indicate the action of the pump in the force system of lubrication, it will not tell the proper amount of oil in the crank case. For the proper level it is necessary to look at the oil level indicator, and this should be done at least every time the gas tank is filled. Many an engine has been badly damaged simply because the amount of oil in the crank case has been misjudged.

Rugged Design of Tread Gives Tires Longer Life

That part of an automobile tire that touches the ground is called the tread. It is designed primarily to absorb direct road wear, and to give the car a secure foothold on the roadway.

There are at least two major factors that enter into a good tire tread: Material and design.

The material must be selected carefully so that the same uniform high grade is used at all times. The rubber must be taken from the best plantations, tested for quality, and correctly blended to assure absolute uniformity.

Likewise the chemicals that are mixed with this rubber to vulcanize it properly and produce a tough, wear-resisting compound, must be selected and checked with great care.

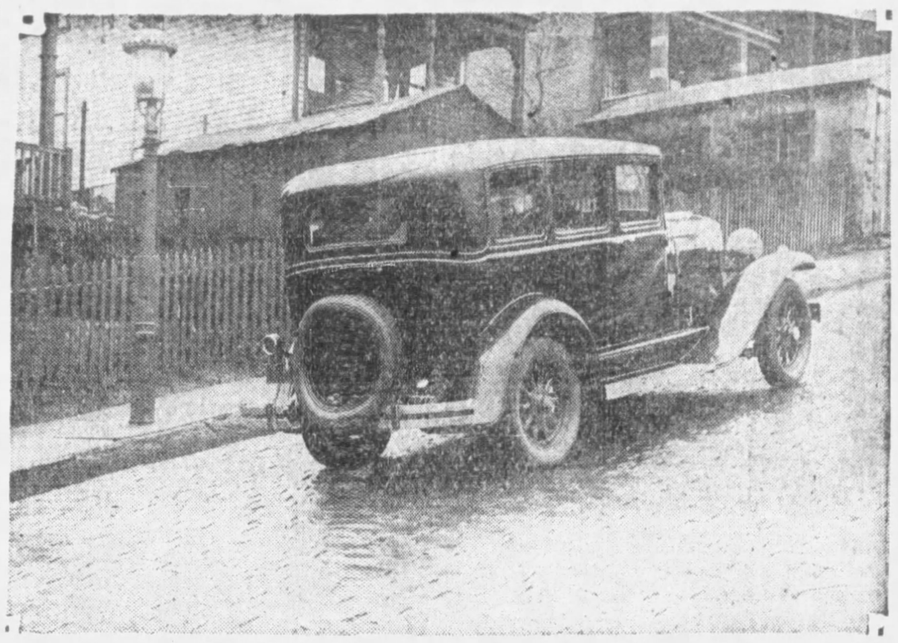
These materials are weighed out item by item for each tire tread. Then the total "mix" is weighed again and its weight must exactly equal the combined weights of the individual ingredients that have made it up. If there is any variation, that "mix" is discarded.

From that point on design enters into the tread. Even the finest materials cannot give the tire buyer proper performance unless the tread design is correct.

The tread design must protect the carcass from excessive strains. Yet it must have sharp enough angles and corners, and a deep enough design to grip the road securely. These angles and designs on the tread must run in such a relation to each other that they balance the grip on the road and do not cause the tire to have a tendency to run or slide sideways, but rather to grip and hold the tread of the tire to the road in a true, straight course.

Tire treads smooth like the feet of a barefoot boy will probably wear fairly well. But when they can be made rugged like the design on athletic footwear, they can grip better and wear longer.

NEW EIGHT "LEVELS" HILLS



IN HIGH—In this picture is shown a new eight-cylinder car that will be introduced early next month. The car was driven over the tortuous grades of South Negley avenue and Tokio street in high gear with four passengers last week.

MANY CHANGES IN 1930 LINES

By RAY PRIEST,
Staff Correspondent Universal Service and Sun-Telegraph.

DETROIT, Dec. 21. — Two weeks from today the curtain will be pulled back on the most important annual event in the automobile industry—its first national show of the year.

The public will see assembled in Grand Central Palace, in New York, more new lines of automobiles than have been brought together since 1922, when about 60 manufacturers showed 50 new lines of cars in January, in the Armory in New York.

At New York there will be 32 manufacturers of passenger cars and two makers of taxicabs. Only 29 years ago the industry boasted 310 manufacturers of passenger cars. The manufacturers showed new models regularly once a year, mostly at the national show in New York.

The year 1922 was the last at which a majority of manufacturers showed new models. It was the next year that Dodge Brothers started its momentous campaign of "no new yearly models." Many manufacturers either followed or dropped their policy of widely heralding new models annually.

The number of new cars at the national shows in New York and Chicago dwindled down until three years ago there were only 14 new lines of cars shown. Two years ago there were 21 new lines of cars, but last year most all of the manufacturers beat the gun in the race to show new models and there were hardly any really new cars to see at either New York of Chicago.

Oldsmobile Fetes Staff at Annual Christmas Party

The Oldsmobile Pittsburgh Company entertained its employes and their families and friends at its third annual Christmas party last night. The entertainment was held in the company's headquarters at 424 North Craig street.

The large executive and sales quarters were appropriately decorated for the season. Beautifully ornamented Christmas trees, holly, wreaths, moss and artificial snow made it an ideal location for the greeting of Santa Claus by the guests. Games of all kinds were played by young and old, and a special dance program was presided over by a well known orchestra. Other entertainment features were presented by talented members of the company's staff.

Austin Production Begins February

DETROIT, Dec. 21.—The bantam Austin, a small car of distinctive smartness, unique in size, weight and performance, will go into production in February at the Butler (Pa.) plant of the company, according to C. A. Best, general sales manager of the American Austin Car Company here.

Although the new body designs that will feature the little car are closely guarded secrets, the Austin, it is indicated, will be smart without loss of comfort or utility, 25 per cent smaller in size than any other established model in the small-car field; will give twice the mileage per gallon of gasoline, one-third the operating and upkeep cost of the average small car, a 40-inch tread and a 75-inch wheelbase, 40 and 50 miles on a gallon of fuel, and will require but one quart of oil for every 1,500 miles.

NEW HUDSON TO BE EIGHT

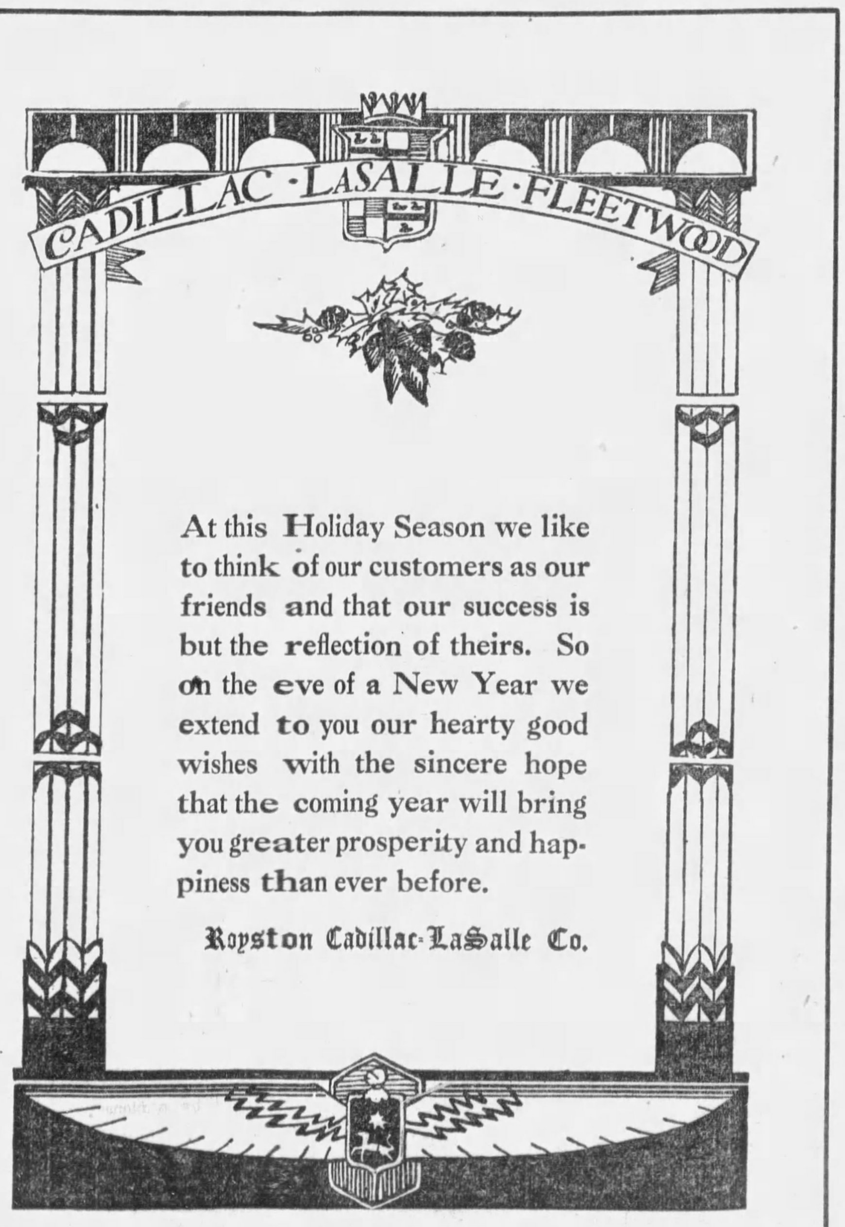
That Hudson will be an eight-cylinder car with the beginning of the next year was the message brought from Detroit by a delegation of 77 Western Pennsylvania Hudson-Essex dealers last week. The dealers had visited the factory under the guidance of J. R. Pierpoint, president of the Pierpoint Motor Company, Hudson-Essex distributor for Western Pennsylvania.

According to the dealers Hudson engineers have made a radical departure from the practices of the industry in motor and car building. They picture the new car as a revelation in beauty, power and speed. Despite the increase of two cylinders in the size of the motor, piston displacement is no larger than in the six-cylinder engine. This, with other new features, has made for an unusually low gasoline consumption, although the engine delivers 80 horsepower, members of the delegation reported.

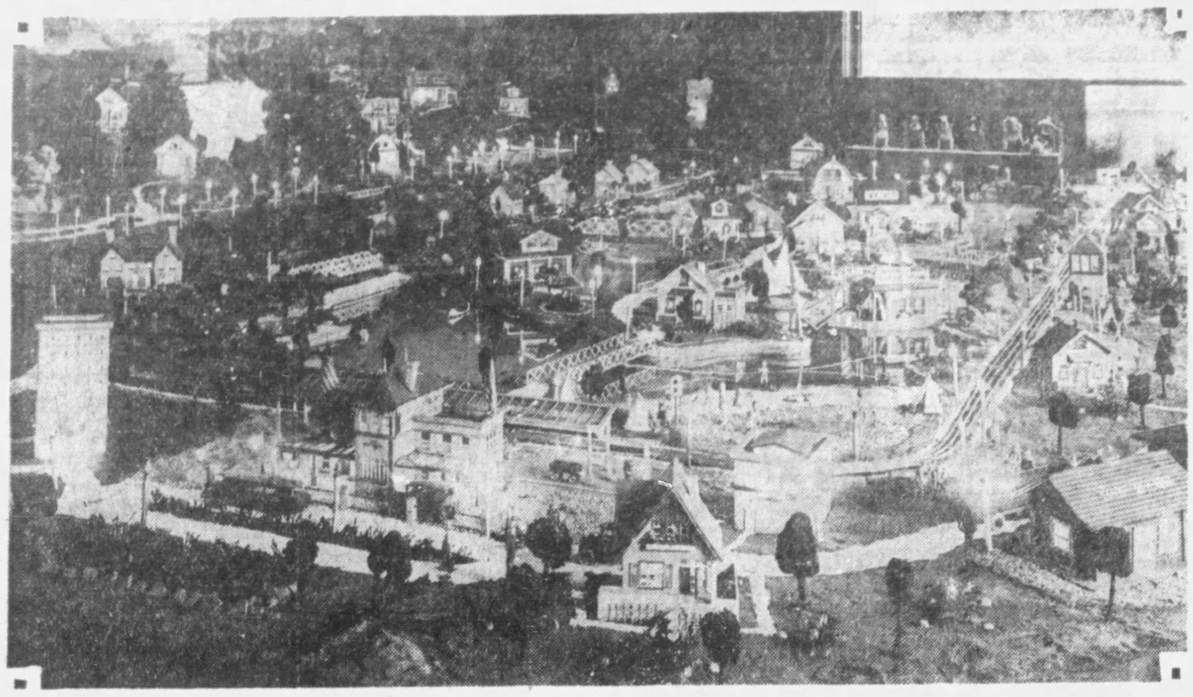
The new car is said to be the result of many years of research work and has been tested and proven on the roads of the nation under every condition during the last two years.

Nash to Increase Prices January 1

KENOSHA, Wis., Dec. 21.—Increased prices, effective January 1, are announced by C. W. Nash, president, Nash Motors Company. Increases range from $20 to $140 a model, and cover all three series, single six, twin-ignition six and twin-ignition eight.



PACKARD CHRISTMAS DISPLAY ATTRACTS THOUSANDS



MOST ELABORATE—With a life-like Santa Claus telling in his own way the story of Tommy, the Cat, a mechanical circus and a realistic boxing match as features, the annual Christmas display of the Packard Motor Company of Pittsburgh is attracting thousands of Pittsburghers. The display includes snow capped mountains, Niagara Falls, a forest fire and numerous villages, farm yards, streams, lakes, islands and a railroad and moving boulevard. It is open daily.

MOTOR HEATING WINTER PERIL

Most automobile motors operate with greatest efficiency when the temperature of the fluid in the cooling system averages about 180 degrees Fahrenheit. Running the car at low temperature results in wasted fuel, crankcase dilution, increased wear and poorer all-round performance, says a bulletin of the Glycerine Producers' Association. To avoid these difficulties, the association urges the motorist to watch his motometer just as closely in winter as in summer.

Drivers who use the type of motometer placed on the radiator cap should remember that the motometer registers the temperature of the air above the contents of the radiator and not, as many suppose, the temperature of the cooling fluid. Outdoor temperatures easily affect this air pocket, and in order to maintain the proper temperature of from 160 to 180 degrees in the water jacket it is necessary to take this outdoor temperature into consideration.

When the mercury hovers between 32 and 40 degrees outside, about one-third of the red liquid should show; in zero weather the red should barely show above the bottom of the gauge. At no time during cold weather should this type of motometer be allowed to reach the "summer average" mark. If the radiator cover is kept closed on a very cold day until the radiator cap motometer indicates "summer average," the average temperature of the liquid in a cooling system will be that of the boiling point of water.

Contact Brushes Should Be Cleaned

It frequently happens that an automobile will stop suddenly and all attempts to "make it go" will prove ineffective. Battery and all other parts of the ignition, the magneto and spark plugs seem to be in good conditoin, and yet the car will not "spark." In this case the fault probably lies in the contact brushes of the magneto. A small particle of dirt, getting under the contact brush, will effectively stop the car.

Second Gear Starting Is Bad Practice

Starting in second gear is the motorist's answer to the limitation which has forced the car maker—in some cases—to use a very slow low gear. On the level, the practice is not a bad one. Unless the motorist is watchful, however, it will become a habit and he will be trying it on grades where low should be used. Before he knows it he will be slipping the clutch in order to make second do the work of low.

Splash of White Guards White Wing

Because of the dark blue smocks worn by street cleaners, which blended with the murk and mist of the night in London, England, workers are ordered to place a white panel down the back of their uniforms. By this plan they will be able to do their best work with little fear of being run over by motor cars.

Quick Pickup Aids Traffic Congestion

With authorities in many cities and states endeavoring to speed up traffic by acting against the slow driver,traffic experts generally are emphasizing the importance of quick pick-up and getaway in automobiles as a factor in relieving traffic congestion.

Good Safety Rules For Winter Driving

For the sake of safety in winter driving, the motorist should:

Go into low or second gear when descending a steep, slippery grade.

Never try to rush traffic lights when the chance of safe stopping is so diminished.

Eagles Mere Lake's Source Is Mystery

The lake at Eagles Mere, famous Central Pennsylvania summer resort, a few miles from the Susquehanna Trail, is totally unlike other lakes of the region. It has no visible inlet and receives very little surface drainage.

Automobile Captures Place on Gift Lists

THIS year, more than ever, automobiles will be on the Christmas gift list.

That is important because it means more business and more happiness. The joy brought by the gift will be multiplied many times over, for more than one person has the use of an automobile.

In the case of families it will be multiplied at least fivefold, sometimes more.

One need not be more than an ordinary observer to see the sensibility of the automobile as a gift, nor to realize that the family with only one car is very nearly as much out of date as was the family of five years ago without any car at all.

If the family car is an obsolete one with antiquated brakes and insufficient flexibility to meet the demands of today's traffic; if it is several years old and hence afflicted with hard steering, producing fatigue, then it is time to play Santa Claus to yourself or your family with a modern car.

Never were automobiles less expensive than today, never were their upkeep costs lower, never were they so near mechanical perfection and never has there been so much need for those excellent virtues as now, with cities spread all over the landscape and friends and relatives living far from us. And never have roads been so good and so many scenic recreation areas been made available to the motorized family.

Think those things over when you are striving to make the family happy at Christmas time. And be glad that today's prosperity, unshaken even by the recent stock market crashes, permits you to decide to buy a motor car.

RULES of the ROAD

(Hundreds of queries are received daily by the Bureau of Motor Vehicles, of Harrisburg, relating to road rules and the Motor Code. In the belief that the questions and their answers will solve problems which puzzle motorists in general, Commissioner Benjamin G. Eynon, of the Motor Vehicle Bureau, will present a number of them in the Sun-Telegraph each week. The information herein contained is, of course, official.)

Q. Why do some drivers swing to the left two or three feet when passing another vehicle, while other drivers seem able to pass with a clearance of only a few inches? I mean, of course, passing a car going in the same direction.

A. Doubtless an excess of caution or, perhaps, inability to gauge distance. Occasionally you will observe a driver who, passing an empty car or truck parked off the traveled portion of the highway, swings to the left several feet. Possibly he fears the driverless vehicle may jump sideways at him. In heavy traffic the driver unable to gauge distance becomes more or less a menace. It might be suggested to such drivers that they find an open space in which to "practice" passing objects at the right. Of course, faulty vision may be responsible for the wide swings of the sort of driver you mention, but if vision is faulty to the extent indicated the individual may not be entitled to drive a car at all.

Q. Does the Bureau of Motor Vehicles ever issue license transfers free of charge?

A. Yes; when registration for the ensuing year, issued in the current year, is transferred prior to January 1.

Q. What is the legal minimum age for the operator of a car used as a school bus? (b) For the operator of a motor bus or omnibus? (c) What is the life of a learner's permit?

A. (a) Twenty-one years. (b) Twenty-one years. (c) According to law, 60 days, but the bureau allows an additional five days.

Q. If the operator of a motor vehicle makes application for three or four duplicate operator's card, saying he wishes to carry them in different cars—or in different suits of clothes—will the Bureau issue such cards? (b) Should operator's card be carried in the car?

A. (a) Yes; the fee for each is 50 cents. (b) No; the operator should carry his card.

Q. What is the fee for reissue of motorcycle dealer's tags? (b) For registration of a vehicle equipped with metal tires? (c) For registration of an electric truck weighing 15,000 pounds? (d) For dealer's license plates after August 1? (e) For Motor vehicle dealer's plates? (f) For motorcycle dealer's plates? (g) For traction engine dealer's plates? (h) For transfer of traction engine registration? (i) For title certificate for a finance company? (j) For a 2,000-pound motor vehicle trailer with two rubber tires and two metal?

A. (a) Fifty cents. (b) Double the ordinary registration fee. (c) $45. (d) There are no reductions for dealers after August 1. (e) $25 per set for first two sets; $5 for each additional set. (f) $5 per registration. (g) $25 for first registration; $2 for each additional. (h) $2. (i) Fifty cents, except in case of assigned T-1, when no fee is required. (j) $30.

Q. The Motor Code says a licensed operator must accompany a person driving a car or truck under a learner's permit. How is this possible when the learner is driving a motorcycle or motor-bicycle?

A. It is not required in the latter instance.

Q. Is it necessary for the son of a tractor owner, if the son is not paid for his service, to have a tractor driver's license?

A. Every person, including registered tractor owner, must have a tractor operator's license before driving such a vehicle.

Q. Does the Motor Code make any provision tending to safeguard pedestrians who, when crossing a congested thoroughfare after getting the green light, are menaced by motor vehicles making right turns into that thoroughfare?

A. The Motor Code does not mention this hazard. It will continue to exist, doubtless, until municipalities by ordinance do away with pedestrian crossings as now established, and defined by the Motor Code as "that portion of a highway (or street) included within the prolongation of curb and property lines at intersections." In the opinion of this bureau the time will come when in congested sections of municipalities pedestrian crossings will be established 30 or 40 feet away from the actual highway intersection. These will be clearly indicated by lines or other markings, and the rights of the pedestrian at such crossings will be the same as at present. He will not only have right of way, when legally in the cartway, but the location of the crossing will protect him from the danger you mention—that of being run down by machines making right or left turns. So far as we know, no municipality as yet has taken this decidedly forward step. The innovation awaits only adoption by a pioneer.

Q. Is it true that certain holders of "O," or omnibus tags do not have a certificate of public convenience from the Public Service Commission?

A. Yes, but these operators were in business prior to January of 1914, when the Public Service Commission requirement became effective.

CROWDS SEE PACKARD SHOW

A visit to the showroom of the Packard Motor Company, 4709 Baum boulevard, during the present holiday season is, for the children, much like a visit to Fairyland. There, on a floor area that is as large as that of a small sized bungalow, the Packard company has built its annual Christmas display.

The display is more elaborate than ever and has a maze of details. A lifelike Santa Claus who rolls his eyes and his head and tells in his own way the story of Tommy, the Cat, looks out over miniature villages and landscaped islands. In the background are snow capped mountains, a forest fire and Niagara Falls. There is a wide boulevard crowded with all types of vehicles that are constantly on the move. There also is a miniature railroad with a complete set of automatic signals. The railroad circles a large lake studded with islands and all about are scenes of the city and the country district. And all through the display there are many score of illuminated lamp posts.

Two other features of the display are a mechanical circus that performs just like those of real life and a small boxing ring with the contestants in strenuous action.

Although the display has been open only a few days, it has already been viewed by thousands of the city's children and their adult relatives. The Packard organization extends a general welcome to all to view the display, which is open each day, including Sunday until 10 p. m.

Open Windows Aid In Safe Driving

In event of an accident, many are inclined to accept as obviously guilty the car owner whose windows were closed in such a manner as to prevent the giving of a signal. It is a point to be kept in mind during cold weather when the tendency is to keep the window closed. If comfort does seem to demand such a thing, it is better to be uncomfortable—and safe—especially when driving on congested areas.

Regular Lubrication Stops 'Freezing'

In addition to making the car run more efficiently and last longer there is a third advantage to regular chassis lubrication that counts for more than is realized. That is that it makes the job about twice as simple because there is no "freezing" nor clogging of the connections through which the lubricant reaches bushings, bearings and the like.

Rubber Prevents Wood From Decay

Running boards are usually guarded on the top by a rubber covering, and the edges protected by a thin strip of metal. If these protective steps were not taken, the running boards, those made of wood, would rot quickly. To prevent this difficulty, replace the rubber or composition coat when it is worn and keep the metal strip in place.

Police Keep Old Car Owners Moving

A special police guard has been formed in New York to keep the streets of Queens Borough clear of abandoned automobiles. Their duty is to patrol the principal highways and order owners of dilapidated cars to move on.

Ice Often Blocks Windshield Cleaner

During a cold rain or wet snow always start the windshield cleaner going immediately. Drivers who wait until the glass is covered often find that ice already has formed.

Tour of Gettysburg Covers 30 Miles

The battlefield of Gettysburg, on the Susquehanna Trail, contains 25 square miles, or about 16,000 acres. A tour over it covers a mileage of about 30 miles.

TRAVEL AND RESORT INFORMATION

EUROPE PLANS GALA EVENTS FOR NEXT YEAR

Festivals and Tournaments To Feature 1930 Season In European Resorts.

T. J. Worthman, resident manager of the American Express office in Pittsburgh, says that 1930 will be the most interesting year in Europe that Americans who span the Atlantic have ever experienced. Though there are always things stirring abroad, the events scheduled for 1930—festivals, art exhibits, carnivals, fairs, tournaments—promise to overshadow all former years.

Seville, where winter never comes, and is therefore a great favorite of the sunshine seekers, heralds the year by opening her World's Fair Exhibition in January, to continue until June. And at Barcelona an International Exhibit will hold forth until the late sprin.

Italy, also attracting visitors in the wintertime because of its delightful climate, has the famous Scale Theater at Milan to offer to music lovers who arrive in January. The opera will be open until May.

PRE-HISTORIC EXHIBITS

In Holland, the land tourists find so quaint and refreshing, after the gaudy capitals of Europe, throughout 1930 there will be an extremely interesting exhibit at Posterholt, near Roemond, of prehistoric articles excavated in the district.

In February, the gay carnivals of the French Riviera take place, and the fashionable throng who winter here revel in the Battle of Flowers and the Redoute Bals.

In Hungary's capital, lovely Budapest, through which winds the blue Danube, of Johan Strauss fame, the exhibition of Italian fine art will be held, from February 9 to March 24.

Sweden, land of long and quiet twilights, will be a bee-hive of interest throughout the year. The paintings of renowned Andrea Vern and George Pauli will be exhibited at the Liljevalch Art Gallery in Stockholm, the former in march and the latter in April.

PRINCE CHAIRMAN

The great decorative arts and handcrafts exhibition which will be held in Stockholm from May 18 to October 1 promises to become a unique experience for foreign visitors. Gustaphus Adolphus, the popular Crown Prince of Sweden, himself a connoisseur of art, is the chairman of the exposition committee.

Those who will be in Stockholm on April 24 will witness a great celebration of the people—the Nordenskiold Jubilee—as it will be the fiftieth anniversary of the valiant voyage of the Vega through the Northeast passage. And those there on May 28 will see the Midnight Sun at Abisko. This marvel of the northlands lasts for two months, until July 28.

When spring comes to Vienna, gay and musical capital of Austria, it will be welcomed by the spring fair in the week between March 9 to 16. And at nearby Salzburg the annual music and dramatic festival will be held in August.

FESTIVALS PLANNED

In Munich and Bayreuth, in Germany, the annual Wagnarian and Mozart operatic festivals will be held in July and August. At Bayreuth the performance will include Tannhauser, Parsifal and the Ring.

England will lure many tourists with the Shakespearean presentations given throughout the summer at Stratford-on-Avon, Shakespearean birthplace.

And Heidelberg, Germany's famous old university town, will also present Shakespearean plays, enacted out-of-doors on the ancient castle grounds.

In old Augsburg, founded by the Romans, there will be the celebration of the four hundredth anniversary of Lutheran Confession, June 19 to the 25 and September 21 to the 28; historical and cultural exhibitions will be open throughout the season. Protestants of all nations are preparing to visit this medieval stronghold.

PREPARE FOR PILGRIMAGE

Many Catholics are preparing for the pilgrimage to Carthage where the Eucharistic Congress will convene May 7 to 11. After some time spent in this ancient rival of Rome they will travel to Rome itself.

Another spectacle of not only Catholic, but great general interest, is the Passion Play which is to be performed from May to October in the charming Bavarian village of Oberammergau. This drama of the passion of Christ is enacted only every 10 years in perpetuation of a Seventeenth Century vow, and is performed by Bavarian peasants under the open sky.

There are numerous other events, all calculated to inject Americans with the Wanderlust virus, and make 1930 a great migration year.

'Empress of France' Establishes Record

LONDON, Dec. 21.—Canada won a new world's record with the arrival at Liverpool of the Canadian Pacific liner Empress of France, from Hongkong. The 18,500-ton liner, still in the white paint she wore on the Pacific service while replacing the Empress of Canada for the past year, left the China port with Capt. E. Griffiths, R. N. R., on the bridge, and traveled the 10,000 miles between Hongkong and Liverpool in 22 days, thus smashing all former records.

After a Mediterranean cruise starting from New York February 13, the Empress of France will return to her former run between Quebec and Southampton and Cherbourg.

TRIANGULAR TOURS BOOKED BY CUNARD LINE

Three Companies Co-operate With Cunard Line in Offer Of South American Tour

A new "grand tour," which will double the effectiveness of the older "grand tour of Europe" by adding a trip to South America, has been announced by the Cunard Line in conjunction with the Furness-Prince, Grace and Blue Star lines. Special rates for the new triangular tours are to be lower than the combined separate fares over the same route.

Shortest of the three triangular tours which have been planned will use the Furness-Prince Line to Rio de Janeiro, the Brazilian capital. From Rio, a Blue Star liner will make the second leg to Europe, and then a Cunarder will complete the tour to New York.

Buenos Aires is one of the goals of another tour with stopovers made at Santos, Brazilian coffee center, and at Montevideo, the Uruguayan capital. The trip to Europe will start from Buenos Aires.

A third triangular tour cuts through the Panama Canal, using ships of the Grace Line, and proceeds in leisurely fashion down the western coast of South America stopping at many curious little places like Salaverry, near the pre-Inca ruins at Chan-Chan, and Mollendo, as well as better known pices like Guayaquil.

Trees Reversed To Make Way for Wheel Chairs

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., Dec. 21.

NORTHERN tourists in this resort received a surprise here a few days ago when on setting out for the day they discovered that nearly one hundred cocoanut palm trees which previously inclined eastward over the lake front now leaned definitely to the west.

In building a new Afromobile or wheel chair trail along the shores of Lake Worth, city workmen found the natural eastward inclination of the palms would not allow clearance for the popular resort vehicles. During the night they uprooted the trees and reset them to lean to the west. The trees do not show signs of their unusual handling.

LLOYD LINER LOWERS TIME

According to cables received from Bremen the Lloyd express liner Columbus, newly fitted with turbines larger than those of the Bremen, completed her North Sea trial trip Sunday night after having made a speed of over 22 knots against a 70-mile gale.

This trial performance would indicate for the Columbus a regular running time between New York and Channel ports of six days, and of seven days to Bremen.

This speed places the Columbus among the 10 fastest liners in the service.

Railway Opens Through Service

Seaboard Air Line Railway announces the inauguration of the first and only daily through sleeping car line to Brunswick, Ga., beginning December 19. The increasing number of winter visitors and the nearby resorts of Sea Island Beach and Jekyl Island has warranted the addition of this service to the Seaboard's Southern States Special. It will be handled in conjunction with the Atlanta, Birmingham and Coast Railroad from Thalmann, Ga., to Brunswick. The Southern States Special leaves Washington, D. C., at 3:30 p. m. daily and arrives in Brunswick at 10:20 a. m. the following morning.

"THE VISION"—By Maurice Greiffenhagen—On Wednesday the Christian world will celebrate the Mass of Christ, or Christmas, the festival of the nativity of Jesus Christ. In this decorative painting, Greiffenhag[illegible]n, an English artist, shows his instinctive aptitude in the blending and harmonizing of colors. "The Vision" was shown in the 1922 Carnegie International Exhibition of Art, was purchased by the late Edward H. Bindley a[illegible]d hangs in the University Club.

Born in Hal, Pothast studied with his father, a celebrated portrait painter of Holland, and later went to Paris, where he studied under Alladee and Dupont. He is considered a worthy successor to Isreals, Bloomers and DeHoog and is represented at The Hague the Agnew Galleries, London, and other museums.

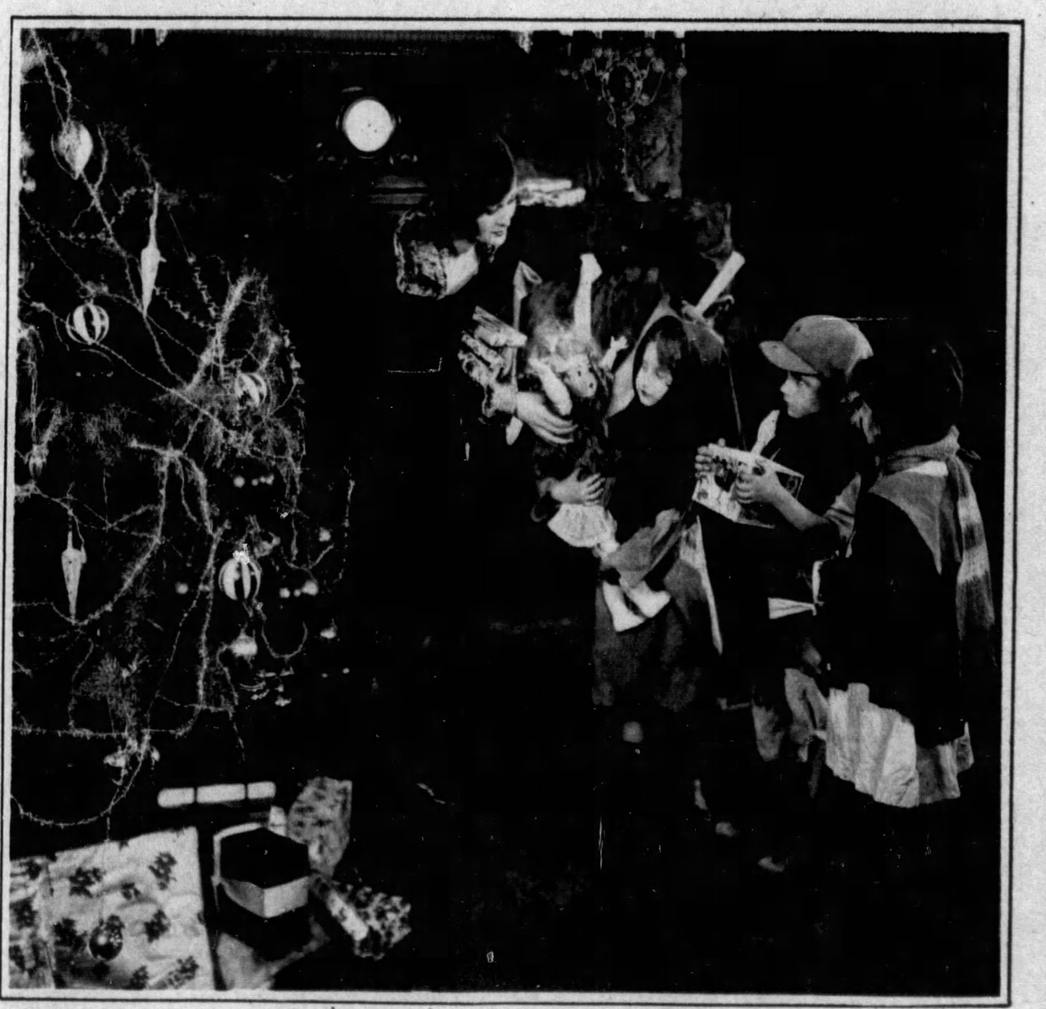
A HOLIDAY VISITOR IN PITTSBURGH—Miss Louise Proser, of New York and Atlantic City, niece of Arthur C. Kaufmann is a Christmas visitor at her uncle's home.



CHRISTMAS COMES BUT ONCE A YEAR—But with it comes joy to children and grown-ups, to children in receiving gifts of toys and candy and to grown-up children in giving and expressing love for those relatives and friends. A tree, heavily laden, such as the one shown above, is the happiest sight at this time of year.

"LA DAME AUX FLEURS" By Narcisse Virgilio Diaz—This painting, from the private collection of G. M. Francois, formerly hung in the Gallery Petite, Paris. Diaz, (1808-1876) one of the Barbizon school of painters, was a "tone artist". He is represented by several canvases in the Louvre. He was a friend of Theodore Rousseau, who taught him to paint forest pictures.

"PORTRAIT OF MRS. G. M. FRANCOIS" By H. J. Hildebrandt—This pleasing portrait of the wife of the violin connoisseur and collector was painted by Hildebrandt, a former Pittsburgh artist, now living in New York. Mr. and Mrs. Francois, who travel extensively, have a delightful collection of paintings in their Schenley Heights home.

CAMERA VISITING with PITTSBURGH KINDERGARTNERS

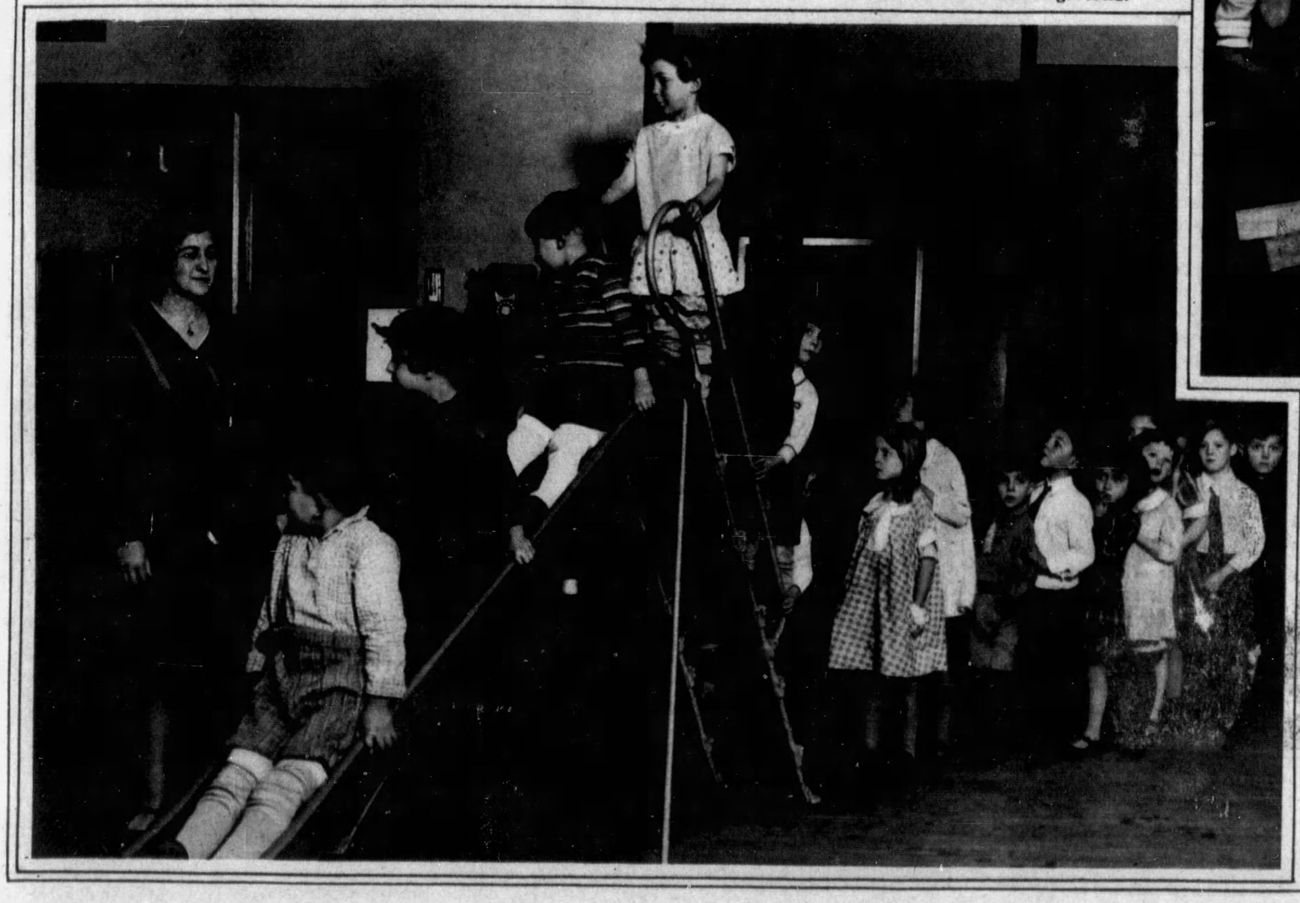
LIGHT LUNCH FOR KINDERGARTEN CHILDREN. In the majority of the 110 kindergarten schools in Pittsburgh a mid-morning repast of milk and perhaps crackers or an apple aids the little tots in healthful growth and happy play. Miss Nell Varner is shown with her pupils in Regent Square School, Henrietta and Milton Streets.

BRAVES THE WINTER. Robert James, one of the little kindergartners arriving at the Frick Elementary School, is helped out of his pantileggings by Miss Elizabeth Rankin, supervisor of the Pittsburgh School Kindergartens.

KINDERGARTEN PUPILS PLACE NUTS IN TREES FOR THE SQUIRRELS OF FRICK WOODS—At the Regent Square School the little pupils help the animals to eat through the winter.



BUILDING BIG HOUSES There are more than 8,000 kindergartners between the ages of four and six in the Pittsburgh Public Schools and they attend class from 9 to 11:30 in the mornings. This picture was taken at the Regent Square School.

WHAT FUN WE HAVE! Organized play, and the inculcating of appreciation for art and things beautiful, take up the time at the Pittsburgh kindergartens, where the city's youngest students attend. Miss Marie E. Wahl, of the Frick Training School, is shown with some of her little charges.

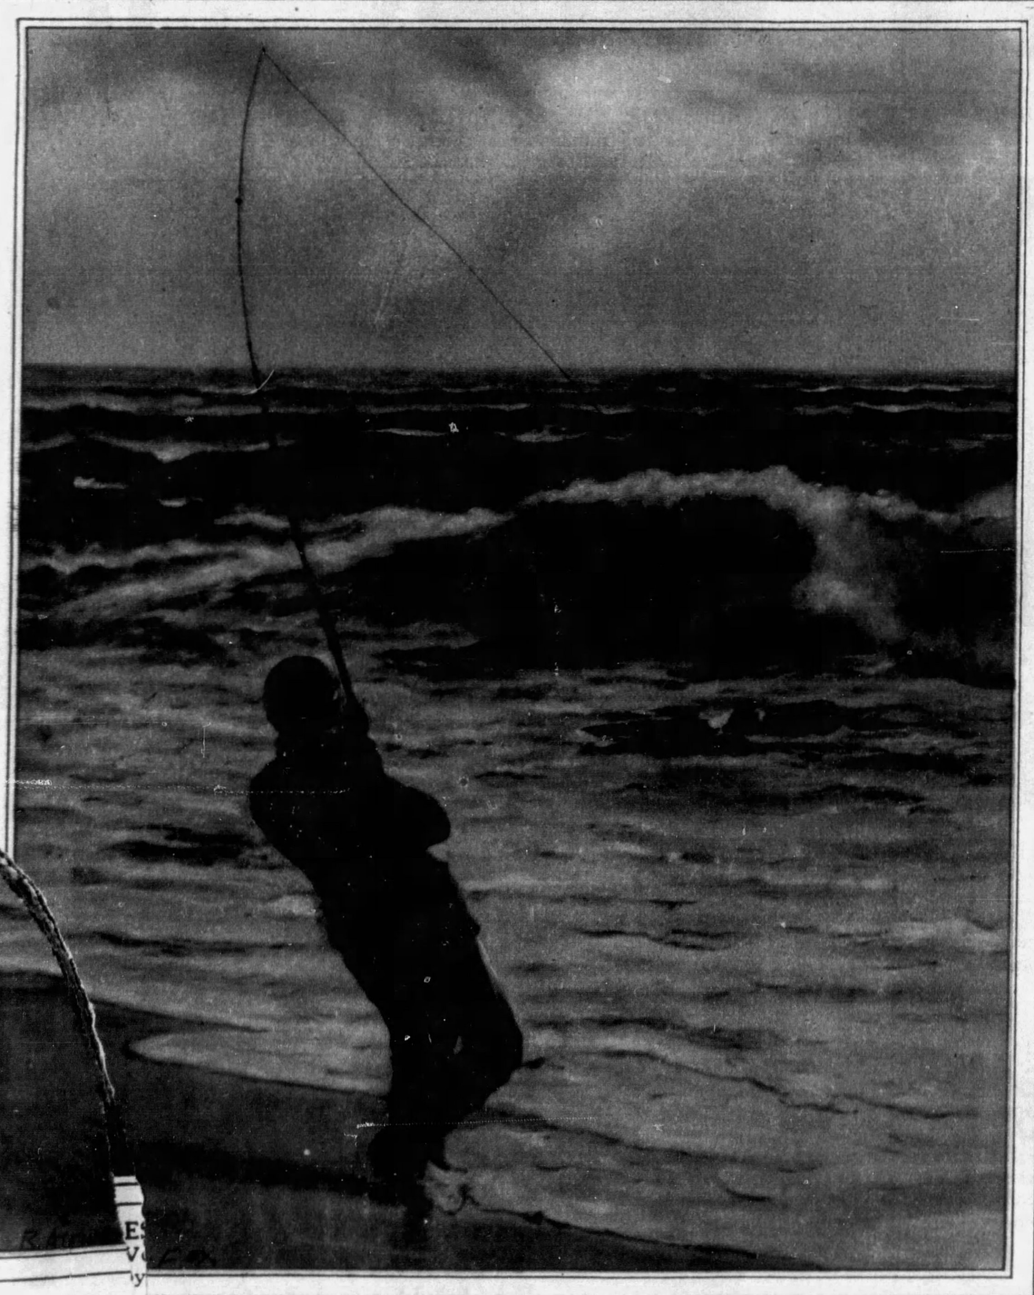
DAINTIEST OF TEAS



"WATERFRONT."
By Van Ness Greene.
Rising like distant peaks are the many towers of Manhattan, making an awe-inspiring sight to the strangers arriving by ship from foreign parts. The artist, a Philadelphian, has exhibited at many exhibitions in recent years.

(The paintings on this page are from the private collection of Harry O. Eichleay.)

"SURF FISHING."
By R. Atkinson Fox.
Along both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts anglers find surf fishing an exhilarating and exciting sport. The New Jersey shore is patronized to a large extent by surf fishers who aim to catch channel bass and black drum, but often hook small sharks and skates. Fox has painted many sporting scenes and studies of domestic and wild animals.

"THE LOCOMOTIVE ENGINEER".
By H. M. Brett.
Years of experience and careful handling of his charge is expressed in the face of this railroad engineer. The engineer must be clear-eyed, clear- brained and ever alert. As the train plunges through the night, the passengers feel secure with such a man at the throttle.
